

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

GENTLEMEN OF THE ASSEMBLY:

For the honor you have this day conferred, by selecting me to preside over your deliberations, I cannot but return my heartfelt and sincere thanks.

In the proper discharge of the duties of Speaker of this Assembly, my warmest and best endeavors shall be exerted. Many and perplexing are its difficulties, yet with your friendly assistance and hearty co-operation in maintaining that high and dignified conduct suited to our deliberations, I am pleased to indulge the hope we shall be enabled to transact the business entrusted to our charge creditably to ourselves, and in a manner best calculated to promote the interest of the State. The recent acquisition of California, her vast expanse of territory, her mixed population, various in their habits and languages, unaccustomed, many of them, to our laws and institutions, added to her peculiar and sometimes locally adverse interests, all tend to render good and wholesome legislation extremely difficult; so much the more, therefore, should we strive in our united efforts, to avoid the wrong so much complained of—to adopt the right so anxiously expected by the people at our hands. Then, and then alone, shall we have discharged our duty, and then shall we be enabled to return to an approving constituency, greeting us as good and faithful servants.

Gentlemen, I am pleased to believe the members of this Assembly competent to the task, and zealous for its proper accomplishment.

GOVERNOR'S ANNUAL MESSAGE.

Fellow Citizens of the Senate and Assembly :

Under the guidance and protecting care of that Divine Goodness, to whom it is our duty to address devout gratitude for the past, as well as fervent supplication for the future, you, the immediate representatives of the people, have convened, and under the most favorable auspices, are about to commence your legislative labors. The constitutional duty again devolves upon me of communicating with you, by message, setting forth "the condition of the State," and commending to your favorable consideration such measures as I may "deem expedient."

In the performance of this important duty, at the commencement of a new term of office, I am filled with emotions of gratitude to the people, whose generous preference has again called me to preside over the destinies of this young State, and to that gracious Providence under whose kindly protection, we have advanced so rapidly in the paths of progress and of peace.

The obligations which the confidence of a free and intelligent people imposes, will be acknowledged, on my part, by an anxious desire and continued effort to discharge my public duties in accordance with my convictions of right and justice, and in strict compliance with the constitution and laws.

On the occasion of your assembling, permit me to congratulate you upon the healthy and prosperous condition of the country. During the year just closed, Divine Providence, ever watchful over the affairs of men and nations, has been pleased to smile upon our favored State, and to bless us with health within our borders, and plenty in our habitations. The mineral wealth of our mountains continues to be the admiration and wonder of the world—the products of our valleys, already the pride and boast of our own people, promise, in a few short years, under the hand of careful culture, to more than equal the wants of California; our commerce greatly expanded and diversified, has been much more than remunerative; in short, all the sources of wealth have been greatly augmented by the enterprise and well directed efforts of our people.

In compliance with constitutional requirement, and with a view to facilitate your legislative labors, correct information, in relation to the condition of the State, will be given in as brief a space as possible; and measures deemed important to California, and the welfare of the whole people, commended to your favorable consideration.

The existing debt of the State on the 20th day of December, 1853, is set forth as follows, in the report of the Comptroller of State :

CIVIL DEBT.

Amount of 3 per cent. Bonds outstanding,	-	$4,075 00
" interest on same to date,	-	5,501 25
" 7 per cent. Bonds of 1851,	-	-	$9,576 25
" " " 1852,	-	-	384,000 00
" State Prison Bonds, Act of 1853,	-	-	1,422,000 00
" Comptroller's Warrants outstanding,	-	-	100,000 00
			161,619 80
Total amount of civil indebtedness,	-	-	$2,077,196 05
Amount of War debt, principal and interest,	-	-	924,259 66
Total debt of the State, exclusive of the School Fund,			$3,001,455 70

And if we include the $468,360 received for School Warrants, then it is $3,464,815 70. On the amount received for School Land Warrants, the State is pledged for the payment of an annual interest of seven per cent. to the School Fund; but the principal is not regarded as legitimately a debt of the State, because realized from sales made of her own property, and the interest money which has accrued, as on the balance of the Civil Debt, is not included, because the amount is now in the Treasury. Besides this, the debt contracted for Indian expeditions, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $924,259 65, should be regarded rather as an apparent than actual indebtedness, and one which Congress is bound, sooner or later, to assume—the General Government having failed to extend to our people the protection guarantied by the Constitution of the United States.

The adjusted indebtedness of the State on the 31st of December, 1851, as reported by the Comptroller, amounted to $1,242,339 74, as follows :

Total amount of adjusted Civil indebtedness,	-	$796,963 95
“ “ War debt,	-	445,375 79
		<hr/> $1,242,339 74

It is deemed proper, in this connection, to explain the causes of the apparent increase of State indebtedness within the last two years, and in doing so it may be necessary to enter more into detail than has heretofore been the custom of the Executive.

Before recapitulating the several items and dates necessary to a correct understanding of the subject, I may be allowed to remark, that the responsibility, whatever it may be, rests entirely with those agents of the State who contracted the debts, and not upon those who, subsequently, in obedience to law, merely adjusted and issued warrants upon the Treasury in payment of them. With the latter, there was certainly no discretionary power; whether it existed with the former, it is not necessary for me now to inquire. The faith of the State had been pledged for indebtedness incurred, and without actual repudiation, there was no other course to be pursued by the present agents of the State than to issue warrants on the Treasury in compliance with law.

The explanation deemed proper, will, in part, be found in statements A, B and C, herewith transmitted. (See Appendix.)

Statement A exhibits the various debts contracted prior to the 1st of January, 1852, but which were not audited by the proper officer until after that date, amounting, in the aggregate, to the sum of one million fifty-two thousand four hundred and ninety dollars and ninety-two cents.

Statement B exhibits the several amounts appropriated by the Legislature of 1852 and 1853, for special objects, having no necessary connection with the administration of the State Government, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of four hundred and thirty-six thousand, three hundred and fifty dollars and seventy eight-cents.

Statement C exhibits the expenses of the several departments of the State Government since its organization.

Amount of adjusted indebtedness on the 1st day of January, 1852. (See Comptroller's special report of January 22, 1852.)

$1,242,339 74

Amount of indebtedness incurred prior but not audited until after January 1, 1852. (See statement A.)

$1,052,490 92

Amount of actual debt on 1st January, 1852,

2,294,830 66

Amount appropriated by the Legislatures of 1852, and 1853, for special objects unconnected with the administration of the State Government. (See statement B)

• 436,850 78

Amount of actual debt on the 1st January, 1852, and special appropriations by the Legislatures of 1852 and 1853,

$2,731,181 44

Since the 1st of January, 1852, of the then adjusted debt, in the shape of three per cent. Bonds redeemed, including interest, there has been paid in coin,

$272,978 41

In seven per cent. Bonds due in 1855, and redeemed, there has been paid in coin since January 1, 1852,

77,000 00

Total amount of coin paid in the redemption of three and seven per cents. of 1850 and 1851,

$349,978 41

From the above recapitulation it will be seen that the debt of the State, incurred in defraying necessary and legitimate expenses of Government since January 1, 1852, has increased comparatively but a small amount.

The amount of coin, ($349,978 41,) applied in the redemption of Bonds since January 1, 1852, it is proper to state, was diverted, at a time when much required, from the revenues relied upon to defray the current expenses of Government, and in lieu of which it became necessary to issue Comptroller's Warrants for a greatly increased amount, the difference between $349,978 41 in cash and scrip, at eighty cents on the dollar, being $87,494 60.

The enormous rate of interest, (three per cent. per month, or thirty-six per cent. per annum,) payable on most of these bonds, rendered their early redemption a matter of great importance to the State, and it gives me sincere pleasure to be able to inform you that there are now outstanding but about four thousand dollars, of the whole amount issued.

The whole amount of three per cent. bonds originally issued was $290,000, upon which interest to the amount of $182,268 50, has been paid, exclusive of the $5,501 25, due on the $4,075 00, still outstanding.

The receipts and expenditures for the ensuing fiscal year are estimated by the Comptroller, as follows:

Receipts,	$780,000 00
Expenditures,	960,000 00

The assessment returns have been received from twenty-seven counties. Appraised amount of real and personal property $91,338,175. The remaining eight counties will increase the assessment to at least $1,000,000, being an increase, compared with 1852, of $40,783,144.

Amount of revenue on an assessment of $100,000,000 at sixty cents on each $100 of valuation,	$600,000 00
Amount of Foreign Miners' Tax,	125,000 00
Poll Tax,	60,000 00
Consigned Goods,	50,000 00
Auction Duties,	75,000 00
Passenger Tax,	26,000 00
Library Fund,	2,000 00
Possessory Claims,	2,000 00
Total amount,	$940,000 00
Deduct for delinquencies and cost of collection,	160,000 00
Nett amount of revenue,	$780,000 00

From a close investigation of the subject, I am inclined to believe, that the estimated receipts are at least one hundred thousand less than will actually be collected before the close of the present fiscal year, and have every reason to expect that the total receipts will vary but little from eight hundred and eighty thousand dollars.

The cash receipts into the General Fund from December 27, 1853, to April 15, 1854, inclusive, are estimated by the Comptroller of State at one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars, which sum, together with the amount realized in cash from the sales of property made by the city of San Francisco, on the 26th of December, 1853, presumed to be about two hundred thousand dollars—can be applied in payment of accruing expenses of Government.

To provide the amount of means necessary for the speedy payment of the existing Civil Debt, I recommended, at the commencement of the last session of the Legislature, an Extension of the Water Front, and the sale of the State's interest in all property within the limits of the city of San Francisco.

The Legislature having adjourned, however, without passing a law authorizing the extension, as then recommended, I deem it my duty, again to invite attention to the question, and to implore you to give to the subject early and favorable consideration.

Every consideration of honor, patriotism, and fidelity to our constituents, imperiously calls upon us, at this time to apply all the means, legitimately at our disposal, in payment of the existing State debt.

Since the adjournment of the Legislature the question of Extension has been discussed, and examined in all its bearings, and it gives me pleasure to assure you that the project has now, comparatively, few opponents.

That the title to this property is in the State of California, and that her agents alone have power to dispose of it, seems now to be generally conceded. Indeed, it cannot be even plausibly questioned, that the moment the right of sovereignty vested in the United States, they took upon themselves merely the right to hold the municipal eminent domain in trust for such new States, as might be organized with in the acquired territory; and upon their admission into the Union, to invest them with it, to the same extent and in all respects, as the other States of the Confederacy.

The Supreme Court of the United States, at its January term, in the year 1845, declared that "The power of Congress over navigation and its power to make all needful rules and regulations, for the sale and disposition of the public lands, conferred no power to grant lands, below high-water mark, in any State admitted into the Union; that the shores of all navigable waters, and the soil under them were not granted by the Constitution, but were reserved by the States respectively, and that the new States have the same rights, sovereignty and jurisdiction as the original States." It cannot therefore, be doubted, that on the admission of California into the Union, the exclusive right to dispose of all the lands below "high-water mark" within her limits passed to the State.

The Supreme and Circuit Courts of the United States, it may be proper here to remark, have also well settled the principle that no separate or exclusive right, adverse to the sovereign and public right, is acquired by a city or town to the tide-waters or the soil under them, by virtue of an Act of the Legislature, merely extending the limits of such town or city over such waters. An Act extending the bounds of a city or town, over a bay, merely for the purpose of jurisdiction, is no evidence of a grant of property in the "soil covered by water." Numerous decisions could be here cited in support of this position, but it is not deemed necessary.

Permit me, in this connection, however, to suggest, that in carrying into effect the recommendation to extend the Water Front of the city of San Francisco, it would be advisable to provide for the appointment of a Board of Commissioners, with such checks and limitations as may be necessary, and that without prescribing an arbitrary line, authority be given them to extend at such points, and to such distance, as may, after careful examination, be deemed proper and expedient; provided, that at no point shall the extension exceed a given number of feet; and further, that the said Board be required to provide for as many slips, to be kept free and unobstructed, as may be necessary for the wants and requirements of commerce.

It is believed that extension can be made at various points, and in such manner as will not only cause no injury to the harbor, but result in positive benefit. By providing proper slips to be kept open and unobstructed for the convenience of commerce, sufficient drainage can be obtained, and the expense and inconvenience incident to a change of the present grade of the city avoided.

The practicability of this measure cannot be questioned, and the fact that from a judicious sale of the property within the limits of the proposed extension, sufficient means will be realized to pay the State debt, and relieve our people from the burthen of onerous taxation, must commend it to the favorable consideration of the Representatives of the people. And, as these facts are better understood and appreciated by the citizens of San Francisco, there can be no doubt that they will hail the extension, not only as an act beneficial to themselves, but as imperiously demanded by the future wants and interests of the great and populous emporium of the Pacific.

The consummation of the measure of extension, in the manner contemplated, in truth, must result directly to the advantage of the residents of the city of San Francisco, and, indirectly, benefit the whole people of the State.

The limited space now occupied by the business portion of the city, demands extension for the accommodation of her present commerce, which is now in its infancy, and small, indeed, compared with that which, we have every reason to believe will, at no remote period, be centered in the harbor of San Francisco. To assume that that commerce can be conveniently, or advantageously, transacted within the present contracted limits, or that it will recede from, rather than encroach upon the water, is alike contrary to well matured public opinion and past experience.

The sale, from time to time, as deemed expedient, of such an amount of water property, adapted as it is to the wants and requirements of commerce, must exercise a wholesome influence in regulating rent-charges, which, in the increased price of goods, are eventually paid by consumers throughout the State.

The harbor of San Francisco, from its position and capacity, is of more importance to the commerce of the world than any other within our confederacy, and it is therefore hoped, that Congress, during the present session, will adopt the necessary measures to protect and render it perfectly secure.

By an Act of the Legislature, approved March 26th, 1851, property owned by the State, known as the "Beach and Water Lot property, was released to the city of San Francisco, for the term of ninety-nine years, the city to pay into the State Treasury twenty-five per cent. upon all moneys arising from the disposition made of the property after the passage of the Act. On the first day of May, 1851, another Act was passed, relinquishing to the city certain Beach and Water Lot property, upon the express condition that certain titles which had been theretofore granted by Justices of the Peace, should be confirmed. The requirement to confirm grants made by Justices of the Peace, up to March 12th, 1853, the date of the repeal of the Act of May 1st, 1851, had been wholly neglected, and up to the 25th December, 1853, comparatively but a small sum had been paid into the State Treasury under the provisions of the second section of the Act of March 26, 1851.

I would therefore recommend that the Act approved May 18, 1853, entitled "An Act to provide for the sale of the interest of the State of California in the property within the water front of the city of San Francisco, as defined in and by the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the disposition of certain property of the State of California," passed March 26, 1851, be so modified as to authorize the Board of Commissioners appointed under the Act aforesaid, to dispose of the State's remaining interest in said property, in such manner and at such times as they may deem proper and expedient.

The right of the State to dispose of the reversionary interest in the property released to the city by Act of 26th March, 1851, it is believed, cannot be questioned, and although owing to the fact that the property has been released to the city for a long term of years, the sum realized on each lot may be small, in the aggregate it will constitute an important item in meeting demands upon the State Treasury.

Persons who have purchased heretofore from the City of San Francisco, in good faith, cannot reasonably object to the sale, because by obtaining the State's remaining interest, a perfect title to their property may be acquired. On the contrary, it is presumed that they will eagerly embrace the opportunity thus offered, of extinguishing an interest adverse to their own, and which each year increases in importance, while the value of their own tenure is being as constantly decreased.

In addition to the amount derivable from the sale of lots within the limits of the proposed extension, the Government Reserves, and the State's remaining interest in the property released to the city, and sold in accordance with the provisions of the Act of March 26th, 1851, the sum of $298,437 accrues to the State as her portion of the amount realized from sales made by the city, of this description of property, on the 26th day of December, 1853. Add to the above, the $47,475, realized from sales of property made by the State Commissioners, and we have the sum of $771,912, of which amount, at least $650,000 can be applied, as received, in part payment of the Civil Debt of the State.

From all these sources the amount which will be realized, it is confidently believed, cannot be less than SEVEN MILLIONS OF DOLLARS, an amount sufficient to pay the entire debt of the State, civil and war, and leave in the Treasury a balance of more than THREE AND A HALF MILLIONS.

Before dismissing the subject, I would remark, that it may not be necessary, or advisable, to sell immediately the whole of the property within the proposed extension, but only so much as may be required to liquidate the existing State Debt; leaving the surplus to be disposed of as the future wants of the State may demand.

If, however, the prosperity of the city, and her rapidly increasing commerce, should demand the immediate sale of the whole of the property, I would respectfully suggest that the balance derived, after the payment of the Public Debt be invested in the United States six per cent. Bonds. The annual interest on the surplus of three and a half millions, as estimated, would, at six per cent., amount to $210,000.

This sum judiciously expended annually for necessary public works, at San Francisco: in removing obstacles to the safe navigation of our rivers above ports of entry, and in improving public highways, and building bridges where necessary for the public convenience throughout the State, in a few years, would effect a mighty change in the condition of California.

Judicious legislation alone is now wanting to secure all that is claimed, and in the premises, more than realise the expectations of our common constituents.

To meet the accruing interest on the Civil Debt, the sum of one hundred and sixty-five thousand eight hundred and fifty-five dollars and twenty cents, must each year, until the debt shall have been paid, be collected in cash from the people of the State.

The amount of interest accruing annually on the War Debt is $67,495 69, which added to the interest on the Civil Debt, amounts to the sum of $233,350 89.

With the ample resources legitimately within your reach, and to which I have directed your attention, it is hoped that you will, without unnecessary delay, adopt measures to secure the liquidation of the entire debt, as rapidly as the outstanding bonds of the State can be advantageously called in and cancelled.

With sufficient funds in the Treasury, the indebtedness of the State, it is believed, can be discharged on favorable terms by advertising for "sealed proposals for the surrender of bonds," in the manner prescribed in the ninth section of the Funding Act of 1852, and thus relieve the people from the annual payment of an onerous special tax.

Statement C, which is herewith transmitted, has been compiled with much care, and exhibits the important fact, that during the past four years, the average annual expenditures of the several Departments, collectively, and which includes the legitimate expenses of the State Government, have been five hundred and fifty-three thousand nine hundred and sixty-three dollars and ninety cents.

The receipts in the Treasury for the fiscal year, ending June 30th, 1854, are estimated at $780,000; being an excess of $226,000 over the average annual expenditures as exhibited by statement C.

These facts prove conclusively that by the adoption of the proposed reforms, the Government will be enabled to meet, and in cash, accruing demands on the Treasury, and justify a great reduction of the taxation now bearing so heavily on the people.

In my annual message, at the commencement of the last session, the attention of the Legislature was invited to the importance of making an efficient effort to obtain from the General Government, the entire amount of the "Civil Fund," the collection of which was begun in the early part of the year 1847; and a few days before the close of the session, I transmitted important papers in relation to the disposition made of this fund, [see document No. 53, appended to Senate Journal,] and again urged the Legislature to give the subject thorough investigation, and to transmit, without delay, the result of their researches to our delegation in Congress.

This fund, amounting to more than one million dollars, rightfully belongs to the State of California, and would not, it is confidently believed, be longer withheld, if all the important facts connected with its collection and disbursement were carefully prepared and forwarded to Congress.

The condition of California at the time when the collection of this fund commenced, it may be proper here to remark, was indeed peculiar. Congress had failed to legislate for the country, and the President of the United States and Secretary of the Treasury, it is understood, had both, in official communications, admitted the want of power in the proper department of the Government to collect revenue in California; and, the officers in command on the Pacific coast, could not, under their instructions, permit foreign goods to be landed without the duties having been first paid, though there was at the time a pressing demand for them in the country.

In the absence, however, of law on the subject, the civil governor assumed the responsibility, of permitting the goods to be landed, and of receiving the amount of duties fixed by the Act of 1846; and the people of California, controlled by their necessities, though without a voice in the councils of the nation, quietly acquiesced in this novel exercise of the taxing power.

This fund, collected from the people of California before the revenue laws of the United States were extended over the country—collected, in fact, without authority of law, and long before we were allowed representation at Washington, it is contended, belongs to the State of California, and should at once be refunded. The subject is commended to your consideration with the hope that an expression of opinion on the question, as well as the important facts in the case, will be carefully prepared and forwarded to our delegation in Congress.

The great necessity and importance of providing means to liquidate, and as speedily as possible, the civil debt of the State, having been urged upon your early consideration, and measures recommended which, if adopted, in a comparatively short period of time, will enable the agents of the State to effect that desirable object, permit me to recommend co-operation on the part of the Legislature, with our delegation in Congress, in securing the assumption by the General Government, in some form, of the existing war debt, which now amounts to the sum of $924,259 65.

No provision has, it is true, been made for the payment of the accruing interest on the war debt, but the State, by solemn acts of legislation, stands pledged for the payment of the whole amount, principal and interest.

The present, for various reasons, is regarded as a propitious time to demand justice in the premises, at the hands of the General Government. In addition to the fact that there is now a large amount of surplus money in the treasury of the nation, and the bright promise of future increase, the immense importance of the Pacific country to the commerce, not only of the Atlantic States but of the whole eastern world—an importance now universally conceded—cannot fail, it is conceived, to commend our rights and interests to the immediate consideration of the General Government.

There are, however, many other and cogent reasons too, why the General Government should promptly not only assume the entire war debt, principal and interest, but also refund the whole amount of the civil fund, except, perhaps, the sum expended in defraying the expenses of the Constitutional Convention, held at Monterey in September and October, 1849.

The important fact that California contributes annually, more to the national treasury, in proportion to population, than any other State in the confederacy, certainly entitles her to increased consideration in making disbursements from the national coffers.

The amount of revenue collected at the several ports within the State during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1853, exceeds two millions three hundred and fifty thousand dollars, an amount equal to one-sixteenth of the whole sum heretofore annually required to defray the expenses of the national government. And, the receipts of the first quarter have been so much increased as to warrant the belief that the present fiscal year the revenue collected at the different ports in California must considerably exceed three millions, being equal to an annual tax of eleven dollars and thirty-four cents upon each man, woman and child, within the limits of California. The amount thus indirectly collected in the other States of the Union, averages only two dollars and thirteen cents to each man, woman and child.

It will be seen from the report of the Comptroller of State, that he estimates that the expenditures for the fiscal year ending the 30th day of June, 1854, at nine hundred and sixty thousand four hundred and fifty dollars and fifty-one cents. This estimate, though regarded as sufficiently high, is in the aggregate, only equal to one-third the amount annually contributed by the people of California for the support of the national government, and is an average tax of only three dollars and sixty-three cents on each man, woman and child within the State. Whilst State taxation is the subject of general complaint, as being exorbitant and oppressive on our people, not a murmur is heard in relation to the indirect exactions of the General Government, though three-fold greater than the amount collected for State purposes.

This mode of taxation, although perhaps not so apparent as that which is more direct and collected for the purposes of State Government, is equally onerous and oppressive. Great as is the amount thus annually exacted from the hard earnings of our people for the support of the General Government, they have acquiesced in its collection without a murmur, and now feel that they have a claim to increased consideration on the part of Congress. Again it should be remembered, in the consideration of the claims which we present, that California, though the youngest of the sovereign states, annually adds to the wealth of the nation about eighty-two millions of dollars in gold dust, being considerably more than one half of the whole sum contributed by the other states.

During the year 1852, the total amount of exports from the other thirty states was but $154,931,147, as follows:

Cotton,	-	-	-	-	$87,965,732
Breadstuffs,	-	-	-	-	25,857,027

These important facts obtained from official records, and reliable sources, if so presented as to induce examination of the whole subject, cannot fail, it is believed, to secure for the claims of California the favorable consideration of Congress.

In view, however, of the very many subjects, which must necessarily engage a great portion of the time and labor of our Delegation in Congress, I feel called upon to say, that I regard it as almost impossible for them to make to individual members of the two Houses of Congress the explanations requisite to a correct understanding of the question, and to remove the onerous impression created by incorrect statements, heretofore made in relation to Indian difficulties in California; and, unless full and correct information be given, and effort made to induce investigation on the part of those charged with the duty of deciding upon its merits, we can scarcely hope that our claim will be properly appreciated and favorable action secured.

The subject is, therefore, earnestly, but respectfully commended to your careful consideration, with the hope that you will devise an efficient plan of co-operation with our Delegation in Congress.

With a view to lessen the expenditures of Government, I respectfully renew and earnestly invoke your attention to the recommendations made in my last annual message, in relation to amendments to the Constitution of the State, and now suggest two others, which I regard as highly important.

The first, in order that the instrument may the more perfectly conform to the spirit of our popular form of government; the second, as conducive of simplicity and economy in the administration of its affairs.

The second section of article tenth, which provides for the calling of a Convention as the mode of "revising or changing the entire Constitution," contains no provision requiring the Convention, after closing its labors, to submit the Constitution framed, to a vote of the people of the State, at a general election.

This is certainly a radical defect, and one which should be remedied, before clothing any body of men with the power to revise or change the entire Constitution.

The Constitution, after having been framed and adopted by a Convention, permit me here to suggest, should be placed within the reach of every voter, and ample time given to examine, carefully, its principles, its provisions and its limitations, before called upon by vote, to sanction and give effect to it as fundamental and paramount law. I therefore respectfully recommend that this section be so amended as to require the Convention to submit the Constitution, after framed, to a vote of the people; the same to have no effect until adopted by a majority of the legal voters of the State, at a general election.

The twenty-first section of the eleventh article of the Constitution, provides that "all laws, decrees, regulations and provisions, which from their nature require publication shall be published in English and Spanish."

This section should be so far modified as to allow the Legislature a discretionary power as to what "laws, decrees, regulations and provisions" shall be translated and printed in the Spanish language.

The necessity of such modification is apparent from the fact that the section has heretofore, in practice, been almost wholly disregarded. And, although this requirement has been but partially complied with, so great has been the expense and inconvenience arising therefrom, that its disregard has been a matter of no surprise, but has rather been considered as the demand of necessity. In fact, had this provision been fully complied with—had all the "laws, decrees, regulations and provisions" now printed in English, been also published in Spanish, the printing account, now the subject of much complaint, would have been greatly increased in amount, to say nothing of the expense of translation which must have been thereby incurred.

In engrafting on the Constitution these highly important amendments, I recommend the mode prescribed in the first section of the tenth article of that instrument. By adopting this mode of amendment, the expense of a Convention, and the excitement incident, will be avoided, and the required changes to free the Constitution of objectionable features, secured in a shorter period of time than by the other mode provided in the second section of the same article.

The remaining reforms recommended in my last annual message, with the exception of those finally disposed of by the last Legislature, are also again recommended to your favorable consideration.

By adopting the reforms proposed, it is believed that an annual saving will be effected to the State of three hundred and seventy-one thousand seven hundred dollars, as follows, viz:

Surveyor-General,	$2,000
Superintendent of Public Instruction,	4,500
Biennial sessions,	171,000
Reduction of pay to eight dollars per day; mileage one-half,	110,000
Limiting session to ninety days,	43,200
Reducing transportation of prisoners from one dollar to fifty cents per mile,	8,000
Governor's salary to $6,000,	4,000
Salary of Supreme Court Judges to $6,000,	12,000
Reducing number of District Judges from eleven to eight, about	12,000
Salary of District Attorney of San Francisco,	5,000
	$371,700

A general curtailment of legislative expenditures, and especially that portion of them incident to the clerical duties performed, would also seem to be absolutely necessary.

The enormous sum of one hundred and eighty-two thousand four hundred and twenty-seven dollars and forty-three cents has been paid for clerk hire and to the officers of the two Houses, during the sessions of 1852 and 1853. The amount paid last session to officers and clerks alone, was one hundred and six thousand and ninety-three dollars and seventy cents. It is true, that the Executive has no control over the action of either House, so far as the employment of clerks and officers is concerned, and that both in this matter, are as independent of the Governor as they are of each other; but as we have recently seen an effort made to hold the Executive responsible for every expenditure of public money, I may be permitted to direct your attention to the subject, and invoke your co-operation in the work of reform, so necessary to the preservation of State Credit.

The people of California not only anticipate that provision will be made during the present session for the payment of the existing State debt, but they also expect that you will, by reducing the salaries of office generally, so far lessen the expenditures of government that they will not, as heretofore, exceed the receipts into the Treasury, and that hereafter it may not be necessary to seek a market for the sale of depreciated evidences of State indebtedness. The great importance of these measures I trust, will secure your early and favorable action.

In connection with these suggestions, relative to economy and reform, permit me to remind you of the fact, that the Constitution restricts the action of the Executive in these matters, to a simple recommendation. I have now, therefore, exhausted my power. I have performed all, in the premises, authorized by the Constitution, and should my recommendations not meet with your approval, I hope some other equally efficient plan will be adopted for the relief of the State. Recommendations similar to those now urged were presented for the consideration of the last Legislature; but most of them were passed over, unheeded or neglected, and great dissatisfaction has, during the year, been manifested by our common constituents, who confidently expected that a thorough system of reform would be matured and adopted, and a consequent reduction of taxation justified.

I feel called upon to again direct your attention to our Revenue Laws, complaints against some portions of which, especially the license system, have reached me during the recess, and the question of taxation is, therefore, presented as one deserving of careful examination. In the revision of the system, I am aware that circumstances must, to some extent, control your action, but the well settled principles that taxation shall not be burthensome—that a greater amount shall not be levied than is required to defray the expenses of an economically administered Government—that it shall not be imposed to protect one interest at the expense of another; and that it shall be so assessed, as to operate as equally and uniformly upon all as possible, ought not, in any degree, be departed from in your legislation on the subject.

The agricultural interests of California, though but partially developed, is now one of conceded importance, and should as far as it can, consistently with the Constitution, be fostered by judicious legislation. The development of our agricultural resources, it is true, cannot be said to have advanced as rapidly as other of the great interests of the State. But, in view of the many and formidable existing obstacles to its rapid development, it is a matter of surprise that so large a portion of our enterprising citizens have engaged in tilling the soil, and that so many valuable improvements have already been made.

The greatest obstacles to the rapid improvement of the country, I would here remark, are to be found in the unsettled condition of land titles, and the fact that the boundaries of but few of the numerous grants throughout the State, have been defined, by proper authority. Until the titles to these grants shall have been settled and their boundaries accurately ascertained by actual survey, errors will be committed by settlers in locating pre-emption claims.

And, as it is now more than probable that many years must elapse before these obstacles can be removed, by the final settlement of these perplexing questions, judicious legislation for the protection of the bona fide settler, would seem, in justice to the enterprising and useful portion of our people, to be absolutely necessary, just and proper.

Entertaining the opinion, that in all cases where the location has been made in good faith by the settler, under the impression that there exists no title adverse to that of the General Government, just compensation should be allowed him for all necessary and substantial improvements, in case of ejectment, it is deemed a duty to commend the subject to your favorable consideration.

Before dismissing the question, however, it may be proper to add, that most of the States of the Confederacy has sanctioned the principle by legislating for the protection of the actual settler.

For details your attention is respectfully directed to the Revised Statutes of Illinois, page 211. Hutchinson's Mississippi Code, page 856. Revised Statutes of Texas, pages 969 and 970. Clay's Digest of the Laws of Alabama, pages 320 and 321. Thompson's Digest of the Laws of Florida, page 187. Revised Statutes of Ohio, pages 606 and 696. Revised Statutes of Indiana, page 800. Pennsylvania Digest by Dunlap, page 969. Revised Statutes of Missouri, pages 444 and 445.

With a view to the further encouragement of agriculturalists, and as an inducement to diversity of pursuits among the people of the State, I would respectfully call your attention to the propriety of again exerting the influence of the Legislature in an effort to obtain the passage of a law by Congress donating the public domain in California, in limited quantities, to actual settlers, as in Oregon.

There certainly exists no good reason why the Government should, in California, require from the settler one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and in Oregon, donate it free of charge.

The California overland emigrant travels about the same number of miles, and two-thirds of the whole distance over the same road; he encounters the same difficulties and dangers; endures similar privations and hardships; and is, moreover, subject to like expenses and sacrifices in making his arrangements at home, as well as losses on the journey.

The discrimination made by the General Government in this matter, adverse to the interests of the settler in California, is therefore regarded as exceedingly unwise, if not unjust, and I trust will be re-considered by the present Congress, and the public domain in California, as in Oregon, donated in small tracts to actual settlers.

But if Congress cannot be induced to change its policy, and donate the public domain to settlers in California, and if the present Act is to remain in force, it certainly ought to be so amended as to extend, at least another year, the time allowed for pre-emption upon unsurveyed lands. If this amendment be not made, and pre-emptions upon unsurveyed lands prohibited after March next, the growth and improvement of the State must be greatly retarded, and the interests of our people very injuriously affected.

By the Act of Congress, approved September 28, 1850, entitled "An Act to enable the State of Arkansas and other States to reclaim swamp lands within their limits," it is provided "that to enable the State of Arkansas, and other States, to construct the necessary levees and drains, to reclaim swamp and overflowed lands therein, the whole of these swamp and overflowed lands, made unfit thereby for cultivation, which shall remain unsold at the passage of this Act, shall be and the same are hereby granted to said States."

The second section of the Act requires the Secretary of the Interior to make out a list of the lands and a patent therefor, and transmit them to the Governors of the several States interested. Also, that the proceeds of the sale of said lands shall be applied exclusively, as far as necessary, to reclaim such lands by means of levees and drains.

The third section provides that, "When the greater part of a legal subdivision of land is wet and unfit for cultivation, it shall be included in the list; but when a greater part of a sub-division is not of that character the whole shall be excluded."

The fourth and last section of the Act, makes its provisions applicable to all other States in which swamp and overflowed lands may be situated.

The Act is construed to include "all lands subject to periodical overflow by the influx and currents from the rivers." Lands of this description in the valley of the Mississippi pass by this grant, even though they may be cultivated for a part of the year without levee or drain.

But as they require such protection for permanent and profitable cultivation, they come within the spirit and purview of the Act, and pass to the States in which they lie, by virtue of its provisions.

The Act will doubtless receive the same construction, when its provisions shall be applied to the swamp lands in the State of California. By it, the State, it is believed, acquires absolute control of the overflowed valleys of the many streams within her limits, except so far as they may be held by private individuals.

To avail ourselves of the benefit of this Act, as suggested in my last annual message, "steps should be taken and an economical plan of operations devised, to effect the early reclamation of the lands thereby donated. Hundreds of our enterprising citizens have already located on these lands, and at considerable expense and labor, made valuable improvements thereon. Justice and sound policy require that they should be secured in their possessions on the most reasonable terms. The more liberal the terms, the more certain and prompt will be their reclamation and improvement. Their speedy settlement and cultivation is a matter of great moment to the State, because it will add immensely to the amount of taxable property; and thus, of course, greatly increase our revenue. A partial knowledge of the location of these lands, as well as careful reflection, have satisfied me that their reclamation can be best effected by donating them to actual settlers, in fixed quantities, upon the same terms that we have received them from the General Government. The State must either reclaim each tract as sold, or devise a general plan of operations, which, by means of drains or levees, will reclaim the whole. Such a work will not only require years of labor, and much more treasure than will ever be realized from their sale, but will delay their improvement and greatly retard the prosperity of the State. I, therefore, recommend the passage of an Act donating these lands to actual settlers, in quantities not exceeding three hundred and twenty acres, if such limitation be considered judicious, as a means of reclamation, upon condition that the settler shall defray the expense of selection, and within a stated period reclaim the land occupied; the land to be subject to taxation from and after the day of location."

I still adhere to the opinion expressed in my last annual message, that the "sale or lease of the mineral lands by the General Government, would exert a blighting influence upon the advancing prosperity of our growing State, and paralyze the energies of the enterprising body of men now engaged in developing the mineral resources of California. At present there are no exactions upon labor in the mines, and the reasons are, indeed, numerous and cogent why the National Government, in common justice, should impose no additional exactions upon the industry and enterprise of our people, or pursue a course of policy favored by none except those interested in the establishment of powerful monopolies, against the domination of which Government should assiduously guard.

The Legislature of 1852, it will be remembered, protested against the policy of locating the Indians within the State upon reservations of land set apart for that purpose; and that the several treaties made by the Indian Commissioners in the year 1851 and 1852, in each of which, it is believed, provision was made for a reservation of land, were all unanimously rejected by the United States Senate.

The action of the Senate was regarded by the authorities and people of California as a definite settlement of the question, rendering further action on the subject, on their part, unnecessary. But it would now seem that we were mistaken—that the wishes of the people of the State, as expressed by the Legislature of 1852, are to be disregarded, and the wise and humane policy, adopted nearly half a century ago, of locating the Indians without the limits of Sovereign States, and distant from white population, so far as California is concerned at least, is to be abandoned. The Superintendent of Indian Affairs in California, acting under a law of Congress, passed at the last session, which authorizes him to locate the various tribes, either within the State or on territory without its limits, is said now to be engaged in collecting them together with a design of locating them permanently at several points within the State. In order the more fully to understand the authority on which is based the present and contemplated action of the Superintendent of Indian Affairs, I subjoin an extract from the law of Congress, passed March 3, 1853, entitled "An Act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various tribes for the year ending June 30, 1854," viz:

"That the President of the United States, if, upon examination, he shall approve of the plan hereafter provided for the protection of the Indians" be, and he is hereby authorized to make five military reservations from the public domain in the State of California, or the territories of Utah and New Mexico, bordering on said State, for Indian purposes: Provided, That such reservations shall not contain more than twenty-five thousand acres in each: And provided further, That said reservations shall not be made upon any lands inhabited by citizens of California; and the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to defray the expense of subsisting the Indians in California, and removing them to said reservations for protection: provided further, if the foregoing plan shall be adopted by the President, the three Indian agencies in California shall be thereupon abolished."

In this connection I would also call your attention to the proviso to the sixth section of an Act entitled "An Act to provide for the survey of Public Lands in California, the granting of Pre-emption Rights therein, and for other purposes," passed March third, eighteen hundred and fifty-three.

"And provided further, That this Act shall not be construed to authorize any settlement to be made on any tract of land in the occupation or possession of any Indian tribe, or to grant any pre-emption right to the same."

It will be observed that by the above proviso it is rendered at least questionable whether the United States do not fully recognize a title in the Indians to all lands without limitation, now in their "occupation or possession," and entirely preclude the possibility of their settlement by our own citizens. Should the Indians, now in the "occupation or possession" of lands, refuse to remove and be located on the contemplated reservations, the white settler, by the above proviso, is clearly debarred from obtaining any "Pre-emption Right to lands in their occupation or possession."

Impressed with the conviction that the policy indicated by this Act, if carried into effect, cannot fail to exercise a blighting influence on the future prosperity of California, and result in great injury to the Indians themselves, I trust you will feel called upon to assert the rights of the State, and to remonstrate against its consummation.

There certainly exists at this time no good reason for a departure, with reference to California, from the settled policy of the Government.

The plan of removing the Indian tribes, and locating them without the States, was first adopted by an Act of Congress, passed March twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and four, and by the Act of June, eighteen hundred and thirty-four, a large section of country was laid off as Indian territory, to which the Indians east of the Mississippi were from time to time removed. In this way the Creeks, the Cherokees, the Chickasaws, the Seminoles and other tribes were deported.

In speaking of this wise and humane policy, President Jackson, in his second Annual Message, says :

"It gives me pleasure to announce to Congress that the benevolent policy of the Government, steadily pursued for nearly thirty years, in relation to the removal of the Indians beyond the white settlements, is approaching to a happy consummation. The consequences of a speedy removal will be important to the United States, to individual States, and to the Indians themselves. It puts an end to all possible danger of collision between the authorities of the General and State Governments on account of the Indians. It will place a dense and civilized population on large tracts of land now occupied by a few savage hunters." Before concluding he announces this policy to be an "object of much solicitude," and adds : "In the consummation of a policy originating at an early period, and steadily pursued by every Administration within the present century, so just to the States, and so generous to the Indians, the Executive feels it has a right to expect the co-operation of Congress, and of all good and disinterested men. The States, moreover, have a right to demand it. It was substantially a part of the contract which made them members of the confederacy. With Georgia this is an express contract ; with the new States, an implied one of equal obligation."

The Government of the United States, in pursuance of this policy, up to December, eighteen hundred and thirty-nine, had extinguished the Indian title to about one hundred and twenty millions of acres of land, at a cost of seventy-two millions five hundred and sixty thousand and fifty-six dollars, and up to the same date had removed more than forty thousand Indians to their new homes west of the Mississippi.

But, if there even existed doubts as to the "right of the State to demand their removal," the fact that by the proposed plan, "a mixed occupancy of the same territory by the white and red man is to be continued, thus jeopardizing the safety and happiness of both," ought definitely to settle the question, and induce the Government to abandon "a policy, the impracticability of which has been clearly demonstrated."

As important rights and interests of the State of California are involved in this question, it is hoped that it will receive, as it merits, your immediate as well as careful and dispassionate consideration, and that you will insist, that in California there shall be no departure from the Indian policy which has so long received the sanction of the Government of the United States.

The whole number of School Land Warrants issued under the Act of 1852, entitled "An Act to provide for the disposal of the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to the State by Act of Congress," is one thousand one hundred and twenty-seven. Of this number eight hundred and six authorize each holder to locate one hundred and sixty acres ; and three hundred and twenty-one authorize each holder to locate three hundred and twenty acres. In this manner two hundred and thirty-one thousand six hundred and eighty acres have been sold.

Additional legislation on this subject may be found necessary at the present session to prevent a monopoly of these lands, and preserve inviolate the pledged faith of the State, as well as to secure the lands remaining unsold ; the latter of which can be effected, either by proper amendments to the existing law, or by authorising their selection by agents of the State.

The accruing interest on the fund realized from the sale of these lands by the constitution, is set apart for the support of Common Schools, and cannot, therefore, be appropriated to any other purpose whatever. This fund is the common inheritance of the children of the State ; a fact which it is believed cannot fail to induce on your part early and decided action in the premises.

In providing for the sale of these lands it is but just to state that the Legislature was not unmindful of other important interests, and therefore fixed the price at two dollars per acre, which, in State scrip, amounted to but a trifle, if any more than is now exacted by the Government of the United States.

In framing the law so as to place this land within the reach of all desirous of engaging in the cultivation of the soil there existed another difficulty.

The Act of Congress donating the land required the State to locate not less than three hundred and twenty acres at any one point. To meet this obstacle and protect the settler, as far as possible, warrants authorizing the location of one hundred and sixty acres were issued, allowing two settlers to locate upon the same tract, in all cases necessary for their accommodation. In this manner about four hundred divisions of the amount authorized to be selected by Act of Congress have been effected, promoting materially the interests of those who were unable to purchase, or who really required no more than one hundred and sixty acres.

The report of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, (see Appendix, Doc. No. 1,) soon to be presented, will, no doubt, contain much useful information on the subject of Common School Education. The fund set apart for this very important object, the interest on which is to be appropriated annually, now amounts to $463,360, leaving 268,820 acres of land to be sold exclusive of the 26th and 36th sections of Public Lands, donated for the same purpose, by Act of Congress, approved March third, eighteen hundred and fifty-three. The amount of land to which the State is entitled under the Act of Congress of the third of March, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, as estimated at the office of the United States Surveyor General, is five million two hundred and one thousand two hundred and forty-four acres; (see Appendix D,) to which add the five hundred thousand acres appropriated by the Act of eighteen hundred and forty-one, and we have a grand total of five million seven hundred and one thousand two hundred and forty-four acres of School Lands, which, if sold at the price fixed in the existing law, viz: two dollars per acre, will yield the sum of eleven million four hundred and two thousand four hundred and eighty-eight dollars; the interest upon which, at seven per cent., would annually amount to the sum of seven hundred and ninety-eight thousand one hundred and seventy-four dollars and sixteen cents. A sum amply sufficient to sustain a system of popular education greatly superior to that of any of our sister States—a system entirely adequate to extend the blessings and bounties of knowledge to every family within the State.

The importance of an efficient system of education, embracing in its comprehensive and benevolent design the whole people, cannot be too often or too urgently pressed upon the consideration of their immediate representatives.

The education of the masses is intimately interwoven with the first of representative duties in a Government which has derived form and vitality from the intelligence of the people, and the future existence of which must depend, in no small degree, upon their capacity of judging and deciding correctly upon principles and measures vitally important to themselves and their country.

In the consideration of this interesting subject it should be borne in mind, not only that our Government is favorable to popular education, but that its fundamental principle, the sovereignty of the people, absolutely requires that every citizen should be well taught in all the principles of his duty. "Correct information," it has been well said, "is the indispensable condition of right action." By our wise Constitution we have given "civil omnipotence to the ballot-box." By our laws we must now give sound education to the voter, or by neglecting it, we may endanger the permanency of the free institutions, around which the brightest and "holiest hopes of humanity are clustered."

The Superintendent of Public Instruction, who, it is understood, has faithfully exerted his active energies in devising a plan to secure the intellectual culture of the rising generation, will, in his report, it is presumed, make such suggestions as will enable you to legislate intelligently on the subject, and to mature a system so perfect in its details as to realize fully in its great results, the expectations of those most deeply interested.

Amount of interest fund now in the Treasury, derived from the sale of School Lands,	$29,951 56

Collected under Revenue Law of 1852,	22,253 94
From escheated estates,	1,014 79

Total amount, $53,220 29

The above amount, the law provides, shall be distributed, pro rata, among the children of the State, within organized school districts, (see Appendix to Message, statement F.) Whole number of schools organized, forty-seven. Number of children returned as residing within the several school districts of the State, nine thousand three hundred and thirty-six. Number attending school, four thousand and fifty-two.

By the twelfth section of an Act of Congress, approved March 3, 1853, entitled "An Act to provide for the survey of Public Lands in California, the granting of Pre-emption Rights thereon, and for other purposes," two entire townships, or forty-six thousand and eighty acres are donated to the State for the use of a seminary of learning; said lands to be selected by the Governor, or "such persons as he may designate," and the thirteenth section of the same Act makes a "donation of ten entire sections," or six thousand four hundred acres for the "erection of the Public Buildings of the State," to be selected in a like manner. The report of the agents appointed to make the selections for the State, above referred to, it is understood, will be received in a few weeks. If selected according to instructions the lands located will command, at public sale, at any time after the selections shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Interior, not less than fifteen dollars per acre. The sum realized from this source for seminary purposes, at fifteen dollars per acre, would be $691,200; for Public Buildings, at fifteen dollars per acre, $96,000.

If judiciously disposed of, the fund realized from the sale of the lands donated by the twelfth section, will be amply sufficient to enable the State to establish two Seminaries of Learning; one south of San Francisco, and the other at some suitable point in the north.

The amount donated for Public Buildings, though entirely inadequate, will materially aid in their erection.

The agents of the State have selected the lands appurtenant to the old Mission of San Luis Rey, on which are now standing buildings valued at seventy-five thousand dollars. The church building, which contains valuable paintings and other fixtures, it is presumed, the legislature will interfere with, only so far as may be necessary for its protection, but the other building, if this point should be selected for the seminary of the south, can be made available. (See Appendix E of Message; correspondence with General Hitchcock.)

The pre-requisites of securing the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, and a patent for the lands selected, from the General Government, are Executive duties, and will all be attended to at as early a period as practicable.

A thorough revision of our Militia system, is believed to be indispensably necessary. We now have on our statute books, two Acts of the Legislature: the first passed April 10, 1850, the second May 1, 1852; the provisions of which, to some extent, conflict, and yet both are in force, unless the first should be regarded as constructively repealed by the second.

Should it become necessary to call into active service the Militia of the State, this conflict of law certainly would operate as a very serious obstacle to efficient organization. By the Act of April 10, 1850, the State was divided into Divisions and Brigades, and the Legislature the same session, under the law, elected Major and Brigadier Generals. The officers then elected, it is proper here to state, still hold their places. The Act of May 1, 1852, divides the State into seven Military Districts, the head of each to be an Aid-de-Camp with the rank of Colonel, to be appointed by the Commander-in-Chief. In this Act it is true, ample provision is made for the organization of volunteer companies, but in other important respects, it is very deficient, rendering the organization of any considerable force under it, utterly impracticable.

The State of California has heretofore been compelled, almost entirely, to protect her own citizens against Indian aggressions, and in so doing has incurred a heavy debt. The United States it is true, has had forces in the country, but numerically, totally inadequate to our protection.

In view of these facts and others not necessary here to communicate, it is believed that every possible encouragement, by legislation, should be extended to independent or volunteer companies, and a Militia system matured, sufficiently comprehensive in its details to combine the whole available force of the State when required for active service, now numbering over two hundred thousand men.

The warlike preparations now being made south of our borders, would seem to justify on our part at least, a more full compliance with the requirements of the Constitution and Laws of the United States on the subject of Military organization.

In this connection it is also proper to inform you, that the Legislature of 1852, by joint resolution, applied through our delegation in Congress to the President of the United States for "twenty thousand stands of arms, and one thousand Colt's dragoon pistols." Believing that this important matter may not have received attention, the application was by me renewed a short time since.

The arms applied for are much required at this time. In the north the Indians continue hostile, and depredations by them are of frequent recurrence. The southern portion of the State is infested with organized bands of robbers, who are so formidable as to render the execution of the laws by the proper officers exceedingly difficult and dangerous. With the arms applied for, the State could equip under the law, volunteer military organizations, at exposed points, and through them, render material aid to the civil authorities in the execution of the laws, and, in a short time, give perfect security to the people of the whole State.

It is deemed proper to inform you, that the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, though in the full enjoyment of the protection afforded by our laws, in the prosecution of an extensive and lucrative business, persist in denying the right of the State to tax their vessels, on the ground that the owners of property sought to be taxed, are citizens of other States of the Confederacy, and subject to taxation on the same property in the place of their residence. It is true, that the taxes due last year, were paid by the company under protest; but it is also true, that suits have already been instituted by them for the recovery of the whole amount paid, with interest, and the State is now compelled, at great expense, to assert her rights in the Supreme Court of the United States.

I herewith transmit for your information a copy of a report, received on the 18th of November, 1853, from General E. A. Hitchcock, commander of the Pacific Division of the Army of the United States, exhibiting the number and character of troops under his command in California, and the several points where stationed. This force, as before remarked, is entirely inadequate to the protection of the State, it will be seen, that the whole number of troops of the United States, within the limits of this State, as reported by the officer in command, is but six hundred and thirty-one. To this numerically inadequate force, is entrusted the protection of a frontier State, more than six hundred miles in length, about two hundred in width, with tribes of Indians, many of whom are hostile, along the whole extent of the eastern boundary, as well as in the extreme north and south. With a view to induce the government to augment the military force on this coast, permit me to suggest the propriety of the Legislature memorializing Congress to authorize two additional regiments to be organized for service in California.

In this connection, permit me also respectfully to suggest, that in such form as you may deem proper, it is your duty to invite the attention of Congress to the present exposed condition of our extended sea board, and to invoke them to provide as speedily as possible, the fortifications necessary to render perfectly secure, against hostile attack, the commercial emporiums of the State. At present they are in such an exposed condition, that if assailed by a hostile fleet, it would be almost impossible to prevent their entire destruction. The subject is one of such immense importance to our people and our commerce, that it need only be mentioned, it is presumed, to induce on your part the action necessary to secure its presentation in proper form, for the consideration of the General Government.

The Act entitled "An Act concerning Roads and Highways," approved April 11, 1850, it is generally maintained, requires important amendments. At the time of its passage, the country was open; few enclosures had been made, and the provisions of the Act, perhaps, fully adequate to the wants of the State. But since that time, great changes have been effected—the land in many counties is so generally fenced in or ditched, that travel is rendered difficult, and the distance between points greatly increased by the circuitous route necessarily traveled to avoid enclosures.

All necessary thoroughfares should be, not only as direct as the face of the country will admit, but well defined by competent authority. It is true, that private property cannot be applied to public use, without adequate compensation therefor; but where it is absolutely necessary for the public convenience, it can be appraised by commissioners, and its actual value paid. While no man can be divested of his property without an equivalent, private rights must yield to the public good. In some sections of the State the want of well defined highways has been the source of much inconvenience to the public; and the evil will increase until remedied by proper legislation. The subject is worthy a careful examination, and I hope will, at an early day, receive the attention it merits.

The Act entitled "An Act to provide for the Public Printing," approved April 29, 1852, authorized the Governor and Comptroller "to receive proposals, and enter into a contract with the persons proposing to do the work at the lowest and most advantageous terms to the State." After having given the notice required by law, on the designated day, the two bids received were opened and compared, and the contract awarded to the lowest bidder.

Notwithstanding the work was awarded, as required by law, to the lowest bidder, and the accounts rendered and settled, in strict conformity with the rates stipulated in the contract, the public printing is understood to have cost more in the aggregate than it would have done if executed at the prices fixed in a bill, which passed the Assembly during the same session, and for which the existing Act was substituted in the Senate.

The contract system, I would here state, after having been fully and fairly tested has been abandoned by most of the States, as well as by the National Government.

In order to remove just cause of complaint, and secure the prompt execution of the public printing on the most favorable terms possible, I would respectfully recommend the passage of an Act creating the office of State Printer, and authorizing the election of that officer by the Legislature.

Let the same Act also establish fair and reasonable prices for the different descriptions of public printing required—define the size of pages—the kind of letter to be used, respectively in Legislative reports, the laws, journals and bills—the number of ems each page shall contain—the matter to be as compact as possible in pages without injury to the appearance of the work, and reserve to the Comptroller, the right, in the settlement of the printing accounts, after examining carefully the work executed, to allow or refuse compensation for blank pages.

The fact, that at the time the existing contract for public printing was entered into, State scrip did not command, in the market, more than seventy-five cents on the dollar, and that now ninety-three can readily be obtained, would alone justify a considerable reduction in prices.

The exercise of proper care and judgment, both as to matter and amount, in ordering printing to be executed, permit me here to remark, is equally as necessary, as a measure of reform, as the reduction of prices to a fair cash standard. It is believed, that heretofore, more printing has been ordered and executed during the session than was absolutely required for the information of the people, or to facilitate and secure enlightened legislation. By the exercise of sound discretion in this respect, the amount of printing, no doubt, can be greatly reduced.

The reforms and reductions proposed, would, it is anticipated, in the aggregate, lessen the expenditures for public printing, considerably more than one third the whole amount now paid.

The last Legislature having adjourned without electing a Quarter Master General, and the Physicians and Trustees for the State Marine Hospital in the city of San Francisco, and the Asylum for the Insane at Stockton, as required by law, the duty of filling these vacancies, until the meeting of the present Legislature, devolved on the Executive.

The appointments were made, and the incumbents will hold their offices until their successors shall have been elected by the Legislature. It is hoped that this important matter will receive immediate attention.

In California, the afflicted and infirm have ever been the objects of peculiar care and protection. To the appeals of the sick and destitute, the aged and infirm, the young and helpless, the hearts of our people have ever been open, and the hand of charity freely extended.

Private benevolence has done much, and will, doubtless, do more, towards alleviating the wants of suffering humanity in our midst; but to the State do the people look for that extended aid to the sick and insane, which their condition and necessities demand.

In providing for the sick and insane, large sums of money have been annually expended by the State, and a portion of the existing debt thereby incurred. The State Marine Hospital has, during the year, cost the State more than forty thousand dollars, over and above the amount of the special tax allotted to it by law.

The Insane Asylum, at Stockton, including the buildings erected, has also during the year, cost the State a large sum from the General Fund.

If possible, provision should be made for a more economical administration of these institutions, and expenditures so far reduced, at least, as hereafter to render unnecessary appropriations from the General Fund.

During the year, about seventy-five thousand dollars have been paid from the General Fund in erecting buildings for the insane, in the city of Stockton. The principal, or brick edifice, is one hundred and thirty feet in length, fifty feet in width, two stories high, is well finished and furnished, and the interior arrangements admirably adapted to the purpose for which it was erected. The other, a frame structure, is forty feet square, and well finished. There are about one hundred acres of very superior land attached to the asylum, a small portion of which has been enclosed.

The whole number of insane in the establishment on the 15th of December, 1853, was one hundred and one—ninety-one males and ten females.

The whole number of patients admitted into the State Marine Hospital at San Francisco, since the 1st of July last, was fourteen hundred and forty-five males, and forty-two females. On the 23d of December, 1853, there were in the Hospital three hundred male patients, and eleven females. Of the whole number admitted since July, nine hundred and twenty-one were patients for the support of whom the city of San Francisco is responsible to the State.

The Act entitled "An Act to provide for the erection of a State Prison," passed May 1st, 1852, it will be recollected, was repealed by the last Legislature, and the contract, which had been made in pursuance of it, declared null and void.

By an Act passed May 11th, 1853, entitled "An Act providing for the erection of a State Prison, and declaring null and void the existing State Prison contract," the Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State and Treasurer of State, were constituted a Board of Commissioners, and authorized to enter into a new contract for prison buildings, of sufficient dimensions to accommodate about two hundred and fifty prisoners. The Board of Commissioners, as authorized by the Act, on the 5th day of July, entered into a contract with Thomas D. Johns for the requisite prison buildings.

The building authorized by the contract to be erected, it is understood, will be completed and ready for occupancy in about ten days. When reported finished by the contractor, the work will be carefully examined by the Commissioners, and if found to be executed according to contract, will be received by them, on behalf of the State.

The whole number of convicts, on the 30th of December, was two hundred and forty-two; two hundred and forty males and two females.

The project of connecting the Pacific with the Atlantic ocean, by means of a rail road across the continent, it can, with truth be said, is favored by the whole people of California; and they, too, are as deeply interested in its speedy completion as those of any other section of the Union. The subject during the past year has engaged so much of their attention, that it would be superfluous, at this time, for me to point out, at length, the great commercial advantages to be derived from it, or to present facts demonstrative of its practicability. The people of this, the youngest of the sovereign States, properly appreciate the importance of this great work to the Union; and they unanimously favor it, not only as a measure which must incalculably advance all the great interests of the Pacific country, and add greatly to its wealth and prosperity, but because it will connect in interest, as they are now united in feeling, the people of the extreme sections of this great confederacy. So far as California is concerned, it is only necessary to give the assurance that her aid will be cheerfully extended, in every form consistent with her own, and the Constitution of the United States.

The establishment of regular oceanic communication, by steam, between San Francisco and Asia and the Indies, is regarded as a matter of vital importance to California. Regular communication, by steam, with the principal ports of the eastern world, cannot fail to promote friendly relations, and, consequently, greatly increase our commerce.

That it is the province of Congress, in some form, to aid in the consummation of this great project, is most true, but in view of its immense importance to our commerce, I cannot refrain from suggesting such an expression of opinion on the subject, on your part, as will clearly and unmistakeably indicate the anxiety of our people for the success of an enterprise, which must add to our present wealth, and eventually secure for our country a trade for centuries coveted, and in turn possessed in part, by the different commercial nations of the globe.

The improvement of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers, is a subject worthy of careful examination. The expenditure of a comparatively small sum in improving the "Slough," and removing the bar in the Sacramento river, at the mouth of Cache creek, and in making the channel of the San Joaquin more direct for about thirty miles, would render the navigation of these rivers safe and easy at all seasons of the year, for steamers of the largest class.

The appropriations suggested, it is contended, can be made without infringement upon constitutional restrictions. Sacramento and Stockton have by law, been declared "Ports of Entry," and vessels can, and frequently do, clear from Atlantic and foreign ports direct for both these growing cities.

The expenditure of a few hundred thousand dollars from the National Treasury, in improving these rivers, it is therefore maintained, would not only result in great benefit to the people of the State, but promote the interests of commerce, which the Constitution declares "shall be regulated by Congress."

The Sacramento, San Joaquin and Feather rivers, all require considerable improvement at points above "Ports of Entry," to render navigation easy and less hazardous, at certain seasons of the year; but these improvements must be provided for, either by appropriations directly from the treasury of the State, which it is hoped can, a year or two hence, be done without detriment to the public interests, or by the assessment of a light tonnage tax, which the Constitution clearly authorizes, and which in a few years, would yield a fund amply sufficient to perfect the improvements necessary to render their navigation certain at all seasons.

The report of the Commissioners appointed under an Act entitled "An Act to provide for the sale of the interest of the State within the water front of the city of San Francisco, as defined in the Act of 26th of March, 1851," will soon be transmitted.

Two sales have been held, at which sixty-two lots were sold for the sum of $473,475.

Injunctions issued by the Judge of the Superior Court of San Francisco, for some time interfered with their action, and prevented them from effecting a third sale, as intended, before the meeting of the Legislature. It is now believed, however, that no further opposition will be made to the sale of the State's interest in the Government Reserves; and that, if permitted to proceed without further molestation, they will be able to dispose of the whole property, including the State's reversionary interest in the lots released to the city by the Act of March 26, 1851, before the first of January, 1855.

To the able report of the Comptroller of State you are respectfully referred, for indispensable statistical information in relation to the receipts and expenditures of the last year, and valuable suggestions in regard to the collection and disbursement of the revenues of the State.

The Annual Report of the Surveyor General, herewith transmitted, contains suggestions of importance, and I would especially invite your attention to that portion of the report relative to the "floating" of School Land Warrants, and the location in two or more different counties of the same warrant. The amendments to the existing law proposed by the Surveyor General, are recommended as important and necessary.

Copies of the Annual Reports of the Treasurer of State, Attorney General, and Quartermaster General, are also herewith transmitted. These reports contain interesting statistical and other valuable information.

Copies of communications from the Secretary of the Navy and the Attorney General of the United States, in relation to the State's interest in Mare island, are herewith transmitted. (See Senate Appendix, Doc. No. 5.) The Attorney General, in his communication to the Secretary of the Navy, it will be seen, suggests as an "indispensable pre-requisite to any lawful expenditure of public money on Mare island, that the State of California be invited to relinquish to the United States whatever claim, if any, she may have to the "shores, or the overflowed lands of Mare island." The General Government, it is maintained, cannot appropriate to its use that portion of the property most required for the public works at Mare island, without the consent of the State.

The subject is of some importance, and, I trust, will engage your immediate attention, so that I may be enabled to communicate, at an early day, your decision in the matter, to the Secretary of the Navy.

Although deeply impressed with the importance, as well as the necessity of economizing in every department of the State Government, I feel it incumbent upon me to direct your attention to the insecure condition of the public archives. The entire public records, as well as the State Library, now numbering about four thousand volumes, are kept in fragile frame buildings, without fire-proof vaults or safes.

The public records are now invaluable, and if destroyed, could not be replaced, and their loss would involve the State and individuals in serious difficulties. In the other States of the Confederacy, the officers of State are provided with substantial brick or stone buildings, and the public records rendered entirely secure by being deposited in fire-proof vaults or safes provided for that purpose. In this truly important matter, we are admonished of the necessity of increased safeguards by the many and terrible conflagrations which have occurred during the past year. I trust, therefore, that you will, without delay, adopt such measures as you may deem necessary to render entirely secure the public archives in the several offices, and also the State Library.

An Act entitled "An Act to regulate fees in office," approved May 1, 1851, requires careful revision and radical change. The fees authorized to be collected are exorbitant, amounting in some cases almost to an absolute denial of justice. The reduction in necessary expenses of every character, since the passage of the Act, has been so great, that the public officer can now render the services required by law, for much less compensation. I trust, therefore, that the subject will receive attention, and the Act referred to so modified as to remove just cause of complaint.

The attorneys' fees allowed by an Act, entitled "An Act to regulate proceedings in civil cases in Courts of Justice in this State," approved April 15, 1851, are also the subject of general complaint, and, in fact, are enormous, considering the service rendered. I would, therefore, respectfully suggest that this Act be so amended as to allow the plaintiff's attorney, in suits for the recovery of money, to collect from the defendant a reasonable per centage on the amount recovered, leaving fees in all other cases matter of contract, and payable by clients.

The report of the Joint Committee, appointed at the last session of the Legislature to investigate the books and papers in the offices of the Comptroller and Treasurer of the State, is herewith transmitted. The Committee have been thorough in their investigations, and the facts, by them reported, are not only important to the people of the State, but will materially aid you in the discharge of your legislative duties. The recommendations of the Committee are worthy of careful consideration, and I would especially call attention to their suggestions in relation to cash payments from the Treasury.

A communication from the Secretary of State of the United States, dated Washington City, October 19, 1853, inviting the attention of the Executive to the seventh article of a "Consular Convention between the United States of America and His Majesty the Emperor of the French," and the reply of the Executive thereto, are herewith transmitted.

A copy of the article referred to in the communication of the Secretary of State, is also transmitted for your information.

Having fully and unreservedly expressed my own views in relation to the more important subjects, which, it is expected, will engage your earnest deliberations, and recommended measures for your approval, which, after thorough investigation and mature reflection, have the sanction of my own judgment, it only remains for me, in conclusion, to give assurance of my entire willingness to co-operate with you in the consummation of every measure regarded as necessary to the future prosperity and greatness of the State, and the welfare and happiness of the whole people.

Imploring the Great Creator of the Universe to direct you in all your deliberations, the rights, interests, and honor of the free people of a sovereign State are committed to your enlightened and protecting care.

JOHN BIGLER.

SCHOOL LANDS.

U. S. SURVEYOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
San Francisco, Cal. Oct. 8, 1853. }

DEAR SIR :

Yours of the 7th (yesterday) is at hand, in which you express a desire to ascertain as accurately as possible, the number of acres of land, the State will be entitled to under the laws of Congress, granting section 16 and 36 in each township, for school purposes.

At present we have no means in this office, from actual survey, of ascertaining the precise area of the State, but assuming the estimate of Mr. Eddy, the late State Surveyor General, as correct, we have for the area 146,285 square miles equal to 93,662,400 acres.

The State being entitled to two sections from each township of thirty-six sections, or one eighteenth of the whole : the State's proportion will be five million two hundred and one thousand, two hundred and forty-four acres (5,201,244.)

I am Sir, very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

LEANDER RANSOM.

HON. JOHN BIGLER,

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN C. JAMES, Chairman.

Mr. Irwin gave notice, that on to-morrow he would move to re-consider the vote adopting the report on Mileage, whereupon

Mr. Mandeville moved to re-consider the vote forthwith,

And the House refused to re-consider.

On motion of Mr. Van Cleft, the House took a recess for fifteen minutes.

House re-assembled, and the Senate appeared for the purpose of Inaugurating the Governor elect.

Judge Winston administered the oath of office, after which the Governor spoke as follows :

FELLOW CITIZENS :

Having subscribed the solemn oath required by the constitution, at the commencement of a term of office, I avail myself of the occasion to express my profound gratitude to the people of California, who, after the most rigid scrutiny into all my official acts, have a second time, by their free suffrages, conferred upon me the highest office in their gift. At the commencement of my first term, conforming to revered custom, I took occasion to proclaim the principles which should be my guide in the administration of the government, as well as to explain the more important measures believed necessary to the rapid development of our vast resources.

The principles then set forth and the measures advocated, are still cherished and approved—time and experience having demonstrated, as far as tested, their entire practicability and correctness.

On this occasion I may be permitted to assure my fellow citizens that hereafter, as heretofore, all my energies will be steadily exerted to secure, not only a faithful and efficient, but an economical administration of the State Government. And if, heretofore, there has been a failure to accomplish desired objects and effect radical reforms, I entreat you to remember, that in the only manner authorized by the Constitution, I have, again and again, performed my duty in the premises; by urging upon the immediate representatives of the people the great importance of adopting judicious measures to secure a speedy liquidation of the debt of the State, and of devising a thorough system of retrenchment and reform.

The power to abate evils complained of, to lessen public expenditures and taxation on the people, the Constitution has wisely vested in the Legislature—not in the Executive. The Governor can, and indeed it is his constitutional duty, from time to time to recommend measures which meet his approbation, and to express his views on subjects of general importance; but here his power ceases until his recommendations shall have received force and efficacy by the action of the Legislature. The Executive, though often censured in relation to public expenditures, has in fact no further control over the Treasury than is exercised in the approval or rejection of acts of the Legislature appropriating public funds. The Comptroller and Treasurer, in many matters of great importance, are the peculiar guardians of the public purse. It is the province of these officers, under the Constitution and laws, to pass upon all claims against the State, to approve and reject, as they deem proper, and as justice demands. With their decisions the Executive cannot interfere, and over their judgments, in the settlement of questions between individuals and the State he has, properly, no control.

It is believed unnecessary, however, on this occasion, to advert to the financial condition of the State, or the measures relied upon to secure the speedy payment of our existing debt. For these important details you are respectfully referred to my Annual Message.

During the past two years our progress in improvements of every character, has more than realized the expectations of the most sanguine. The substantial wealth of the State has been more than doubled. The spirit of progress and improvement, which so distinguishes the American people, and which, in fact, has placed our country in the van of nations, has lost none of its vigor on the Pacific coast. Its benign influence has, in an incredibly short period of time, placed our adopted State on a level, in many important respects, with the oldest and mightiest of the Confederacy. But yesterday, California was a wild and uncultivated department of a declining nation—to day, she stands unrivalled in the wealth of her mountains—the fertility of her valleys—the importance of her growing commerce—and in the energy and intelligence of her people. Nor are we wanting in other monuments which mark our wealth, enterprize, and prosperity. Our cities, spreading their fair proportions upon our inland seas, navigable rivers, and in our mining districts, abound in structures equal to any which adorn the emporiums of the Atlantic;—our broad acres are being rapidly subjected by the hand of culture, and our granaries and teeming warehouses attest, alike, the bounty of the soil, and the prosperity of our people.

The people of California, though greatly absorbed in the development of her unequalled mineral wealth, and in preparing for a more full enjoyment of her vast commercial advantages, have not been unmindful of other great interests. The education of the youth of the State has been the subject of much solicitude, and, in view of the fact that the families of our citizens are daily coming to our shores and settling upon the public domain, a system of public instruction is being matured, worthy of the great Pacific State, and entirely adequate to the wants of the rising generation. Congress, with commendable liberality, has donated lands to the State, which, if properly disposed of, it is confidently believed, will yield not less than eleven millions of dollars for school purposes. This sum, judiciously applied in fostering a system of Common Schools, will be found amply sufficient to educate all the children of our State, and thus give a high character to our civil institutions. The education of the masses is justly esteemed the groundwork of free institutions, and the enduring basis of constitutional liberty. We have, indeed, reason for congratulation, my fellow-citizens, that our school fund, inferior to that of no other State, promises for future generations the intelligence so necessary to the preservation of the free institutions under which we so happily live and prosper.

In the midst of exciting scenes and general prosperity, we have not been forgetful of the demands of humanity. Owing to the great distance traversed by the emigrant, and the privations endured, many reach our borders "sick and destitute"—"strangers in a strange land." Their necessities have not been forgotten; the hand of charity has been freely extended. Hospitals for the relief of the sick and insane have been provided, and thrown wide open for their reception; large appropriations from the public treasury have been annually made for their relief by former Legislatures, and these asylums will ever remain monuments of the humanity and beneficence of our people, and enduring evidences that, even in the incipient stages of our political existence, suffering humanity received the relief and comfort required.

For the suppression and punishment of crime, there has been erected, during the past year, a secure State Prison. Heretofore, almost entirely dependent upon individuals and counties for the safekeeping of criminals, there has been, comparatively, an immunity from punishment. This fact, and the no less important one, that escape was possible, emboldened the vicious and daring, and served greatly to increase crime—for, it is not so much the "severity of punishment, as the certainty of its infliction," which holds villainy in check. But now that we have a secure prison, that escape is hopeless and punishment certain, crime, it is hoped and believed, will rapidly diminish.

Justly proud of our adopted State, it may not be unprofitable for us, on this occasion, to recur once more to the scenes, the trials, the difficulties and the eventful triumphs which marked an era in the history of the world—the birth of a new State into the American Confederacy. Springing into new life, after a lethargic sleep of centuries, California opened to an astonished world the hidden wealth of her mountains, and her flower-clad valleys gave presage of future productiveness.

For ages had her golden sands been washed from their mountain heights, and the rivulets and streams which fertilized her plains, bore golden flakes on their resistless floods. But it was reserved for the research and energy of our own people, first to discover and then to develop the hidden wealth, which added a new field to the labor, enterprise, and commerce of the world, and which, for centuries, had remained unknown to the inhabitants of the Pacific coast. Excited by the intelligence wafted to their ears from the Pacific shore, the American people, who, by their intelligence, energy, and all those virtues which exalt a nation, have acquired the right to disseminate freedom and civilization—the right to inoculate upon the decaying frame of despotism the living principles of civil and religious liberty, led the van of that mighty concourse which set towards our golden shores; and overcoming every interposing obstacle, soon laid, broad and deep, the foundation of a great and prosperous sovereignty.

The discovery of inexhaustible mines of gold upon the borders of the Pacific was an extraordinary episode in human affairs. It was an occurrence which involved the most important consequences to the monetary affairs of the world. It gave a new impulse to labor everywhere, and infused new vigor into all the departments of human industry. By increasing the rewards of labor, and the demand for its products, it gave to it a practical dignity and importance which it never before possessed. But the immediate and remote results of such a discovery are too important and varied to be enumerated here. It was, however, apparent that a country possessing such advantages, and destined to exert such an influence, would speedily become an object of peculiar interest. It was apparent, also, that the wants of such a country would be uncommon, and that, without the exercise of sleepless vigilance, its interests would often be jeopardized. The discovery of the precious metals was succeeded by a crisis in California, during which it was sometimes a subject of doubt whether order or anarchy would be paramount. The want of the protecting care of the General Government, which the country, on account of its geographical position, and its consequent isolation, so keenly felt—the rapid influx of immigrants from every quarter of the globe, contributed to retard the permanent establishment of law and order, and rendered necessary a well regulated government, and a rigid code of laws. For the control of a people so heterogeneous, the provisional government established in California was soon found to be totally inefficient. Police and municipal regulations—the great safeguards of society—and a general system of government, more comprehensive and more detailed in its operations, were wants which the public interests eminently demanded. Accordingly, the representatives of the people, in September, 1849, assembled in convention and adopted a State Constitution; and, in a remarkably short period of time, after the ratification of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, by which this territory was acquired, California was admitted into the American Confederacy, and invested with all the prerogatives of a sovereign State. I need not here recur to the acclamations with which the intelligence of this event was received, or to the impressive scenes which marked its solemnization. Up to the period of the organization of the State Government, we were a community, or I might rather say, a collection of persons, to some extent without law, and without any of those securities only to be found in a stern and impartial administration of justice. The maxims and obligations of self government were too often set at naught, and society was seemingly suspended over the abyss of annihilation.

But the perils which attended the infancy and early organization of our Government have, happily, passed away; and under those restraining influences of habit, education, and natural affection, which are so insensibly, but so powerfully exerted, and with which we are inspired by our liberal form of government, stability and order have risen out of chaos and confusion.

In all cases of grievance, the law has prescribed the mode of redress, and it is alike our duty, and our custom, to respect its requirements. While from our earliest boyhood, there has been instilled in our breasts love and reverence for the free institutions of our country, we have also been taught to respect and obey that country's laws. Obedience to the laws, as a principle, forms the main pillar in the edifice which the people have consecrated to liberty.

But California is not alone dependent upon the glittering ore, which primarily attracted to her shores thousands of men and fleets of deeply laden ships. Her soil, so prolific in mineral riches, is no less productive of all those commodities which form the staples and luxuries of the world. Emphatically the land of the olive and the vine, her fields of waving corn, and clustering vineyards on her southern slopes, bid fair soon to rival her mines of gold, and render her as renowned for abundant harvests, as she has been, and is, for stores of mineral wealth. Each year gives renewed proofs of the fertility of her soil, and increased importance to agricultural pursuits. Her geographical position is eminently conducive to health, and favorable to the production of every article needful for consumption at home, and in time, for exportation abroad.

In latitudes analogous with southern France and the finest wine countries of Europe, California already possesses flourishing vineyards, which will one day, no doubt, render her celebrated for every variety of wines. Her bounteous soil nourishes the olive and the fig, and fruits of every description are to be found throughout the State.

Hitherto, the unparalleled productiveness of the mines deterred the people, generally, from undertaking, what, for a time, was deemed hazardous experiments in agriculture. Again, the unsettled condition of land titles, and above all, the transient and migratory character of the first immigrants who came here with no intention of making this country their permanent abode, greatly retarded the development of our agricultural resources. Soon, however, men learned to appreciate the immense natural superiority of California over the eastern portion of the American Continent. They discovered that, independently of its golden sands, it possessed a genial and healthful climate and luxuriant soil. They became attached to its beautiful rivers—its pleasant and productive valleys, and its expansive plains; and instead of quitting the country forever, as originally intended, they sent for their wives and little ones, to rejoin them in this sunny land.

The transcendent beauties of the country—the fertility of its soil, as well as its great mineral wealth and commercial advantages, were soon properly appreciated, and then commenced the flood-tide of immigration, which has since known no ebb.

Among the many flattering evidences of our prosperity and progress in agricultural pursuits, none speak more unmistakably than the increased demand and consequent importation of farming implements of every character; they give evidence of the peaceful and lucrative calling of many of our citizens.

The advantages of engaging in agricultural pursuits cannot be too earnestly urged upon the people, and the employment of labor and capital in such a channel cannot fail to afford profitable returns. Let us hope, then, as we have every reason to expect, that not only our mountains and river sands will continue to yield their rich treasures to the hand of industry, but that our vast and unequalled commercial and agricultural resources may be so developed by the enterprise and perseverance of our people as to elevate California in the scale of nations, and render her that populous and powerful sovereignty of the American Confederacy, for which she was so manifestly “destined by nature and by nature’s God.”

For the blessings of social order and general prosperity, which we now enjoy in so high a degree, I claim nothing for the Government over which I have been called to preside. But to that spirit of liberty and progress so eminently characteristic of the American people, united with the intelligence and determined energy of our fellow-citizens, under the blessings of Providence, we owe all our greatness and continued prosperity—and to that spirit and intelligence must we ever look for the welfare of our common country, and the perpetuity of the free institutions which have made our Union “beloved at home and respected abroad.”

On motion of Mr. Wade, the Senate withdrew, and the House organized for business.

Mr. Ballou made the following majority report from the committee to whom was referred the Removal Question,

Which was read, and upon motion laid upon the table :

The undersigned, a majority of the Select Committee, to whom was referred so much of the Governor's Message, as relates to the present condition of the State Offices, together with a communication from the State Treasurer ; also, a proposition from certain citizens of Benicia, tendering the use of a secure building for State Offices ; also propositions from the county of Sacramento, and preamble and resolutions of the Common Council of Sacramento, relative to the removal of the Capital to that city ; having bestowed careful consideration on the subject, beg leave to report :

That they have personally examined the condition of the State Offices, and found them in a condition of insecurity, which demands prompt action on the part of the Legislature, to provide places of greater security and safety for the preservation of the archives and other valuable property of the State, kept in the State Offices.

Your committee would also beg leave to state that they have made a personal examination of a certain building, which the citizens of Benicia have tendered to the State free of rent as long as the same may be required for State Offices, and found the same to be a substantial brick building, about thirty-four feet long by twenty-two feet wide, two stories high, containing in all six rooms. Said building if finished according to its design, will afford convenient offices for the Treasurer and Comptroller, but not entire security.

A majority of your Committee, in order to enable the Committee to present an accurate exhibit of the subject, deemed it their duty to visit Sacramento and make personal investigation of the advantages claimed for that city as the location of the Seat of Government.

The building offered for a State House, is the same that was occupied for that purpose during the session of 1852. It is a substantial brick edifice, sixty feet by eighty feet. On the floor there are eight rooms, twenty feet by twenty-four feet, in one of which is an ample fire-proof vault. The upper story, approached by a flight of steps from a wide hall passing through the centre of the building, is divided into three rooms; one of which is 36 by 80 feet; one 24 by 55 feet, and the third 24 by 25 feet; affording accommodations for the two Houses.

Your committee found at Sacramento, a condition of things, which has justly elicited from visitors to that city, enthusiastic eulogies upon the dauntless energy which in the short period of twelve months, has created within a space of two hundred acres, laid completely bare by the great conflagration, and subsequently, from the consequences of long continued rains and inundations, converted into one vast and almost impassable swamp—a city, in substantial wealth, commerce and population, the second in California.

The erection of several hundred brick buildings, all of them substantial, many of them magnificent—the raised thoroughfares substantially planked—and almost a new line of levee embankment, constructed with reference to safety only, on plans prepared by experience and previous disaster—the elevation and planking of the principal route to the interior—at once attest the confidence of the citizens in the permanence of their location, and the determination and perseverance with which they have met and overcome the unparalleled combination of disaster and misfortune with which that ill-fated city was visited in the autumn and winter of 1852 and '53.

In the location of a State Capital your Committee is of opinion that public convenience and public economy should be controlling considerations; in fact that they are indispensable to a final and permanent settlement of the question.

The undersigned readily unite in the opinion that while these elements so essential to a final settlement of the question, are almost wholly wanting in Benicia, are in an eminent degree possessed by Sacramento.

From the latter point, nine lines of splendid stages penetrate to every important point in the interior. Magnificent steamers plying daily to San Francisco and to cities and towns on the Sacramento and its tributaries, present facilities for speedy communication between the representative and his constituents, unequalled at any other place in the State. The fact that Sacramento affords daily communication with a population of 150,000, in itself establishes the proposition that the city is one of the great business centers of our State. It is also the center of an extensive system of telegraphic communication, either already in operation or in a state of forwardness, and is destined at no distant day, by its general advantages and geographical position, the center of an extensive system of railroads.

Having no facilities at Benicia for printing, the public printing has to be done at San Francisco, and in consequence of the delay occasioned by sending the printing away from the Capital, each House remains in profound ignorance of the proposed ings of the other for a period of twenty-four hours ; and it is a fact well known, that during the last session of the Legislature, many important bills were acted upon while they were at San Francisco being printed.

The want of a law library at Benicia is another serious inconvenience that cannot be remedied except by a large appropriation of money, which the State is not in a condition to make.

Sacramento City having two extensive printing establishments, and a number of large law and miscellaneous libraries, those inconveniences would not be felt.

A very large portion of the people of the northern and middle sections of the State, are called frequently to Sacramento on private business, and can transact any and all business with the State, and pass on without delay ; whereas but few persons are called to Benicia, except upon business of the State, and to stop there at all, involves a loss of twenty-four hours. In addition to this, Benicia having no inland trade, being mainly dependent for support on the business attracted by the location of the seat of government, living will necessarily be a greater tax here than at a point where there is already an extensive competition between hotel and boarding-house keepers.

Without counting any other item, this alone will impose a heavier tax on the people in one year than would the removal of the Capital to Sacramento.

The time lost at the last session of the Legislature, in consequence of the want of a quorum to do business cost the people about fifty thousand dollars. Anticipating a like result from like causes, if the Legislature remains at Benicia, a provident economy seems to your committee, to demand its removal now.

At a large estimate the removal would not cost the State exceeding fifteen thousand dollars, and your committee confidently predict, that more than double that amount will be saved the State before the close of the session.

If the Capital remains at Benicia large appropriations must be made to erect safe and secure public buildings ; in fact a bill for that purpose has been already introduced.

In investigating this subject the attention of your Committee has been occupied by an event in the future, which must take place at no distant day ;—we mean a division of the State.

And whenever that event does occur the public buildings will be comparatively valueless—almost a total loss to the State.

Your Committee is aware that the frequent removals of the Capital, together with the expense of such removals, has been a subject of much and just complaint among the people. But the fact that reckless speculators have hitherto been able to mould and control legislation on this subject to suit their own personal views, and have signally failed to place it at any point indicated by public convenience or sustained by public sentiment, so far from being against another removal, forcibly points out the necessity of fixing the Capital at a point combining all the elements essential to a final and permanent settlement of this vexed question.

Believing that Benicia possesses but few of the advantages and elements referred to—that the subject will be agitated and discussed session after session, at great cost to the people until the removal is finally accomplished—a just regard for the interests of the State and the people seems to your Committee to command its removal now.

Your committee also believe that the public buildings offered for the use of the State by Sacramento city and county, and her banking houses, present greater security and protection for the archives and property of the State, together with more ample accommodations for the officers of State than is found at Benicia.

Therefore the undersigned, a majority of the committee, recommend that the proposition of the county and city of Sacramento be accepted.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

S. A. BALLOU,
JOHN MUSSEY.
W. S. LETCHER.

Mr. Kellogg made the following minority report from the committee to whom had been referred the removal question, which was read and on motion laid upon the table :

MR. SPEAKER :

The undersigned, a minority of the Select Committee, to whom was referred so much of the message of his Excellency, the Governor, as relates to the present condition of the State offices, together with a communication from the State Treasurer ; also a proposition from certain citizens of Benicia, tendering the use of a secure building for State offices ; also, propositions of the county of Sacramento, and preamble and resolutions of Common Council of the city of Sacramento, relative to the removal of the State Capital to that city ; while they concur in that portion of the report of the majority of the committee which relates to the insecurity of the buildings in which are the offices of the Treasurer and Comptroller of State, and wherein the State archives are kept, and to the necessity of some prompt legislative action on the subject, are reluctantly compelled to differ from the opinions expressed and embodied in the remaining portion of said majority report, and submit the following report and recommend its adoption.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

H. B. KELLOGG,
R. C. WHITMAN,
Of Select Committee.

REPORT.

The building offered by the citizens of Benicia for State offices, is a substantial brick building, thirty-two feet long by twenty-four feet in width, containing six fine rooms, sufficient for the accommodation of Secretary, Comptroller, and Treasurer of State. If accepted by the State for the purposes above named, it will be finished in a fire-proof manner, with iron doors and shutters, and a fire-proof vault, of the dimensions deemed requisite by the officers of State, erected in the basement, thus affording ample security for the treasury and archives of State.

The building tendered by the county of Sacramento for the present session of the Legislature, is the Court House, occupied by the Legislature of 1852, and in its present state does not offer convenient accommodations for the Legislature. By the removal of two partitions, two rooms of sufficient size would be obtained—one for the Assembly, thirty-six feet wide by eighty feet long—one for the Senate twenty-four feet wide by eighty feet long. The fire-proof vault referred to in the report of the majority, is entirely too small to contain a sufficient safe for the use of the State Treasurer, and its lock is of the simplest make and entirely insecure.

The enterprise and dauntless energy of the citizens of Sacramento are worthy of all praise, but it is somewhat to be doubted if even the dauntless energy aforesaid could, in the course of human events, have created a population only the second in California, unless by some means of propagation not generally known or commonly understood. While the disasters by fire and flood to which Sacramento has been subjected are to be lamented, it may very properly be doubted whether the fact, as stated in the majority report of this committee, that Sacramento has within twelve months been at once a desert and a swamp, is the most cogent of arguments for the removal of the State Capital to that place at the present time. At least one winter should try the efficacy of the new levee. The old levee was deemed secure, but at the time of trial it failed, and the future only can tell whether the present one will be more efficient. The majority of mankind, unlike the majority of this committee, are not gifted with prophetic vision, or the faculty of second sight, and must therefore wait for time to decide the question above stated. Time failed to examine in detail the several hundred brick buildings referred to in the report of the majority of this committee, and therefore the assertion that all of them are substantial, must be referred to the prophetic vision aforesaid. The magnificence of some is apparent, insomuch that one of them is styled, par excellence, the "Palace."

The uninformed have generally supposed that several lines of daily stages have afforded communication between Sacramento and the interior of the State; it would, however, be the height of folly and presumption to dispute the wisdom and accuracy of the statement of the majority of this committee that nine lines of "splendid stage companies" penetrate to every important point in the interior, although at first blush the operation would be rather difficult.

The statement made in the report of the majority of the committee, that Sacramento is already the centre of an extensive system of telegraphic communications, and is destined to be, at no distant day, the centre of an extensive system of railroads, is to be referred to the prophetic vision before mentioned, to which the minority of this committee lay no claims.

The State printing can, if necessary, be done at Benicia, but undoubtedly will be done wherever the State Printer may see fit.

The profound ignorance mentioned in the report of the majority of this committee can readily be obviated by an inspection of the daily proceedings of either House.

A few of the legal fraternity in Benicia had supposed that they possessed at least the germs of a law library, but they must yield to the fiat of a majority of this committee, and the minority thereof must suppose that the books in the State Library, some four thousand volumes in number, are like Peter Pindar's razors, "made for show and not for use."

The minority of this committee are unable to understand the logic which makes the high price of board in Benicia a heavier direct tax upon the people in one year than would the removal of the Capital to Sacramento, although the same is asserted in the report of the majority of this committee. The minority also believe that members of the Legislature were elected to serve the State, and not for the purpose of endeavoring to amass a competence from their per diem.

If the sum of fifty thousand dollars was lost to the State during the last session of the Legislature for want of a quorum, the members were derelict in their duty; but to suppose a similar occurrence in the present Legislature, is to impute to them a wilful neglect of duty not yet apparent.

At a small estimate the removal of the capital would not cost the State less than fifty thousand dollars, and the minority of this committee do not venture confidently to predict that more than double that amount would be saved the State before the close of the Session, for the reason that they are guided by facts and not by fancy.

The building proffered by the citizens of Benicia, for the State officers are as secure as any other offered, and would be sufficient for years, should none other be proffered.

The minority of this Committee, not conceiving that it falls within their province to decide a question which requires close and minute investigation, do not offer an opinion on the subject of the division of the State.

Not having definite information as to the precise point where the dividing line will be drawn, they are unable to determine upon the relative claims of Benicia and Sacramento, in reference to their proper locality for the future Capital of one of the States, that is to be; and are further inclined to think, that perhaps neither would possess the desired requisites. They believe that the bold prominence claimed for the city of Sacramento, as the future Capital of the future northern State, is an assumption which may be well disputed by her sister city Marysville, whose claims are equal if not superior. But as your Committee were elected as Representatives of the People of the State of California, as it now exists, they do not feel competent to legislate for the people of an embryo State.

The people have justly complained of the frequency and expense of removals, and are now opposed to any agitation of this question. The minority of this Committee believe that the voice of the people should be heard and obeyed.

The Capital has already been removed seven times, and the expenses of the several removals, are at a low estimate as follows :

1. From Monterey to San Jose,	$1,100 00
2. From San Jose to Vallejo,	57,419 04
3. From Vallejo to San Jose,	348 00
4. From San Jose to Vallejo,	8,064 00
5. From Vallejo to Sacramento,	13,159 50
6. From Vallejo to Sacramento,	1,100 00
7. From Vallejo to Benicia,	12,000 00
Total,	$93,190 54

The above statistics, with the exception of the last two items, are compiled from the reports of the Comptroller, and a careful estimate of the per diem of members and officers during the adjournments, for the purposes of removal, and the extra mileage to the new Capitals. Various other items of expenditures, well known to persons attached to the Legislatures at the times of the several removals, cannot be accurately ascertained, and therefore are not stated, which would probably swell the amount to at least $150,000. Such reckless and profuse expenditures have justly rendered the removal of the Capital a by-word and reproach.

It is now proposed to remove the Capital for the eighth time ; the cost of which will be as follows :

The State gives up the present State House, worth	$27,000 00
Per diem of Members and Officers during the adjournment of seven days,	14,000 00
Extra Mileage to Sacramento,	4,472 00
Damage to furniture by removal,	1,000 00
	$46,472 00

The propositions of the citizens of the county and city of Sacramento, as referred to this committee, are exceedingly meagre. They proffer to the State a building to be used for the present session of the Legislature only ; thereby leaving the State officers at the close of the session, without accommodations, and the place of assembling for the next Legislature, a matter of indefinite conjecture. The State already possesses a State House sufficiently commodious, donated to her by the city of Benicia, so long as it may be used for State purposes ; and may have if she choose to accept the proposition of the citizens of Benicia, referred to this committee, secure and comfortable offices for the officers of State, so long as they may choose to occupy the same. The minority of this committee deem it impolitic to relinquish such substantial advantages, even for the proffered freedom and hospitality of the city of Sacramento.

In conclusion, the minority of this committee would recommend that the propositions of the citizens of Benicia, referred to this committee, be accepted.

H. B. KELLOGG,
B. C. WHITMAN,
Of the Select Committee.

The following message was received from the Governor with the accompanying documents from the Land Commissioners of California.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
Benicia, January 14, 1854. }

To the Senate and Assembly of California :

I have the honor herewith to transmit two communications from the Board of Land Commissioners, organized under the provisions of an Act approved May 18th, 1853, to dispose of the State's interest in certain property within the limits of the city of San Francisco, and defined by the Act of March 26, 1851.

The amendments to the existing law suggested by the Commissioners are deemed important and necessary, and if speedily considered and adopted by the Legislature, will enable the Board, in a few months, to dispose of the whole property, at its full value and to the benefit of the State.

JOHN BIGLER.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., }

His Excellency JOHN BIGLER,
Governor of California.

SIR: In addition to the recommendations made in our report to the Legislature, we would recommend, (if it meet your views,) that this Board be permitted to sell property as often as once a month, and that the amount of sale be left in the discretion of the Commission, provided the same do not exceed the sum of five hundred thousand dollars at any one sale.

This, we think, would facilitate the disposition of the State property, and at the same time enable the State to realize its full value, as surely as it now does under the present law.

Very respectfully, your obedient servants,

L. PICKERING,
J. T. LOVE.

To the Hon. the Legislature of the State of California :

The undersigned, Commissioners appointed under the Act of the Legislature of the 18th May, 1853, "To provide for the sale of the interests of the State of California in the property within the water line front of the city of San Francisco, as defined in and by the Act entitled 'An Act to provide for the disposition of certain property in the State of California,' passed March 26, 1851," respectfully report—

That they organized the Board on the 31st day of May last, pursuant to the Act, and proceeded to ascertain the interest of the State in the lands bounded by Jackson street on the north, Front street on the east, Washington street on the south, and Montgomery street on the west, and came to the conclusion that the State was the owner of the land in fee, with the right to immediate possession, and advertised to sell "All the right, title, and interest of the State" therein, on the 10th day of August, which sale was afterwards postponed to the 12th day of September.

Prior to the opening of the sale on that day, the Commissioners and Auctioneer were severally restrained by the service of five injunctions, issued out of the Superior Court for the city of San Francisco, three of which are still pending.

These injunctions were deemed by the Board to be illegal and void, under section 15 of said Act, and the undersigned, through auctioneer, proceeded to sell, regardless of the injunctions; and after having sold one lot, they, together with the auctioneer, were arrested by the Sheriff of San Francisco county, upon orders issued out of the same Court, and detained in custody five days.

In the meantime, on the application of the Commissioners and auctioneer, a writ of habeas corpus was allowed by the Hon. Alexander Wells, one of the Justices of the Supreme Court, by virtue of which, they were brought before him, and by their counsel demanded a discharge, which was refused, and were held to answer for the contempt before the Superior Court.

The decision of this Court, in its effect, nullified the section of the Act referred to, by declaring it unconstitutional and void, and that the parties in custody were guilty of contempt. No fine, or other penalty, however, was imposed, and their discharge directed to be entered. The sale, in the meantime, having been adjourned from day to day. The Commissioners sold on the 5th day of October, one lot not covered by injunctions.

On the 20th of October, (the sale having been continued, and two of the injunctions modified,) the auctioneer, as was directed, sold ten lots, completing the sale of one entire block, amounting, in the aggregate, to the sum of one hundred and forty-three thousand seven hundred dollars. The purchaser of one of these lots failed to comply with the terms of sale, thereby reducing the amount to one hundred and twenty-three thousand seven hundred dollars. This lot was resold on the 28th of December, on account of and at the expense of the purchaser. The Board having received numerous solicitations from the Federal officers to withhold from sale so much of the Custom House block as was advertised, came to the conclusion that it might be conducive to the interests of the State to authorize the sale of that block to the General Government, and therefore turned their attention to the disposition of other property, and suggest that some officer be empowered by the Legislature to dispose of the property to the General Government, if required for Custom House purposes.

While the other injunctions were pending, the sale was continued until the 26th day of October, when the same was postponed, the Court not having decided the injunctions. The property embraced in the injunctions still pending is bounded by Jackson, Sansome, Washington, and Montgomery streets.

The plaintiffs in these actions upon which injunctions issued do not claim under leases from military officers of the General Government, but, as they allege, under good and valid grants, and as they also allege that the property was reclaimed from the overflowing of the tide previous to the admission of California into the Union, whereby their titles were established.

The Board had no power under the Act to test the validity of these claims, except by resort to litigation—a measure desirable to be avoided if possible.

The lands which were next advertised for sale, are bounded on the north by Broadway, on the east by Davis, on the south by Pacific, and on the west by Sansome streets; also, all between Jackson, Drumm, Washington, and Front streets, the greater portion of which was struck off by the auctioneer on the 28th day of December, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of three hundred and fifty thousand and four hundred and seventy-five dollars. Three of the lots were however not taken by the purchasers. The aggregate amount of sales, up to January 1, 1854, is four hundred and eighty-one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five dollars. For seven thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars, of which (the difference between the price bid for the lot, on the 20th of October, and the price which it sold for on the 28th of December,) a suit has been instituted.

The total expenses of the Commissioners, including the salaries of the Board and Secretary, rent, furniture, fuel, stationery, advertising in the papers required by law, printing catalogues of sales and daily proceedings, as also required by law, counsel fees, maps and other incidental expenses, amount to the sum of twenty-two thousand seven hundred and ninety-six dollars, a full report of which, more in detail, has been filed with the Comptroller after each sale. The Act constituting the Board empowered the Commissioners to enter upon and take possession of all property and interests of property of whatever description, of the State of California "within the water-line front of the city of San Francisco." They therefore deem it proper to state that there will be due from the city of San Francisco, from the sale of lots made by the city on the 26th day of December, 1853, in twenty days from that date the sum of two hundred and ninety-eight thousand four hundred and thirty-seven dollars, as the share of the State arising from such sale, provided all the lots shall be taken.

The sales of the Commissioners have been confined to the property within the Government Reserve, the extent of all of which has not been ascertained for want of powers in the Board to send for persons and papers, a large amount of which remains unsold, which, together with the reversionary interest in other property, will probably add to the resources of the State one million and a half of dollars.

It may be proper, perhaps, to add, that the attention of the Attorney General has been called by us to the Leidesdorff estate, and will, no doubt, receive his early consideration, inasmuch as it is of great value, and is believed to have escheated to the State.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

LEVI HERMANCÉ, President.
L. PICKERING,
J. S. LOVE,
GEO. O'DOHERTY,
JOSEPH HOPKINS.

The following message was received from the Governor, transmitting two communications from the State Treasurer, and the opinion of the Attorney General in reference to the reception of State Prison bonds for State dues.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
Benicia, January 14, 1854. }

To the Senate and Assembly of California :

I have the honor herewith to transmit a communication from Hon. S. A. McMeans, Treasurer of State, in relation to State Prison Bonds received by his predecessor in office, in payment for property sold by the Commissioners on the 28th of December, 1853.

The late State Treasurer has received about ninety-two thousand dollars in State Prison Bonds, which the present Treasurer refuses to receive for reasons set forth in his communication.

In order to arrive at a correct understanding of this subject, it will be necessary to examine the Funding Acts of 1851, 1852 and 1853, the Act authorizing the erection of a State Prison, as well as the Act organizing a Board to dispose of the State's interest in property within the limits of the city of San Francisco, as defined by the Act of March 26, 1851.

By the 10th section of the Funding Act of 1851, it is provided that "the proceeds of the sales of all lands now held, or that may be hereafter acquired by this State in her own right, except those reserved by the Constitution for School purposes, shall be set apart as a Sinking Fund, to be applied to the redemption of said bonds.

The 8th section of the Funding Act of 1852, sets apart for the redemption of the bonds authorized to be issued, the surplus remaining in the treasury after the bonds authorized by the Act of 1851, shall have been redeemed.

The 10th section of the Act of May 18, 1853, which authorizes the sale of the property, also sets apart the cash proceeds for the redemption of outstanding bonds, as follows, viz :

"The ~~cash~~ proceeds of all sales shall forever be and remain

First, A sinking fund, for the payment and redemption of the principal and interest of the three per cent. bonds of the State, and of the seven per cent. civil bonds, to be applied to such purposes as hereinafter provided, and in accordance with existing law ; and Second, After such payment and redemption, the balance, if any, shall be paid into the treasury to the credit of the general fund."

It is true that the 7th section of the Act of May 18th, 1853, authorizes "cash or the civil bonds of the State of California, or the civil warrants of the Comptroller of State on the Treasury," to be received in payment for the property sold.

This Act, it will be observed, was passed May 18, 1853. The language of the Act, in regard to payments for the property directed to be sold, is therefore to be interpreted with reference to that date, and in view of the antecedent legislation of the State in reference to her civil debt.

It is true that in an enlarged sense of the term "civil," all the bonds issued by a State are civil bonds, but it is also true that the term is used in a more restricted and limited sense ; and the extent of its meaning in this case, is to be derived from a review of the legislation of the State in regard to its public debt, prior to the passage of the Act providing for the erection of a State Prison.

This legislation exhibits a series of Acts, all looking to the same end, viz : provision for the payment of past debts or debts to arise within a given future period.

The first of the series is the Act of April 29th, 1851, entitled "An Act to fund the debt of the State." Section 1st provides "that with a view to fund the present debt, etc.

The second Act passed May 1st, 1852, is entitled "An Act to fund the indebtedness of the State which has accrued, or may accrue, from April 29, 1851, to Dec. 31, 1852, inclusive, and to provide for the payment of the three per cent. bonds."

The fifth section provides that "from and after the passage of this Act, all persons having any indebtedness of the State, which has been or may be contracted for civil purposes, since April 29, 1851, up to December 31, 1852, inclusive, in the form of warrants drawn by the Comptroller," etc., "shall receive bonds in exchange therefor."

The third in the series is an Act passed May 4, 1852, entitled "An Act supplementary to an Act to fund the debt of the State," passed April 29, 1851.

The fourth is an Act passed May 17, 1853, entitled "An Act supplementary to an Act to fund the indebtedness of the State which has accrued or may accrue, etc. approved May 1, 1852." Section first of this Act provides that "with a view to fund so much of the civil debt of the State, which has accrued and remains unpaid since Dec. 31, 1852, and so much as may accrue up to June 30, 1853, inclusive, etc., the Treasurer shall cause to be prepared a sufficient number of bonds, etc.

This Act is the last of the series composed of Acts and Supplementary Acts, each passed with direct reference to the one which preceded it, and all having in view the payment of indebtedness incurred prior to the passage of the several Acts; the last of which makes provision for the civil debt up to June 30, 1853, leaving all indebtedness subsequently incurred to be provided for by the Legislature.

By this series of laws we have the civil debt of the State clearly defined, both as to its character and extent.

At the time of the passage of the Act of May 18, 1853, the Prison Bonds were not a subsisting debt, nor indeed could they have been issued so as to form any portion of the "civil debt," on or before June 30, 1853.

In view of the fact that, by Acts passed in the years 1851, 1852 and 1853, the proceeds from the sales of this property were set apart for the redemption of the civil bonds issued prior to June 30, 1853, the Legislature, by the Act providing for the erection of a State Prison, authorized the collection of a special tax for the payment of the interest on the bonds to be issued, and annually, a portion of the principal.

The 15th section provides that "thirty days prior to the first Monday in July, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, and thirty days prior to the first Monday of July in each year thereafter, until the principal and interest of the debt hereby created shall be paid, the Treasurer of State shall publish in two newspapers in the city of San Francisco, a notice specifying the amount of money on hand, and set apart for the redemption of said bonds, and that he will receive proposals for the redemption of that amount of bonds until the first Monday of July next after the date of the publication of such notice.

The State Prison Act, therefore, not only provided for the payment of the accruing interest and ultimate redemption of the bonds, but also directs the time and manner of payment.

From these facts it is clearly evident that the Legislature did not intend by the provision in the Act of May 18, 1853, to authorize the reception of State Prison Bonds in payment for the property directed to be sold.

Another difficulty in the reception of these bonds presents itself. The 8th section of the Act of 1853, authorizing the erection of a State Prison provides, "that the payment to the contractor shall be made monthly; and for the purpose of ascertaining the amount due at the end of each month, it is herein made the duty of said Board of Commissioners, to ascertain and certify the same to the Comptroller of State, who shall thereupon issue his warrants on the Treasurer of State, in the sum thus certified, payable out of the bonds herein provided for; Provided, that the sums so paid shall not exceed eighty-five per cent. on the amount actually expended, as certified by the Board of Commissioners, until the completion of the prison provided to be erected by this Act, unless otherwise ordered by Legislative enactment.

Fifteen per cent. or $18,900 00 of the amount actually expended, the above proviso requires to be reserved.

This proviso, however, seems to have been overlooked in the issuance of bonds for the work executed, and although the building has not as yet been completed, $126,000 00 of the entire amount has already been paid, without any reservation as above directed. Of these bonds, $18,900 00, or the fifteen per cent. have been, or may be hereafter, received into the State Treasury.

Should the building, when completed, not be received by the Commissioners for non-compliance with the contract, the validity of these bonds, would at once be questioned, and their market value greatly depreciated.

Having conferred with the present State Treasurer, when the question was first raised as to the reception of these bonds, and expressed the opinion that they could not be legally received in payment for the property of the State sold by the Commissioners, I have deemed it a duty to set forth fully my views on the subject.

The following message was received from the Governor:

I have the honor herewith to transmit a copy of the report of G. W. Ryckman, Flour Inspector of the port of San Francisco.

JOHN BIGLER.

Report, on motion, laid upon the table.

The following message was received from the Governor :

I have the honor herewith to transmit a copy of a communication from the Board of California Land Commissioners, in relation to the present actual value of certain property in San Francisco, known as the Custom House Block.

The Commissioners, it will be seen, estimate the value of the property on which the General Government desire to erect a Custom House, in the city of San Francisco, at five hundred thousand dollars.

It is proper here to state that the estimate is deemed by many well informed citizens, as very reasonable, and that the property at any time would command a greater amount in cash at public sale.

Five hundred thousand dollars is certainly a large amount to be at this time diverted from the means relied upon to liquidate the debt of the State, and relieve our people from burthensome taxation, and I therefore hope that the State's interest in this valuable property will not be released by her agents until it can be done without prejudice to the credit of California and the welfare of her people.

In view also of the fact that this property, by solemn acts of legislation stands pledged for existing State indebtedness, it is at least questionable whether, in justice to creditors of the State, it can be donated to the General Government until the debt, for which it has been pledged, shall have been paid.

A large amount of the existing debt, as is well known, was incurred by the State in defending her people, in the years 1850 and 1851, against hostile Indians, the annual interest upon which now amounts to the sum of $67,495 69.

This debt, principal and interest, it is maintained, should in justice to California, be assumed in some form during the present session of Congress.

The assumption of the war debt and the restoration of the "civil fund," would, it is believed, place the finances of the State in a condition to justify the donation of this property to the General Government, and still preserve inviolate the pledged faith of the State.

But should Congress fail or refuse to sanction the just claims of the State, the agents of California, although anxious in this matter to favor the General Government and facilitate the erection of public buildings, will be compelled to carefully husband and judiciously apply all her resources until her entire indebtedness shall have been paid.

It is true that other States of the Confederacy have unconditionally released to the General Government their title to property for similar purposes, but there is no evidence that the property so released, as in this case, was of greater value, or that circumstances existed imperatively requiring the State to guard carefully all the sources of revenue, and to apply the proceeds in payment of liabilities previously incurred.

The history and condition of California are indeed peculiar. Her exigencies have hitherto been without parallel, and in legislating for her wants, it is therefore clear that we cannot be guided in all cases by precedents established in the common course of events in the other States of the Confederacy.

It is deemed proper in this connection to state that the correspondence from the Secretary of the Treasury, in regard to the property in question, addressed to the Executive, as stated in a communication presented to the Senate on the 18th inst., has never been received by me.

JOHN BIGLER.

The following is the communication referred to by the Governor :

SAN FRANCISCO, January 7, 1854.

His Excellency JOHN BIGLER :

SIR :

In reply to your letter of the 5th inst., in which you ask the Commissioners for the sale of State property in this city, to forward you an estimate of the value of that portion of the Government Reserve known as the "Custom House Block," we would say that we have had the same under consideration, and unanimously coincide in the opinion that it is worth five hundred thousand dollars.

JOHN Y. LIND,
Secretary.

On motion of Mr. Letcher, the House agreed to appoint a Committee of free conference upon the bill to fix the per diem pay of the Officers of the Senate and Assembly, and appointed Messrs. Letcher, Bostwick, and Herbert, said Committee.

Mr. Anderson, made the following report :

The Committee on Engrossment have examined and found correctly engrossed, an Act in relation to the supplies of fuel and other contingent expenses of the Legislature.

An Act to repeal an Act to provide for the better publication of official and legal notices, approved May 3, 1853.

An Act to amend an Act concerning Sheriffs, passed April 29, 1851.

Also, Joint Resolution relative to the establishment of a State Agricultural Institute.

Mr. Herbert, Chairman, made the following report :

The Committee of Ways and Means to whom was referred the Special Message of the Governor, with the correspondence of the State Treasurer and Attorney General in reference to the action of the late Treasurer, Hon. Richard Roman, for receiving "State Prison Bonds" in payment of property sold on the 28th day of December last, in San Francisco, by the State Land Commissioners," having had the same under consideration, and having given the said Message of the Governor, together with the correspondence of the State Treasurer and Attorney General, due attention, beg leave to submit the following report.

The first point at issue seems to be whether or not the State Prison Bonds are a part of the Public Debt. Governor Bigler argues that they are not, because they were issued subsequent to a series of Acts for Funding the State indebtedness, clearly defining, as he says, the character and extent of the Civil Debt. But your committee have failed to see the distinction between the State Prison Bonds issued under the Act of May 11, 1853, and the bonds of the Funded debt of the State. The provisions of the various Acts under which both are issued are precisely of the same character containing the same pledges and guaranties, and alike prescribing the manner of paying the interest, and the time of their ultimate redemption.

The issues raised by the present State Treasurer, are,

First : That the reception of these Bonds in the manner complained of, was an act of bad faith towards the bond holders of 1851.

Second : That the proceeds of the sale should have gone into the General Fund.

The first objection is met by the answer of the Attorney General to which we respectfully refer you, and in answer to the second, your committee are of opinion that the contribution to either the Sinking or General Fund from this source, would not have added very materially to their respective amounts, for if the State Prison Bonds had been refused, other Civil Bonds would have been used in payment of the property sold.

Your committee have therefore come to the conclusion, that the State Prison Bonds, having the same form and validity as the Bonds of the Funded Debt, stand precisely upon the same footing, and so long as the clause contained in the seventh section of the Act of May 18, 1853, providing for the sale of the State property remains in force, neither can, nor ought they to be refused in payment for property sold under this Act.

P. T. HERBERT, Chairman.

Mr Bostwick made the following report :

The Committee on Accounts and Expenditures, to whom was referred Assembly bill No. 19, for an Act to provide for the salary of the Governor's Private Secretary, and to make the same payable out of the General Fund,

Report that they have prepared a substitute, which they herewith submit in lieu of the original bill, and recommend its passage.

They have also considered with much care, Assembly bill No. 26, for an Act to reduce the salaries of State officers, and the pay of members of the Legislature ; that in view of the fact that the newly elected State officers have recently been installed into office, whose terms of office will not expire until after the close of the session ; that the various District and Supreme Judges of the State hold their positions for a series of years, and cannot be effected by any Act of the present Legislature ; that the pay of members of the Legislature is the only matter left for our consideration, that comes immediately within the action of the present Legislature.

And your committee are of opinion that the per diem of members is only in accordance with the rates of living at the capital. Therefore your committee recommend that the bill do not pass.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JNO. HENRY BOSTWICK, Chairman.

Benicia, Jan. 31st, 1854. }

To the Senate and Assembly of California;

I have the honor herewith to transmit a copy of an important report received on the 24th inst. from the Superintendent of Public Instruction. The suggestions therein contained are worthy of immediate and careful consideration.

In this connection, I deem it a duty again to urge upon you the great importance of legislative action, in order to secure to the State all the lands donated by Congress for educational purposes.

The Act of 1852, which authorizes School Warrants to be issued, was passed to secure the proceeds of the sales of the five hundred thousand acres for the great object designed by the framers of the Constitution—the education of the children of the State.

These lands, donated by Act of Congress, approved Septembr 4, 1841, were originally granted for purposes of internal improvement, but were diverted by our Constitution to the support of Common Schools. As yet, but a small portion has been surveyed; and it is held by agents of the General Government, that, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved March 3, 1853, School Land Warrants, issued by the State, cannot be located on unsurveyed lands; under this construction the State will be delayed in her selections, perhaps, for many years, and, indeed, may eventually lose the greater part of the funds.

Is the State to be deprived of this fund at a time when a general and comprehensive system of Public Instruction is so much needed? is the education of the children of the State, now numbering tens of thousands, to be subject to the delays and uncertainties incident to the action of the Federal Government? These are questions of vital importance to the people of California, intimately connected, as they are with their present interests and future welfare. I hope, therefore, that the Legislature will, at an early day, memorialize Congress to confirm, by special Act, the past legislation of the State in relation to the selection of the five hundred thousand acres of school lands: and to remove the restrictions which at present retard her progress, and are inimical to her interests and the future welfare of her people.

Such a policy can work no injury or hardship to the actual settler, for the reason that the lands selected can be disposed of by the State, under your direction, on the same terms as now exacted by the General Government, and with less actual expense to the purchaser, than under the existing laws of the United States. If the price be fixed at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, the school lands unsold, including the 16th and 36th sections, will yield six million eight hundred and forty-six thousand nine hundred and fifty-five dollars, which at seven per cent., will afford an annual interest of four hundred and seventy-nine thousand two hundred and eighty-six dollars and eighty-five cents, a sum quite sufficient to sustain a system of popular education superior to that of any of the older States of the Confederacy.

The plan proposed by the Superintendent would give to persons of small means an opportunity to secure homes at a trifling amount of annual interest, until prepared, at some future day, to pay the principal.

This plan, it is believed, would favor the interests of the actual settler, and is consistent with the requirements of the Constitution, which direct that the interest only, shall be annually applied for the benefit of Common Schools; leaving the principal intact and a perpetual fund for their support.

Should, however, the present Legislature fail or neglect to adopt proper measures, in reference to these lands, there is great reason to fear that the State will be deprived of the greater part of them, and the cause of education within the State be seriously retarded. The proceeds of these lands, unless immediate action be taken to secure their selection, instead of constituting a fund for the education of the children of the State, as designed by the Constitution, will accumulate in the Treasury of the nation, now full to overflowing, and be forever lost to the rising generation.

To secure the selection of these lands, and preserve the educational fund, is the object of this communication, and it is hoped that it will incite you to give the subject immediate and favorable consideration.

JOHN BIGLER.

The Chair decided that the previous question having been moved and seconded, no other motion, save a call of the House, could be entertained.

The following message was received from the Governor :

To the Senate and Assembly of California :

I have the honor herewith to transmit a copy of the report of the agents appointed by me to select the lands donated to the State, by an Act of Congress, approved March 3, 1853, for a seminary of learning and public buildings.

The lands appurtenant to the Mission of San Luis Rey, in the county of San Diego, it will be seen, have been selected ; but the precise number of acres has not, and, perhaps, will not be ascertained, until after survey by the proper officer.

By reference to the appendix to my last Annual Message it will be seen that these lands, until released to the State by Gen. Hitchcock, were in the occupancy of the General Government—the buildings as a garrison, and the surrounding lands as pasturage for animals belonging to the army.

The Act under which these lands are acquired authorizes locations to be made by individual settlers upon unsurveyed public lands, without discriminating against the State in making selections for the purposes named in the Act. It is, therefore, presumed that the fact that these lands have not been as yet surveyed cannot interfere with the rights of the State in the premises, further than to require the selections made to conform to sectional lines after the survey shall have been completed.

In order, however, to remove all doubt or difficulty hereafter as to the title of the State to the lands mentioned, the Legislature should adopt such measures as may be deemed advisable to cause the mission lands to be surveyed by the United States Surveyor General at the earliest practicable day.

The lands donated by the 18th section of the Act of Congress, above referred to, will, if directed by the Legislature, be selected in a short time and the facts duly reported.

The land already selected is, unquestionably, very valuable, and present legislation for its protection would seem to be necessary in order to secure its appropriation to the important objects for which it was donated by Congress.

JOHN BIGLER.

The communication from the State Treasurer was read, and,

On motion, the message of the Governor, and the communication from the State Treasurer, were referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Your committee are satisfied from the evidence presented for their consideration, that the precinct "Althouse Creek" is in California, and from the fact that the present representative from Klamath county owes his election to the vote of the above named precinct, they are led to believe that Walter Van Dyke was unjustly ousted from his seat by a resolution of the Assembly, passed February 16, 1853, on the ground that the above named precinct was in Oregon.

Your committee are of opinion that the per diem of members is given as remuneration for services rendered, and inasmuch as said Van Dyke received his mileage to and from his home, and per diem whilst serving as member, he can have no further claim when those services ceased; therefore your committee recommend that the bill be indefinitely postponed.

Your committee have also examined Assembly bill No. 122, entitled an Act for the relief of the Stockton Journal, and are of opinion that if the performance of the services for which compensation is claimed was duly authorized by law, that to the proper State officers, and not the Legislature, should the parties rendering such service apply for remuneration; if not, then your committee are of opinion that said claim should not be paid, and recommend the indefinite postponement of the bill.

The Committee on Education, to whom was referred an Act in relation to the Public Schools in the city of Sacramento, would report that all the benefits sought by this proposed Act may be secured and enjoyed under the present general school law of this State; each city has the right to regulate and control the detail of all its Public Schools, conforming to a few requirements of general application throughout the State.

Your committee are of opinion, that the minor regulations relating to Common Schools are properly left in the discretion of the city authorities, thus rendering special legislation unnecessary, and people in different parts of the State having diverse wants, to establish such subordinate regulations as their peculiar exigencies may demand.

Further, this Act proposes to incorporate a Board of School Commissioners in Sacramento, and so is, perhaps, obnoxious to our Constitution, which allows special incorporations only for municipal purposes.

In consideration of all which your committee would report the bill back, and recommend that the same do not pass.

D. R. ASHLEY, and that in the 16th line of the preamble, as printed, the word, "purposes" be struck out, and the word "agricultural" be changed to "agriculture."

And your committee would recommend the passage of the Joint Resolutions with the preamble.

Mr. Tivy, chairman, made the following report :

The Joint Committee on Enrolled Bills have carefully examined Assembly Joint Resolutions in reference to the Board of Land Commissioners holding a session at the city of Los Angeles, and find the same correctly enrolled.

Mr. James, chairman, made the following report :

The committee acting in obedience with the instructions of the House, have had under consideration the propriety and justice of the members of the Legislature receiving additional mileage, said to have accrued by the late removal from Benicia to Sacramento city, and beg leave to submit the following report :

The undersigned, a majority of your committee, are of the opinion that but one mileage was contemplated by the Legislature, our predecessors fixing the same, or in other words, mileage to but one capitol during the same session.

If this position be correct, that our predecessors constituted and fixed mileage to but one capitol, then it follows, as a matter of course, that if we are to receive mileage to a second capitol, we must first constitute and fix that mileage ; to do the latter, we believe, involves a principle which is unprecedented in the annals of legislation. We deny, or, at least, doubt the right of this or any other Legislature to do any act and receive pay for the same, the pay for which was not fixed or provided for by a prior Legislature. We deny the power of any Legislature to claim a reward for any service which might be performed solely for the pay ; to illustrate—if the members of this Legislature can justly demand mileage for one removal, they can demand it for twenty removals during the same session ; how this latter proposition, that this body can remove ad libitum, and for each removal can demand and receive mileage, is an absurdity too gross to need refutation. If it be contended that this body have a right to remove at pleasure, and receive mileage for each such removal, then we think we may well sing the Corsair's song :

“ Ours the wild life in tumult still to range,
From toil to rest, and joy in every change.”

That a majority may impose hardships upon a minority is one thing, and the rights of the people is quite another ; the people have paid one mileage to one capitol, and we think should not be required to pay another during the same session.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN C. JAMES,
Chairman of Committee.
JOHN H. BOSTWICK,
A. J. HOUGHTALING,
SENECA EWER.

Mr. Hunter made the following report :

The undersigned, a minority of the committee on mileage, to whom was referred the question of allowing mileage from Benicia to Sacramento, would respectfully make the following report :

That by law the present Legislature has no control over the subject, it being fixed by law that members shall receive eight dollars for every twenty miles traveled in going to and returning from the place at which the session is held.

It is believed that, under the law, those only are entitled to additional mileage whose distance of travel has been increased consequent upon the removal of the capital from Benicia to this place. This is considered by the undersigned as not only legal but equitable. The question of removal is not properly involved in that of mileage ; but the proposition is narrowed down to this, should those whose distance from their residences has been increased by removal, thus giving them a legal claim for additional mileage, have embarrassments thrown in the way of their receiving that which is legally and equitably their due.

And an Act supplementary to the Act incorporating the City of Benicia.

Mr. Spencer made the following report :

The Committee on State Hospitals, to whom was referred the report of the Trustees and Physicians of the State Marine Hospital, having carefully examined the same, submit the following report :

The Committee find that the gross receipts for the year amount to the sum of $143,725, of which, only $22,146 was in cash—the balance being in San Francisco City and State bonds—the aggregate realized in cash from all sources being $125,457 21.

The expenditures and indebtedness for the same period amount to the sum of $155,456 21, thus showing an excess of expenditures above receipts of $30,000 yet unpaid.

From the Physicians report, it is found that 2,801 patients were admitted during the year, of which number 1,556 were admitted during the last half of the year, of whom 951 were from the City of San Francisco—336 remained in hospital at the date of the report.

The average expense to the State of each patient is found to have been $55 50 showing an increased expense of $12 25 for each patient when compared with the average under the old system of hospitals.

The proportionate mortality is evidently decreasing yearly, having fallen as low as 12 3-4 per cent. for the year, and 10 per cent. for the last six months; but slightly greater than the average mortality of the hospitals of New York and Massachusetts.

The Committee have also carefully considered the resolution instructing them to report estimates of the contingent fund necessary to be appropriated for State Hospitals. Basing our conclusions upon the exhibit of expenses for the past year, we estimate for the Insane Asylum $35,000 in addition to the fund derived from the commutation tax; for the State Marine Hospital an appropriation of $75,000 will be required in addition to the sums that may be received from commutation tax and gaming license.

The Committee would further recommend that, in addition to the above estimated appropriation for the State Marine Hospital, an appropriation be made sufficient to pay the outstanding debts against it on the 1st of January last.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

SPENCER,
HARRIS,
AYLETT,
GILBERT.

An Act to abolish the Board of Supervisors in the County of Contra Costa; and

An Act to amend an Act concerning the Courts of Justice of this State and Judicial Officers, approved May 19, 1853.

Mr. Spencer, chairman, made the following report:

The Joint Select Committee, who were appointed to visit the State Marine Hospital and Insane Asylum, beg leave to report:

Your committee, in pursuance of their authority, visited San Francisco, and after a careful examination of the State Marine Hospital, and the mode of conducting the same, find the professional, as well as the police, department conducted in accordance with the law creating this institution.

The building now occupied for hospital purposes we found cleanly, well ventilated, suitably furnished, and capacious enough to meet the wants of the State. The general police of the establishment will bear a favorable comparison with the best regulated hospitals in the older States; while the mortality is no greater than that of New York or Boston in similar institutions.

When we take into consideration that many of the persons brought into the hospital are patients laboring under diseases contracted in passing through a tropical climate, and that they are greatly debilitated from the effect of a long sea voyage, and that none but the very worst cases are brought to the hospital, we take great pleasure in stating, that the result of the practice of the physicians attached to the hospital, has been highly flattering to their skill as medical men, and gratifying to all philanthropists. In short, the professional department, from our observation, and upon the examination of the records and prescription books, and upon inquiries of patients, is under the direction of gentlemen in whom we have every confidence, both as to integrity and professional ability, and we have every reason to believe that the physicians have discharged their duties faithfully, and with credit to the profession to which they belong. No well founded complaint has been adduced or sustained against them from an examination of the records and vouchers submitted to us, or other testimony within our knowledge; and we have every reason to commend both the skill of the physicians and the commendable financial management of the hospital.

Your committee is of the opinion, that some changes in the law regulating the affairs of the hospital may with advantage be made. At present, the two resident physicians are co-equal in power, which may possibly be the cause of a conflict of opinion as to the kind and necessity of certain supplies for the hospital, and auditing bills for the same. To avoid this difficulty, we would recommend that there be one principal resident physician, whose duty it shall be to procure such necessities as the institution may require, and audit all bills for the same; and one assistant resident physician, who shall perform the duties incumbent upon the other, except as to the qualification above stated.

In the selection of visiting physicians, it is of the greatest importance that one of them, at least, should be thoroughly skilled in surgery. It is to be presumed that all graduates in medicine have devoted an appropriate amount of time, while students, to surgery; but in the profession, it is equally well known, that a fondness for the study of one branch of the profession, may, with practice, render a physician more skilful in a particular department than in another.

Your committee would suggest, in view of the great expense attending the maintenance of a large hospital in the city of San Francisco, and believing that said expense is not justified by the finances of the State, and true economy would be promoted, would recommend the passage of a law abolishing the State Marine Hospital at the expiration of twelve months, and providing that each county shall be at the cost of maintaining their sick, and further to provide that the commutation tax shall be divided pro capita to the different counties. The reasons for this recommendation are as follows: At the present time, the sick at the hospital belong chiefly to three or four counties of the State—many counties not sending any—thus placing a tax upon counties which by geographical position are deprived of receiving any of the benefits of the tax.

Three-fourths of the patients have been sent by the city authorities. This may arise, and no doubt is so to a great extent, from the fact, that many arrive in that city from the various counties in the State, sick and destitute, who have not provided themselves with the necessary permit from the County Judge of their last residence, and consequently appear as San Francisco city patients.

FINANCES.

The financial condition of the hospital will be found, in detail, by reference to the report of the Trustees submitted to the Legislature, embracing the receipts and expenditures from January 1, 1853, to January 1, 1854.

BUILDING.

Your committee have examined the buildings formerly occupied for the Hospital, and find that they were totally unfit for the accommodation of sick persons—some of the rooms being deluged with water in every rain, and the building not being ceiled or plastered, the winds had free access through all parts of the building. The cost of the house, with out-houses, was $1,375 per month, while the present building, which is capacious and comfortable, costs but $1,400. The per cent. of deaths in the old building was 18-100ths, while in the new it is but 10-100ths, showing that the change has been highly conducive to the successful treatment of patients.

Your committee have also visited the Insane Asylum at Stockton, and after a careful examination into the manner in which it is conducted and managed, are satisfied that the great design contemplated in its establishment is fully appreciated by the officers having it in charge. Taking into consideration the short time that has elapsed since the conception of this work, and the difficulties that have encumbered the undertaking, great credit is due the managers for the indefatigable energy displayed in thus far forwarding its completion.

In accordance with the law establishing the Asylum, the Trustees have caused to be built, upon the site originally intended for the State Hospital, a two story brick building. This building was completed in October last, and the patients removed into it from the insecure and uncomfortable quarters in the city. This change has been found to be very beneficial, as the patients now occupy large well ventilated rooms, and are allowed the exercise which in a great measure was denied them, necessarily, while in the city. Nothing advances the recovery of these unfortunate creatures so much as supplying their physical wants in a liberal manner, and surrounding them with appliances of comfort and convenience.

Your committee take pleasure in reporting that, in all these particulars, they found no deficiencies, except such as arise from the want of time to produce them, or a more liberal endowment. The number of patients has increased rapidly during the past six months, and the only obstacle of moment that impedes the highly successful operation of the institution arises from the limited room afforded by the present building. It is inadequate to the wants and proper treatment of the inmates. Their number is so great as to render the necessary and indispensable classification entirely out of the question. The building is sufficiently large to accommodate eighty patients, whereas there is an average of over one hundred.

The city of Stockton has closed and deeded to the State the street which divided the Asylum grounds, thus removing the only impediment in the way of extending the Asylum according to the original plan.

The financial condition of the Asylum can be better understood by a reference to the recent report of the Trustees than by any abstract presented here, and it is only necessary to add, in this connection, that the recent appropriation of $15,000 cleared it of its debts to February 1st ult.

Your committee would recommend that appropriations be made for enclosing and fencing the Asylum grounds, believing that it would result in a great saving to the State by supplying those domestic products to the purchase of which a large portion of the expenditure is now applied, besides affording to patients the exercise that is so beneficial during their convalescence. The yard surrounding the building was improved solely by inmates, under the direction of the Superintendent. Walks are laid, trees and shrubbery planted, and, we believe, that all the work necessary to carry on the business of the farm will be supplied by inmates, under the proper direction.

The great good which this charity is producing, and the increasing number of patients presenting for treatment, demonstrates the necessity for fostering and rendering as effective as possible this means of restoring the lunatic to reason and usefulness. Other States deem institutions of this kind the perfection of philanthropical effort, and are proud of the perfection to which they are brought. They do not esteem them too highly.

During the short time that this institution has been in operation, all classes, conditions and professions of society have been recipients of its benefits. From this institution there has been discharged 184 persons cured, out of 284, the whole number admitted since its establishment in 1850. This has been effected with the difficulties enumerated as above. They are the imperfections that must necessarily attend recently established institutions of this kind, and your committee believe that this result will compare favorably with institutions that have been longer established, and would urge the success which has thus far attended our efforts in alleviating the condition of this unfortunate class of society, as a reason for the early completion of the improvements recommended by the trustees in their report.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
 Sacramento City, March 18, 1854. }

To the Assembly of the State of California :

I have this day approved the following Acts which originated in the Assembly, viz :

An Act to organize the county of Plumas, out of a portion of the territory of the county of Butte.

An Act to abolish the Board of Supervisors for the county of Marin.

An Act to extend an Act for the protection of Game to the county of Colusa.

Also, a joint resolution in favor of additional mail facilities for California and Oregon.

JOHN BIGLER.

To the Assembly of California :

In compliance with a resolution which passed the Assembly on the 17th instant, requesting "the Governor to inform the Assembly whether the vouchers and papers necessary to a correct understanding of the claims of the State upon the General Government, in relation to expenses incurred in suppression of Indian hostilities, have been forwarded to our Senators and Representatives in Congress;" I have the honor to state, that under the provisions of an Act authorising the State Treasurer to issue War Bonds, &c., approved May 3d, 1852, a Board of Examiners, consisting of the Treasurer and Comptroller, to which the Secretary of State has since been added, was appointed to examine the accounts and vouchers for expenses incurred in the several Indian expeditions. This Board, up to the 20th of December, 1853, had examined and allowed claims to the amount of $924,259 65, for which War Bonds of the State of California, bearing an interest of seven per cent. per annum, have been issued. By a joint resolution, approved March 1st, 1853, the Board of Examiners are directed to make out and present to the Legislature a statement of said accounts, together with all the correspondence and circumstances relating to the origin, prosecution and conclusion of the Indian wars in this State, prosecuted by authority of the same, and generally such information as may be proper to be submitted to the Congress of the United States in order that the debt thus assumed by this State, and the bonds issued thereupon, may be provided for by the General Government, &c.

Up to the present time the report required by the Legislature has not been made by the Board of Examiners, for the reasons stated in their communication herewith transmitted.

But appreciating the vast importance and necessity of having these claims, and the evidences of their correctness and justice, presented at as early a day as possible to Congress, I caused the petitions, affidavits, communications, and other evidences in their support, to be carefully prepared and forwarded to Washington. The entire correspondence and papers connected with the Mariposa, First and Second El Dorado, Utah, Los Angeles, Clear Lake, Klamath, Trinity, Monterey and Siskiyou Expeditions against hostile Indians, have been collected and arranged so as to form a complete and minute chronological history, in which all the facts, incidents and correspondence of each are separately and distinctly set forth. These papers, collected during the past year at considerable expense and labor, consisting of one hundred and forty-three written communications, and over twenty printed documents.

Many of which had to be copied and arranged, have been entrusted to the care of Hon. Winslow S. Pierce, late Comptroller of State, who, as a member of the Board of Examiners, had acquired a thorough knowledge of all the facts of the case, and was, therefore, eminently qualified to explain, satisfactorily, the whole subject, not only to our delegation at Washington, but to the committee appointed on the part of Congress to investigate these claims. Dr. Pierce is now in Washington City with all the papers necessary to a correct understanding of the war claims of the State, except the vouchers. It is believed that his intimate knowledge of the subject will enable him to make every explanation required, and thus render efficient aid to our delegation in securing the favorable action of Congress during the present session.

In conclusion, I would add that all the expenses necessarily incurred in collecting, copying, arranging and forwarding these papers to Washington City have been paid out of the Governor's Contingent Fund, no appropriation having been made by the last Legislature.

JOHN BIGLER.

Communication from the Board of Examiners of Indian War Claims was read, and,

On motion, referred, with the Governor's message, to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The following message was received from the Senate :

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the report of the Quartermaster and Adjutant General, for the year ending Dec. 15, 1853, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to submit the following report—

During the year of 1853, as by the report of the Assessors of the several counties, we find the State of California entitled to receive from the General Government about $15,000 worth of arms and accoutrements, with a cost to the State of about $3,000, and in connection would here say, that during the past year (1853) there has been organized, armed, and equipped twelve volunteer or independent companies, numbering an aggregate of 720 men. The arms with which these companies have been furnished, are those received from the General Government for the year 1852, and there now remains but a few arms at the State Arsenal. Aside from these independent or volunteer companies, there has been, comparatively, nothing done, by which the military force of the State could be ascertained.

Your committee consider the present militia law meagre in its provisions, and not what it should be, to guaranty to the State those privileges, which her population entitle her to, at the hands of the General Government, and in proof of this assertion, would say, that scarcely one half of the County Assessors gave any list at all of the persons of their county liable to do military duty ; and many of those sent in were so imperfect, that the officer to whom they were sent was compelled to examine them and correct their errors.

To remedy this, and many other similar errors, alike objectionable in their operation, of the present militia laws, your committee herewith transmit a bill, which they have caused to be framed, and which, after a thorough investigation, they believe will meet the hearty concurrence of this body, and further the objects desired to be obtained by a military organization.

Your committee find by reference to the United States law, passed March 2, 1803, that each State is compelled, through their Adjutant General, to report to the President of the United States, annually, of the condition of the militia of his State, their number, the number of arms, accoutrements, and ammunition, and to state what the condition of the whole military force of his State is in at the time his report is dated. Now, in order to comply with the provisions of this Act, and in order to receive from the General Government our proper quota of arms, your committee would suggest that the office of Quartermaster General be continued, believing, as we do, that the State will be benefited in a great degree thereby.

J. HUNT, Chairman.
GEO. McDONALD,
H. B. KELLOGG.

The following message was received from the Governor, with a communication from the Attorney General of the United States :

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
Sacramento City, March 24, 1854. }

To the Senate and Assembly of California :

On the 7th instant, I had the honor to transmit to the Legislature a communication from the Hon. J. R. McConnell, Attorney General, relative to the property in the city of San Francisco and county of Sacramento, known as the "Leidesdorff Estate," in which that officer expresses the unqualified opinion, that it has escheated to the State; an opinion concurred in by a large majority of our best informed and most intelligent citizens.

Some months since I ascertained, that in the year 1842, a case had been decided in the State of Michigan, involving, in part, the same questions and principles as those connected with the Leidesdorff estate. The property in the Michigan case was vested in an American citizen who died intestate, leaving legitimate but alien relatives. The question presented for decision was, whether on the death of an intestate, alien heirs could take by descent, and if not, whether the property escheated to the United States or the State of Michigan.

Hon. Hugh S. Legare, who was, at that time, Attorney General of the United States, after having given the subject that mature reflection and profound legal research, which its importance demanded—a task for which he was eminently qualified—gave the decided opinion, that the property had escheated to the State of Michigan; and the Government of the United States, desirous of holding these lands for a military station, paid to the State a large sum for the same, upon the opinion of the Attorney General, without further attempting to assert its claims in a court of law.

Believing that the decision in this case, must necessarily affect the Leidesdorff estate—the same questions and principles in part being involved—I wrote to the Hon. Caleb Cushing, Attorney General of the United States, and requested that the facts of the "Harvey case" be forwarded to me, accompanied with the opinion of Hon. H. S. Legare, Attorney General of the United States.

By the last mail I received an answer to that communication, and have the honor herewith to transmit a copy of the same.

Feeling confident, as I do of the validity of the claim of the State to the Leidesdorff property, and in view of the great and beneficent object to which the proceeds of all escheated estates are appropriated by the Constitution, although having several times, heretofore, called the attention of the Legislature to the subject, I feel it my duty, again, to urge upon the representatives of the people the importance of speedy action.

If the opinion, heretofore expressed, that this estate has escheated to California be correct, and it is her right, under the Constitution, to appropriate the same for the benefit of Common Schools, it is highly important that the Legislature should promptly take such steps as may be deemed necessary to enable the agents of the State to institute, and prosecute with vigor to a speedy termination, proceedings for the recovery of the same.

This is deemed necessary to maintain the rights of the State in the premises, and is no more than an act of justice to the claimants under the alien heirs. If the claim of the State be valid, she should at once take possession of so valuable an inheritance, if not, the cloud of title necessarily encumbering the rights of others, should be as speedily removed. Concurring with the Attorney General of the State, in the opinion that the title to this valuable property is most unquestionably in the State of California, I feel that I cannot too earnestly urge her representatives, the high duty they owe to the people and the children of the State, to adopt such measures as may be required to ensure a settlement of these conflicting claims at an early day.

In conclusion, I would especially direct your attention to the last suggestion contained in the communication of the Attorney General, transmitted on the 9th inst., recommending that the "law concerning escheats be so amended, as to permit proceedings to be instituted in any county in the State, in which a part of an escheated estate may be situated, and also, an amendment "having in view the protection of the State in her interest in the accruing rents of the property, which may be claimed as having escheated during litigation."

JOHN BIGLER.

The undersigned, a part of the committee to whom was referred a bill for an Act for the location of the County Seat of El Dorado county, beg leave to report the bill back to the House without amendment, and recommend its passage.

The undersigned, would state further, that Coloma, the present county seat, is 12 miles from the geographical centre of the county, and at an inconvenient distance from a very large majority of the population.

Some days since, a petition was received signed by about seven thousand of the citizens of El Dorado county, praying for the removal of the county seat from Coloma to Placerville.

A more recent petition, signed by about four thousand five hundred citizens has also been received, in which the petitioners express the desire that the location should be submitted to the people of the county at a special election.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Sacramento City, March 31st, 1854. }

To the Senate and Assembly of California :

I have the honor herewith to transmit for the consideration of the Legislature, a copy of a communication received on the 25th instant, from the Clerk of the Court of the Fourth Judicial District, notifying the Executive that the "Hon. Delos Lake, Judge of the Fourth Judicial District, left the city of San Francisco on the steamer which sailed on the 16th instant, for the Atlantic States."

It is understood that the present Legislature, by resolution, which resolution, it is proper to state, was not presented for my approval, granted permission to Judge Lake to absent himself from the State for four months.

The certificate of the clerk, herewith transmitted, is accompanied by a communication from the same officer, requesting the Executive "to direct some other District Judge to perform the duties of Judge Lake during his absence from the State," and also stating that "the number of causes on Calendar of February and March term is two hundred and twenty; on Calendar of next term—April and May—two hundred and fifty; total number at issue, four hundred and seventy; probable number not at issue, three hundred."

On a former occasion, in accordance with the provisions of the Act "concerning Courts of Justice of this State and Judicial officers," and before I had given the subject thorough examination, I exercised the power, and directed one District Judge to officiate in the district of another.

Since that time, however, I have given the subject careful consideration and satisfied myself that the exercise of such power is not within the scope of Executive duty, and clearly at variance with the spirit, if not the letter, of the Constitution.

The practice of granting leave of absence to the most important and indispensable of our State officers, and requiring their duties to be performed by others, is unjust to the people of the several districts, and may be dangerous to their rights and interests.

The Constitution declares that the Judges of the several courts shall be elected by the people, in the districts, and makes no provision for substitution by the Judge himself, or appointment by the Executive, except in cases of vacancy. This privilege of choosing Judges to determine their controversies, it is maintained, cannot, even for a day, be divested or infringed upon by legislation.

The clerk not having given notice to the Executive of a vacancy, but merely a temporary absence, with leave, I do not feel authorized to proceed to appointment in conformity with the 15th section of the Act of 1853, or the 8th section of article 5th of the Constitution, until the clerk shall have certified to such vacancy, resulting from the absence of Judge Lake from the State, in contravention of the 91st section of the Act, approved May 19, 1853, which declares that "a Judge of the Supreme Court, or of the District Court, or of the Superior Court of the City of San Francisco, or of a County Court shall not absent himself from the State."

In the present case, leave of absence has been granted by a concurrent resolution, in effect, repealing the section of law above referred to, which repeal can only be constitutionally effected by the passage of an act with all the formalities and requirements presented by the 1st section of the fourth article of the Constitution.

Entertaining the views, and appreciating the importance of some speedy and constitutional action for the relief of the people of the Fourth Judicial District, I have deemed it my duty to commend the subject to the immediate consideration of the Legislature.

JOHN BIGLER.

Communication read and referred to Judiciary Committee.

The following message was also received from the Governor:

Sacramento City, April 1st, 1854. }

To the Assembly of California:

"A Joint Resolution to allow four months leave of absence to Edward P. Fletcher, Judge of Klamath County," is herewith returned to the House, in which it originated, without my approval.

The duties to be performed by the Judicial Officers of the State, are so intimately connected with the most important and vital interests of the people, that having once assumed the responsibility of deciding upon the rights of persons and property, they should never be permitted to leave temporarily the trust confided to them, for the reason that such absence is eminently calculated to occasion serious public inconvenience.

But there are other and insuperable objections to the approval of the resolution. The Constitution provides for the election of Judges by the people in all cases, except where a vacancy shall occur, and then the Governor is directed to appoint "until the next general election."

The 91st section of the Act of 19th May, 1853, declares that a Judge of the Supreme Court, or of the District Court, or of the Superior Court of the City of San Francisco, or of a County Court, shall not absent himself from the State. The Constitution and laws are plain, direct and unequivocal on these points, and their provisions cannot be weakened or annulled by a Joint Resolution.

The Joint Resolution is, therefore, returned without approval. First, because I believe the policy of allowing Judicial Officers to absent themselves from the State, and their duties to be wrong in principle—calculated to interfere with the rights and interests of the people, and seriously to retard the proper administration of Justice. Secondly, because the resolution is in direct conflict with the 91st section of the Act of 1853, "concerning the Courts of Justice of this State and Judicial Officers." And thirdly, because it is maintained that the Legislature cannot grant leave of absence to an officer elected by the people, in accordance with constitutional provisions.

JOHN BIGLER.

The following message was received from the Governor :

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
Sacramento City, April 8, 1854. }

To the Senate and Assembly of California :

After careful examination, I deem it my duty to direct the attention of the Legislature to the several Acts on the Statute book, concerning corporations, and more particularly, to the chapter in relation to the formation of Steam Navigation Companies.

The evils which may result from the passage of laws, under which powerful monopolies can be organized, are considered of such magnitude as not only to justify, but require a careful revision of all past legislation on the subject, with a view of supplying the restrictions and limitations necessary for the protection of public rights and interests.

The fact that companies have been organized and exist under the Acts heretofore passed, it is proper to state, does not interfere in the least, with the right of the Legislature either to amend, or repeal any or all of them.

The thirty-first section of the fourth article of the Constitution, provides for the formation of Corporations, under general laws, and that "all general laws and special Acts, passed pursuant to this section may be altered, from time to time, or repealed." And the thirtieth section of the Act of 1850, under the head of "General Provisions" authorizes the Legislature at any time, "to repeal the Act and dissolve all Corporations created under it."

The right of the Legislature to amend or repeal the several existing laws concerning Corporations, must therefore, be conceded—and that they require revision, it is believed, will be admitted by all after careful examination.

In the formation of laws authorizing the organization of companies, the manifold interests of the public should be carefully guarded, either by fixing reasonable rates in the Act itself, or by vesting the power to prevent exorbitant charges upon commerce and travel, in the courts, to be exercised whenever necessary.

The existing corporation laws, in fact, are all, more or less defective, and require careful modification, so as to fully protect the public against unreasonable exactions.

Comparatively but few companies have, as yet, been organized under the existing laws; and all the modifications, necessary for the security of public interests, and to relieve the people from the oppressive exactions of existing monopolies, can now be made without material interference with the rights or interests of any portion of our citizens.

The Act authorizing the formation of "Steam Navigation Companies," and the Act of April 14, 1853, so far as it relates to the organization of Corporations "for the purpose of engaging in any species of trade or commerce, foreign or domestic," are loose and vague in their terms, and contain no provisions protecting the public against unreasonable charges for travel or freight.

The thirty-third section of the Act authorizing the formation of Railroad Companies, approved April 22, 1853, provides that "it shall be unlawful for the Corporation, its officers or employees, to charge more than twenty cents per mile for each passenger, and sixty cents per mile for each ton of freight," and for every transgression of such limitation, the Corporation shall be liable to the party suffering thereby, treble the entire amount of freight charged to the party; and further, that "any reduction below the rates above mentioned, shall be left entirely to the decision and control of the Corporation itself."

This Act, it is true, fixes charges which cannot be exceeded, but it also provides that the power of reducing them can only be exercised by the Corporation itself: thus leaving the people without remedy against exorbitant exactions.

The charges allowed in the section above referred to, it will be observed, are enormously high: and were the same rates applied to the Pacific Railroad, passage to the Missouri line, computing the distance at twenty-five hundred miles, would cost five hundred dollars; and each ton of freight fifteen hundred dollars—yet these charges are permitted to be exacted under the existing law, and their reduction placed solely in the discretion of the Corporation itself.

Experience has demonstrated the necessity of incorporating in all Acts, authorizing the formation of corporate companies, such restrictions and limitations as to render them, in the exercise of the privileges granted, beneficial, and not detrimental, to the prosperity of the whole people. It has been well said that "there are no necessary evils in government;" and that "evils only exist in its abuses." That in "the full enjoyment of the gifts of Heaven, and the fruits of superior skill, industry and economy, and every man is equally entitled to protection by law; but when laws are so framed as to add to these natural and just advantages, by granting exclusive privileges, which make the rich richer, and the potent more powerful, the humbler members of society, who have neither the time nor the means of securing like favors to themselves have a right to complain of the injustice of the government."

Industry and enterprise, unaided by the special privileges enjoyed by Corporations, have in a few years made California, in many important respects, superior to most of the older States of the Confederacy. To continue her prosperity, and develop with sufficient rapidity her mighty resources, it is only necessary to give the people wholesome general laws for the protection of person and property, and to prevent monopolies from controlling the main sources of her wealth, as well as the principal avenues of trade and travel.

Under enactments, such as now exist upon our own statute book, monopolies of the most oppressive character have grown up in most of the States of the Union, and become so powerful as almost to defy legislative authority, and sufficiently potent to seriously interfere with the rights and interests of the people.

California, as yet, has suffered, comparatively, but little from the exactions of monopolies organized under the laws; but it is nevertheless true, that the merchants at several points in the north have held public meetings, and subscribed means for the purchase of steamers to be controlled by themselves, as the only mode of escaping the unreasonable exactions of an existing monopoly.

Judicious modifications, however, can now be made, which will not only effect present good, but for ever preserve the people of California from the evils which grievously oppress the people of other sections of this great Confederacy.

Under our Government, where the masses have the right and the power to prescribe the kind and character of laws by which they are to be governed, it should be the endeavor, as it is the duty, of the Representative so to frame enactments as to protect their interests from being trampled upon by corporations organized for the accomplishment of objects beyond the means of individual enterprise. In fact, legislation should ever have in view the protection and prosperity of industry; and while inviting within our borders capital and enterprise, by all lawful and proper inducements should so surround them with checks and limitations, as to prevent them being made instruments of extortion and oppression.

The interests of the great body of the people of California are identified with labor, and opposed to extending the influence of government to the advancement of the few at the expense of the many.

It may, however, be urged, that were the restrictions proposed incorporated in the several Acts concerning corporations, capitalists, instead of availing themselves of the benefits of existing laws, would form combinations for the purpose of evading those restrictions.

It is a sufficient answer to this objection to state, that under the common law, all persons connected with such combinations would be liable to indictment and prosecution as "conspirators against the public good."

On this point, the common law is clearly laid down by a learned Chief Justice as follows: "A combination is criminal, whenever the act to be done has a necessary tendency to prejudice the public, or to oppress individuals by unjustly subjecting them to the power of the confederate, and giving effect to the purposes of the latter, whether of extortion or mischief."

Again, "combinations may be oppressive by compelling the public to give more for an article of necessity or convenience than it is worth, or on the other hand, of compelling the labor of a mechanic for less than its value."

The Act authorizing the incorporation of steam navigation companies, grants important privileges, but imposes no restriction whatever in the exercise of a vast and exclusive power, the tendency and effect of which must be to prevent lawful and desirable competition in an exclusive and lucrative department of internal commerce and trade.

I would, therefore, respectfully call your attention to the omission and defects of the existing laws concerning Corporations, and especially recommend that the several Acts authorizing the incorporation of railroad, steam navigation, stage, plank road and turnpike companies, be so restricted in their provisions, as to protect the people against exorbitant and unreasonable charges for travel, or the transportation of freight.

JOHN BIGLER.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

MONDAY, April 10, 1854.

House met pursuant to adjournment.

The roll was called, and the following members were absent:

Messrs. Bagley, Ballou, Bradford, Cornwall, French, Green, Herbert, Hoff, Hollister, Houghtaling, Hubert, Irwin, Myres, McDuffie, McKinney, Nichols, F. A. Park, J. W. Park, Rowan, Whitman and Mr. Speaker.

The Journal of Saturday was read and approved.

On motion, leave of absence was granted to Mr. Houghtaling for two days, to Mr. Green for two days, to Mr. Ballou for one day, and to Mr. Hollister for one day.

Mr. Letcher made the following majority report:

Your committee to whom was referred an Act to establish and regulate Common Schools, &c., would report,

That the existing school law is badly arranged, complicated, and somewhat conflicting, while it should be plain and precise. It omits several important provisions, and includes some objectionable features; it allows obscurely what ought, perhaps, to be clearly prohibited; and Common Schools being our anchor of hope, should be fostered by our best attainable laws, freed from destructive elements, and untrammelled by dangerous innovations lately introduced.

The Act under consideration is well arranged, carefully digested, and briefly expressed. It gives to each school district its own officers, provides for the election of a Superintendent of Schools in the more populous counties, and in the rest imposes the duties of that office on the County Recorder; it assures the fidelity of officers by requiring the oath of office and exacting official bonds; simplifies the management of affairs, and it is believed will induce a more vigorous and extended system of education.

Your committee recommend the adoption of the proposed amendments and the passage of the Act.

CORNWALL,
LETCHER,
HENRY,
GREEN,
WM. C. PRATT,
FAIRFELD,
ASHLEY.

Mr. Carrillo made the following minority report :

I, the undersigned member of the Committee on Education, beg leave to submit the following minority report :

Having had under consideration the School bill submitted by Mr. Ashley and Major Stemmons, and referred to the Committee on Education, I am of the opinion that the sectarian clause of Mr. Ashley's bill is not in accordance with the true policy of the State with regard to public education.

I do not perceive the necessity of excluding any school district from a participation in the school revenue, providing the inhabitants of the same desire to employ a teacher of any particular form of religious belief, nor do I think that the cause of education will be subserved by making any enactments in relation to this subject.

Schools, like religious worship, should be left free to the inhabitants; and whatever is left to the good sense of a community, to be effected by its regulations, cannot be radically wrong.

The undersigned, therefore, is of the opinion that the School Law, as it at present exists, with the amendments prepared by Major Stemmons, is in accordance with the spirit of our institutions and laws, and that any changes materially different from this will operate as a hardship to a large portion of the citizens of California, and be subversive of that free religious liberty vouchsafed to us all under the glorious Constitution of the United States.

Education, like religion, should not be submitted or subservient to stringent enactment, but be left, in a measure, free and under the control of districts or communities, and is not, in the opinion of the undersigned, a subject of too refined and precise regulation. Our present school organization and its operation, under the law, has worked well during the past two years, and I do not see the necessity of making any material changes in it. Under its provisions schools have been organized in almost every county in the State, a school fund of between four and five hundred thousand dollars has accumulated, and by the Superintendent's report, near fifty thousand dollars of revenue was distributed on the first day of last January for the support of schools. I do not see the necessity of changing a system that has hitherto worked so well, and I therefore recommend that no changes be made, except the additions before alluded to, which I conceive to be adequate to all the educational exigencies which can arise.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

PEDRO C. CARRILLO.

Mr. Tallmadge made the following report:

Report of the Joint Select Committee to investigate the printing accounts of Eugene Casserly, Esq.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Joint Select Committee created under the following resolution:

Resolved, By the Senate, the Assembly concurring, that a Joint Committee, composed of three from each House, be appointed to examine and settle the accounts of Eugene Casserly, Esq., late State Printer, with power to send for persons and papers; have carefully examined the subject, and beg leave respectfully, to submit the following report:

In May, 1851, Mr. Casserly was elected State Printer by the Legislature; the then Governor, (McDougal), claimed the election to be irregular, and immediately upon the adjournment of the Legislature appointed Mr. G. K. Fitch, State Printer.

The Secretary of State, whose duty it was by law to deliver to the State Printer the certified copies of the laws and journals for printing, refused to acknowledge Mr. Casserly as the State Printer, and delivered them to Mr. Fitch. It was thus placed out of Mr. Casserly's power to print the laws and journals, and he was obliged to resort to a suit at law to establish his rights. Late in December, 1851, the Supreme Court of the State rendered a unanimous decision declaring Mr. Casserly to be the State Printer, and the appointment of Mr. Fitch by the Governor, null and void.

Within a very few days after this decision, the Legislature of 1852 commenced its session.

The volume of Laws of 1851 was one of the most important, as well as one of the largest ever printed, and the members were eager to have them and the journals upon their desks.

Meantime, and pending the litigation in the Courts, Mr. Fitch had had the laws and journals printed in New York, and at the opening of the session, was in attendance with his books, being the only printed volumes of the laws of 1851 in the State, printed and bound, and ready for delivery. The time between the decision of the Supreme Court in Mr. Casserly's favor, and the meeting of the Legislature, scarcely two weeks, did not allow him to print the Laws and Journals, and was hardly sufficient to have obtained the certified copies for printing from the Secretary of State. Without any fault of his, he had been disabled from doing the State work; and he was the State Printer without having had it in his power to do the State Printing.

The impatience of the Legislature, for the Laws and Journals of 1851, was all the while on the increase; and in each house a committee was appointed to examine and report upon the subject. The chairman of the Senate Committee was Hon. Chas. F. Lott, Senator from Butte; while the chairman of the Senate portion of the present committee was chairman of the committee in the Assembly.

Both committees were unanimous in their conclusions. After a very full discussion and examination, the Assembly committee reported that Mr. Fitch was not the State Printer, that Mr. Casserly was, and the only person authorised by law to deliver to the State the Laws and Journals of 1851; which report was accepted nem. con. The Senate committee reached the same results, and were entirely clear and decided in the opinion that the Laws and Journals could not be accepted from Mr. Fitch by the Legislature without a disregard of the decision of the Supreme Court, and a violation of law. As a settlement of the difficulty, and in order that the Laws and Journals might be received by the Legislature and distributed through the State, when the want of the statutes particularly was felt as a serious embarrassment, the Senate committee further advised that Mr. Casserly should make an arrangement with Mr. Fitch by which he (Casserly) should be enabled to deliver to the State the Laws and Journals, after revising and correcting the typographical errors in the volume of the laws. This was, in fact, the only course left for Mr. Casserly, and the only one by which he could possibly meet his obligations to the State, and satisfy the desire of the Legislature for the Laws and Journals. Accordingly he purchased of Mr. Fitch his books, paying to him about the full California prices; and after revising and correcting the volume of the Laws, inserting a copious list of errata, and his own imprint as State Printer, as required by law, he delivered the Laws and Journals to the State through the Comptroller and Secretary of State, by whom, after due examination, they were accepted, and his bills for the work were certified and audited under the Act of March 25, 1851, reducing the State Printer's rates of compensation forty per cent. from the rates of the Act of March 9, 1850.

To the correctness of these rates, your committee have given particular attention, with especial reference to the views expressed in the "Report of the Special Committee, appointed in 1853, to examine the Books and papers of the State Officers." After a full examination of the various Acts upon the subject, the conclusion seemed inevitable that the Act of March 25, 1851, reducing the prices forty per cent. fixed the true tariff for the State printing. And, therefore, that the rates adopted by the Comptroller and Secretary of State in certifying and auditing Mr. Casserly's accounts for the Laws and Journals were entirely correct and according to law.

In the further performance of the duty assigned to your committee, of examining and settling Mr. Casserly's accounts, we have felt ourselves in all cases required to go behind the bills as audited and adjusted by the Comptroller; and in some instances to correct his calculations, and to disallow items which had been allowed by him; and on the other hand to allow items which had been thrown out by him.

It is due to the Comptroller to say, that the balance of these errors were on the side of the State; and that the accounts of Mr. Casserly appear to have been subjected by him to repeated examinations, calling to his aid practical printers, a required by law, retaining in his hands until such final settlement, a large amount of money—$10,000 and upwards—due to Mr. Casserly.

In proceeding to the examination of Mr. Casserly's accounts, your committee found before them an arduous task. Those accounts included upwards of one hundred and twenty bills, comprising many hundred items, and referring each to its appropriate voucher, nearly every bill and voucher containing two or more different classes of work; the whole involving a mass of figures and calculations of the utmost extent and intricacy.

The calculations in these accounts being such as to require the services of experienced printers, your committee appointed, under oath, a commission of three practical printers of known experience and capacity in the various departments of printing, with instructions to examine and calculate every item in the accounts, with reference to the voucher for each. Each of these gentlemen, thus sworn, made his examination of each item, bill, and voucher, separate and apart from the others. If, upon comparing the result on each bill, any discrepancy appeared between the three, the calculations were revised, and the error ascertained and corrected. Your committee had the assistance of these gentlemen during three days, and they feel assured that nothing could be more rigid and thorough than their process of investigation; and that the results which they reached are as free from error as possible.

The report of these gentlemen is annexed, marked "Exhibit A.," from which it will be seen that upon the bills audited and allowed by the Comptroller, they found a balance due to the State of $1,234 02. The item of $2,188 07 overpaid (as appears by their report) arose out of an error in computing the binding of the Journals. By section twelve of the Act of March 9, 1850, the rate for binding on all half bound volumes was one and one-fourth cents per page if the volume was under three hundred pages, and one cent per page if it contained more than three hundred pages. The Journals were half bound and more than three hundred pages, and were charged (erroneously) for binding one and one-fourth cents a page instead of one cent.

The error was undoubtedly a clerical one, and appears to have escaped the attention not only of the Comptroller, but of the practical printers who examined the accounts.

Most of the items reported underpaid are for errors made in computing the number of tokens of press work; each token being two hundred and forty impressions of the printing press, and which, by law, is counted a full token.

Of the item of $276 64, reported in "Exhibit A." as underpaid in vouchers 1025 and 1026, and submitted for the consideration of your committee, the sum of $245 has been disallowed by your committee, being for the "composition upon the Report of the Surveyor General, ordered printed by the Assembly without any charge for the composition," although this is a restriction which the Assembly had, perhaps, no right by law to make, yet the work was done under the order, and Mr. Casserly apparently consented to the restriction. The charge for composition was, therefore, not allowed.

In addition to the bills audited and allowed by the Comptroller, your committee have allowed two items as per bill in "Exhibit B.," hereto annexed, and which had been disallowed by the Comptroller.

The first item is for marginal or side notes, and index, and table of contents to the statutes, and for the index to the Journals. Without this work the books would have been almost useless. It has always been done by the Printer to the State—has always been charged for, and, except in Mr. Casserly's case, has always been allowed. According to the rates at which the same work was paid for last year by the State, the amount of this item would be $5,007. Mr. Casserly's bill is for $1,244, being as nearly as possible the amount paid in cash for the labor bestowed, and it has been allowed by the committee.

The other item is for carriage, labor, and expenses in the purchase of the paper used by the State during the year 1851-52. This item is chargeable under section 3 of the Act of March 9, 1850, and though disallowed by the Comptroller and Secretary of State, is regarded by your committee as a very just and moderate demand for a troublesome service, and allowed accordingly.

It will be seen, therefore, that your committee have, after a full, minute, and patient investigation, disallowed an item of $2,188 17 allowed by the Comptroller, and also an item of $245, submitted for allowance in the report of the Commission of Printers; and that they have allowed the other items marked in that report as underpaid, amounting to $709 15, and also the items charged in "Exhibit B.," amounting to $1,860 20. This leaves a balance due by the State to Mr. Casserly of three hundred and eighty dollars and eighteen cents, thus:

Total of account as correctly settled by your committee,	$85,627 92
Total of account as audited and allowed by Comptroller,	85,248 74

Balance due Mr. Casserly,	$380 18
---------------------------	----------

For the payment of which balance to him in full settlement of his accounts, your committee submit herewith a bill for an Act, and respectfully recommend the passage of the same.

Your committee cannot conclude, without expressing their satisfaction with the result of their examination. In so large a mass of accounts, involving calculations of peculiar difficulty, important errors against the State might appear inevitable. The fact is the other way; with the single exception of the error (manifestly clerical) in the charge for the binding of the Journals, already noted and explained, your committee have found no overcharge against the State, while the close examination instituted has disclosed several items in Mr. Casserly's favor, which should have been allowed, leaving a small balance due to him by the State.

Justice to Mr. Casserly requires us to say, that we have found his accounts with the State to have been kept with care, accuracy and clearness; every item distinctly presented, the different classes of work intelligibly set forth, every bill certified to by the proper officers of the Legislature, and accompanied by a suitable voucher. To his administration of the State Printing belongs the merit of efficiency, compliance with the law, and laudable economy, as is proved by the fact that the whole expense of the State Printing during his term of office, is less by very many thousand dollars than the same work has ever cost the State before or since; which, in view of the circumstance, that during his term of office wages were some 25 per cent. higher than at present, and warrants of the State 25 to 30 per cent. lower, is a result more profitable to the State, probably, than to the State Printer.

We will not withhold the expression of our gratification, that in those early days of our young State, the complicated and responsible duties of an important and expensive department of Government, should have been administered in a manner so entirely creditable to the officer and advantageous to the public.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

EXHIBIT A.

SACRAMENTO, April 10, 1852.

SIR :

We, the undersigned, practical printers, having been sworn by you, have examined the accounts of Eugene Casserly, Esq., as State Printer, together with every voucher and printed document to which they refer, and report the following as the result of our examination, as will be more specifically set forth, by reference to the table on the annexed page. We find that Mr. Casserly has been overpaid $1,234 02. There are one or two omissions to charge for composition of documents, which having been evidently agreed to by Mr. Casserly, we did not feel authorized to go behind the charge—though by all rules governing the printing craft, we think that he should be allowed for the same. In another case, the Comptroller has disallowed Mr. Casserly's charges for the purchase and cartage of paper, used in 1852, for Journals and Statutes, amounting to $268 10. The law having provided for compensation for this service, we have thought it our duty to simply call the attention of your committee to the fact.

Respectfully, yours, &c.,

J. B. DEVOE,
F. S. THOMPSON,
J. WINFIELD SCOTT.

Chairman Select Committee, &c.

Senate Bill, No. 114, above reported,

Read a third time and passed.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
Sacramento City, April 17, 1854. }

To the Senate and Assembly of California :

Since the commencement of the present session, I have carefully examined the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 28th, 1850, entitled an Act to enable the State of Arkansas, and other States, to reclaim the Swamp Lands within their limits ; as well as the instructions given by the proper officers of the General Government in relation to the selection of the lands donated by the Act.

The Act makes it the duty of the Secretary of the Interior, as soon as practicable, to make out accurate lists, and plats, and of the lands described "as Swamp and overflowed," "and to transmit the same to the Governors of the several States interested; and at the request of the Governors, cause a patent to be issued to the States therefor, and on the patent, so issued, the fee simple to said lands shall vest in the States, subject to the disposal of the Legislatures thereof."

And it further provides, "that in making out lists and plats of the lands aforesaid, all legal subdivisions, the greater part of which is wet and unfit for cultivation, shall be included in said lists and plats, but when a greater part of a subdivision is not of that character, the whole of it shall be excluded."

The 4th section of the Act extends its provisions to each of the other States of the Union containing swamp or overflowed lands.

This important subject has engaged the attention of all the other States interested. In Ohio, Indiana, Louisiana, and Florida, selections have been made based upon evidence filed in the office of the Surveyor General, by the State authorities. In Illinois, Missouri, Alabama, Mississippi, Michigan, Arkansas, and Wisconsin, selections have been made by the Surveyor General based upon the field notes and evidence procured by the State authorities.

Although, in several of the States above named, full returns have not been made, the whole number of acres selected and reported is 28,156,670, as follows:—Ohio 25,720; Indiana 1,255,038; Illinois 1,833,412; Missouri 1,517,287; Alabama 2,136,450; Mississippi 2,239,932; Louisiana 9,164,922; Michigan 4,544,189; Arkansas 4,807,673; Florida 1,000,763; Iowa 71,958; Wisconsin 1,259,269 acres. The whole number of acres of land in California, is estimated at 120,947,840, of which it is believed about the tenth part is swamps, or "subject to overflow," amounting in the aggregate to 12,094,784 acres.

The authorities of the United States in the designation of the swamp and overflowed lands, in the absence of other satisfactory evidence, it is proper to state, will take the field notes of the Surveyor alone as the basis from which to make out lists or plats.

Selections based upon the field notes alone, must, necessarily, be very imperfect, and would deprive the State of California of a large portion of the best lands to which she is entitled under the Act, for the reason that the surveys may have been made at different periods in wet and dry seasons, and the field notes would therefore, only indicate what is swamp, and what lands were actually under water at the time of the survey. The field notes made in dry seasons, would of course furnish no evidence as to whether lands are or are not "subject to overflow."

In order, therefore, to secure the State of California all the lands within her limits "subject to overflow," and to which she is justly entitled under the Act, it will be necessary to authorize the agents of the State to procure and present to the proper officers of the General Government satisfactory testimony on the subject.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office, on the 21st of November, 1850, issued instructions to the Surveyor General of Florida, and officers in other States, in relation to the selections of lands granted under the Act of September 28, 1850.

The instructions of the Commissioner indicate a disposition on the part of the General Government to render all the aid possible, to enable the several States interested to secure and reclaim the lands "subject to overflow," situated within their limits.

Although a portion of these lands are, at present, perhaps, of but little value to the State, they will, in time, be a source of much revenue to the Treasury, and their reclamation add greatly to the wealth and prosperity of California.

Proper measures should, therefore, at once be adopted to secure all the lands granted, and judicious legislative measures matured for their disposal by agents of the State, with such limitations, restrictions, and requirements as may be regarded as necessary to protect the rights of all interested, and insure their speedy reclamation.

The instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, direct the several Surveyor Generals to regard as granted, by the Act above referred to, "all lands, which from being swampy or subject to overflow," are unfit for cultivation, and in which class are to be included, also, "all lands which, though dry part of the year, are subject to inundation at the planting, growing, or harvesting seasons, so as to destroy the crop, and, therefore, are unfit for cultivation," taking the average of seasons for a reasonable number of years, as the rule of determination.

This is certainly a very liberal construction of the Act, and proper legislation to procure testimony on the subject will secure to the State of California millions of acres of the most productive lands within the limits of the State.

In a letter to Governor Brown, of Florida, inclosing a copy of the instructions above referred to, the Commissioner of the General Land Office says: "You will perceive that by these instructions, the Surveyor General is authorized to receive such reliable evidence of the character of any of these lands, as may be presented by authorities of the State, and as many of the lands were surveyed at dry seasons, and hence are not represented by the descriptive notes or plats as being of that character. I have supposed it a matter of sufficient importance to induce you to call upon the County Surveyors, or other respectable persons of your State, for statements under oath, in relation to the swamp or overflowed lands in their respective counties, such testimony will be regarded as establishing the facts in the case, &c."

In conclusion, I would most earnestly recommend the passage of an Act authorizing testimony to be taken and presented to the United States Surveyor General in relation to overflowed lands, in accordance with the suggestion of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, so as to secure to the State a title to all lands within her limits "subject to overflow." And also, an Act authorizing the agents of the State to dispose of all such lands, and to provide for their speedy reclamation.

The subject is commended to your early and favorable consideration as one of vast importance to the interests and prosperity of the people and State of California.

I have the honor herewith to transmit a copy of a communication addressed by me to the chairman of the Committee on Escheated Estates, appointed by the State Board of Land Commissioners, and also a copy of the reply of the committee to the same. The information communicated in reply is exceedingly important, and I trust will induce the Legislature, without delay, to adopt the necessary measures to secure the rights of the State in the property referred to in the communication herewith transmitted, as well as the Leidesdorff estate, to which your attention was some time since directed by special message.

JOHN BIGLER.

L. PICKERING, Esq.,

Dear Sir:—A few days since it was intimated to me, by an attorney, that there is another large escheated estate in the city of San Francisco. This morning I interrogated Dr. Hermance on the subject, who advised me to communicate with you, as you are chairman of the Committee on Escheated Estates. At this time it is important that I should possess all the information on the subject of the Leidesdorff estate, as well as all others of the kind possible to be obtained. I hope you will make inquiry and write me on the subject without delay.

Very respectfully, yours, &c.,

JOHN BIGLER.

The communication accompanying the Governor's message,
Read and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Ashley gave notice that on to-morrow he would move to reconsider the vote which passed the Senate bill to settle the accounts of Eugene Casserly.

The Speaker decided the notice to reconsider out of order, stating that the bill was lost yesterday, reconsidered to-day and passed, from which decision Mr. Ashley appealed.

The question was then put, "Shall the decision of the chair stand as the judgment of the House?"

And decided in the affirmative

Mr. Dannels, chairman, made the following report:

The Select Committee, composed of the delegation from Yuba, to whom was referred a bill for an Act entitled an Act providing that the Courts of Sessions of Yuba county shall be empowered to levy and cause to be collected, a special tax for the purpose of erecting public buildings and the improvement of public grounds in said county, and for the disposal of public property for the same purpose, have had the same under consideration, and have directed me to report the same back to the House and recommend its passage.

Senate bill No. 112, above reported, read a third time and passed.

Mr. French made the following report:

The minority of the committee, to whom was referred the bill providing for the regulation of Fees in Office, beg leave to report that they cannot recommend the passage of the bill framed by the majority of said committee and presented to the House. We think that the change in the tariff of charges agreed upon in committee will work great and serious evils, and will so operate, if this change be perfected into a law, as to deprive the people of the services and ability of valuable officers. Aside from the great reduction contemplated by the proposed bill, (amounting in the average to nearly, if not quite, 75 per cent.) the rates of charges are so arranged as to render the bill extremely defective and imperfect; and under which, if adopted, it will be difficult for the different officers, whose fees are regulated by it, to interpret it intelligibly and accurately. We are informed by those conversant with the details of such bills, and believe such to be the case, that the bill, as proposed by the committee, provides for compensation for entries which are seldom required to be made, and is silent as to a great variety of acts incumbent to be performed by the respective officers enumerated in said fee bill. We have great doubts whether it is advisable at the present time, and so soon after the various county officers have entered on the discharge of their official duties, and when they have obtained their respective positions by great efforts, and in a canvass where much time and labor have been expended by them, to make any material change in the tariff of charges allowed by existing laws; certainly it cannot be right to curtail their income at one sweep, one half, if not two-thirds, as will certainly be the case if the bill, as reported by the committee, pass into a law.

If it be deemed absolutely essential and necessary by the Legislature to make a change, let it be done with proper caution, and in such a manner as will not deprive the local officers in one half of the counties of the State of the means of actual support.

Entertaining these views, we do recommend that the House do not pass the bill as reported by the committee, and that it be indefinitely postponed.

On motion of Mr. Godard, Assembly bill No. 144, an Act concerning Roads and Highways was taken up for consideration.

All the amendments made in committee of the whole, except the amendment to 32d section, and the amendment to the bill offered by Mr. Stemmons to come in between sections 33 and 34, providing for the counties to pay for bridges, &c., were concurred in by the House.

Mr. Fairfield moved to exempt Placer county from the operations of this bill.

Not agreed to.

Mr. Ashley moved to strike out the 17th and 18th sections of the bill.

Not agreed to.

Mr. Hunter moved to amend the 18th section of the bill, by striking out the word "shall," and insert "may" where it occurs in reference to the duties of the Board of Supervisors or the Court of Sessions, as the case may be.

While this motion was under consideration,

Mr. Tallmadge, chairman, made the following report:

Your Committee, to whom was referred Assembly bill No. 215, for an Act to provide for the payment of certain expenses, and a communication from the Secretary of State, in relation to Stationery, beg leave to report, that by the Act of May 1, 1851, the Secretary of State is required to advertise for proposals for stationery, fuel and lights necessary for the use of the Legislature, and further from vouchers on bill, we find that the advertisement required by law was duly made, and the contract awarded to the lowest bid, to Messrs. Marvin & Hitchcock for stationery, who under their contract have furnished for the use of the Legislature at this session, stationery amounting to $3,482 46.

It is also believed, that large amounts of stationery have been procured by the Sergeant-at-Arms of this body, without authority of law, and in express violation of the Act of May 1, 1851; this officer having no other authority than an illegitimate resolution of the House, containing general authority to furnish or procure articles for the use of the Assembly.

Your committee recommend that the purchases for the Legislature be made as contemplated in the Act of May, 1851; and the Assembly bill, No. 215, be passed with the amendment therein stated.

Your committee conclude with stating, that the stationery furnished by the Secretary, and contracted for by him, is of good quality, and furnished at reasonable rates, with two or three exceptions, over which the Secretary of State can have no control, the law directing that officer to award the contract to the lowest bidder. All of which is respectfully submitted.

D. P. TALLMADGE, Chairman.
W. S. LETCHER,
S. G. WHIPPLE.

Assembly bill No. 215, above reported, an Act to provide for the payment of certain expenses.

After spending some time in its consideration,

On motion, the committee rose, reported the bill back without amendment, recommended the passage of the bill, and asked to be discharged from its further consideration. The committee was discharged.

The bill was considered as engrossed, read a third time, and passed.

Hour of 12. The special order was taken up, which was Assembly bill No. 148, an Act to fix the times of holding elections for Representatives to Congress.

Mr. Pratt made the following minority report:

The undersigned, a minority of the Committee on Elections, to whom was referred a bill for "An Act to fix the time of holding elections for Representatives to Congress," cannot concur with the majority in recommending the passage of the bill. The Acts repealed by the second section of the bill under consideration, were passed by the Legislature of 1852, and so well satisfied were the members composing that Legislature, that members of Congress should be elected at the time fixed in the existing law, that the Act passed both branches without opposition—the Journals exhibiting the fact that the bill passed both Houses without a recorded vote.

The object of the Legislature in fixing the time named in the existing law, unquestionably, was to give ample time for the members elect to collect correct information in relation to the wants of the people of the State. The election law provides that returns for members of Congress shall be examined on the sixtieth day after the election, and the statement on which the certificate of the election is based, transmitted to the Governor; and the "Act to provide for the election of the Electors of President and Vice President" directs, that in each year, when the election of President and Vice President of the United States takes place, the same shall be held on Tuesday next after the first Monday in each year, being less than twenty days before the meeting of Congress, rendering it impossible for members elect, to reach Washington before the middle of January, one month and a half after the commencement of the session; if the bill passes, this wrong to the people can only be remedied by a State election once in four years, separate and at a different time from the Presidential election; I am alike unwilling to deprive the people of forty or fifty days representation in Congress, or saddle them with an additional expense of holding a second election.

In this matter, however, the action of California is not without a precedent. "Several of the other States of the Union, and among them are the great States of Pennsylvania and Ohio, elect their members of Congress but one month later in the same year than the time fixed in the Act of 1852. In the States above referred to, the time for electing members of Congress was fixed many years ago; and we find that time and experience have convinced all of the wisdom of the law, and we hear of no efforts being made to effect a change.

It is true that changes in the affairs of California are more frequent than in the older States of the Union, and that in order to legislate intelligently for her varied interests, it is necessary to watch closely passing events. But this can be done as well, and is much more likely to receive proper care and attention from members elect, than from mere aspirants. A careful examination has satisfied me, that the time fixed for electing members of Congress should remain unchanged, and the bill under consideration be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. O'Neil moved a call of the House. The call was sustained.

The roll was called, and the following members were absent:

Messrs. Anderson, Cornwall, Ewer, French, Green, Henry, Herbert, Hoff, McBrayer, Nichols, Purdy, Warmcastle, and Mr. Speaker.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
Sacramento City, April 21, 1854. }

To the Senate and Assembly of California :

I have the honor herewith to transmit a copy of a communication received on the 18th inst., from John A. Dreibelbis, Esq., a respectable citizen of Shasta county, in relation to Indian depredations and murders, on Pitt river, in the above named county, and asking compensation for services rendered and expenses incurred by himself and others.

It will be seen that the citizens of Pittsburg and vicinity, before proceeding to chastise the Indians, held a public meeting and passed resolutions calling on Col. Wright, the officer in command of the United States troops at Fort Reading, for protection, and in reply to which Col. Wright expressed a perfect willingness to extend the required aid, but informed them that it was not in his power to do so, for the reason that he had but about fifteen effective men—a force scarcely adequate to the protection of the property and stores of the General Government at the Fort. In the absence of sufficient protection from the General Government, the citizens themselves organized in self defence, and in so doing rendered services for which they should be compensated, and incurred expenses which certainly should be paid.

Having frequently, during the years 1852 and 1853, had occasion to call the attention of the Legislature to the entire inadequacy of the force of the General Government in California for the protection of our citizens, and to the almost defenceless condition of the frontier counties, I deem it unnecessary, in this communication, further to advert to this subject, and in conclusion would merely remark that until more effective aid shall be extended to California by the General Government, our citizens must be harrassed by the depredations of hostile Indians, and the State necessarily incur expenses and remunerate services rendered by our own people in the defence of their lives and property.

I would, however, state that I have received assurances, verbally, from the distinguished officer now in command of the U. S. Army on the Pacific coast, that he desires to be able in a short time to extend the proper aid and protection to our citizens against the recurrence of Indian depredations in the frontier counties.

JOHN BIGLER.

The message and communication read and referred to the Committee on Indian Indian Affairs.

From reliable information, as well as personal experience, your committee are of opinion that the simple passage of this Act will not remove the obstructions to the navigation of said river, and would interfere with the rights of persons interested in ferries and bridges below Knight's Ferry. Your committee are also satisfied that there is but one class of steamers that could ever be made to run on said river; we allude to those used on the western waters which are said to run whenever the dew falls, but as this class of vessels have not yet found their way to California it is unnecessary to pass the present bill. Mr. Letcher made the following report :

MR. SPEAKER :

The Committee on Agriculture, to whom was referred a bill to "Incorporate a State Agricultural Society, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to report :

Your committee, appreciating the vast importance of the subject, would be wanting in the discharge of a high and imperious duty to the State and the people, were it to permit the occasion to pass without making use of it to commend the subject to the earnest and favorable consideration of the House.

This is not merely a bill to create an incorporated society whose influence only affects those immediately interested, and has no bearing upon the State, or upon the great masses of the people, but it is a bill, the provisions of which will act upon every interest, affect all classes of our citizens, and touch with electric power every branch of industry throughout the entire State.

Four years ago the agricultural resources of this State were comparatively unknown. Prior to that time so little attention had been given to the subject, that much of the soil which experience has demonstrated to be highly productive, was deemed almost valueless. A crude and miserable process of agriculture had induced the impression that but a limited portion of our soil would justify cultivation without irrigation, and consequently, immense tracts of our highlands and mountain slopes were regarded as fit only for pastoral purposes. This error has given way before the speeding plough, and it is now found that the cultivation of those lands in grain will yield as rich returns as the cultivation of the valley lands, and instead of the agricultural resources of the country being circumscribed and confined to a few valleys, limited in extent, and requiring irrigation, highland and mountain side are found to be equally productive and valuable.

It is is a pleasant and a cheering picture, to see hundreds of pleasant homes and wide-spreading fields, laden with rich abundant harvests, on lands which but a few years ago were deemed almost unfit for cultivation. Thus has the experience of a very brief period of time demonstrated the great fact that the agricultural resources of California are vast and almost incalculable—not only capable of abundantly supplying the millions destined to inhabit the Pacific empire now springing up with magic rapidity, with all of the necessaries and luxuries grown in the most favored regions of the world, but of producing a large surplus for external commerce.

It is conceded that agriculture is the basis of the wealth and prosperity of all civilization, and that the condition of agriculture in a country furnishes a true and unerring index of its moral, mental, and scientific progress. It is indeed impossible, in the nature of things, for a people, or a nation, to obtain any degree of eminence without pursuing an enlightened system of agriculture. Advanced agriculture and its kindred branches of horticulture and floriculture, are pursuits peculiar to civilized life. The barbarian never plants a tree nor flower; his coarser tastes have no appreciation of the value and magnificence of the one, nor of the beauty of the other. These pursuits are congenial alone to the cultivated man, constitute the foundation upon which the social system rests, and binds the citizen to his country by the strongest of all ties. Give men land to own, to cultivate, let them adorn and surround their homes with the comforts and the various forms of beauty which result from advanced and scientific agriculture, and you build up in the country fortresses more impregnable than can be devised in any other way.

Then to protect, to foster and encourage, by every legitimate means this vast department of industry, appears to your committee, to be one of the first and most imperative duties of the Legislature of this State. California, in its relations to agriculture is a peculiarly interesting country. We are now in our infancy, we have the lights of experience to guide us, we are cognizant of the fatal errors other States, and other people have committed, we see and know how to avoid those errors. Then, let us, while we have a virgin soil, unparalleled in variety and richness of production, at once introduce a system of Agriculture which will secure to us, and to the State, the highest degree of prosperity for the time being, and enable us to transmit, unimpaired by our negligence or folly, the great advantages which we now enjoy, to those who will succeed us. Let us establish a system which experience has demonstrated to be productive of the most beneficent results in other States, and lay now, the sure and enduring foundations of future prosperity and greatness.

It is believed by those well informed on the subject, that the immense sum of twenty-five millions of dollars is annually employed in the import provision trade of California. Is it not important to arrest this vast drain upon the country? We have also reliable information that within the past year there has been imported more than half a million barrels of flour, making from five to ten millions of dollars for this single article. The latter sum will now and hereafter in all probability be retained in the country, as the home production will fully supply the home demand.

Now in view of the general importance of the subject, other States are moving in the matter, and stretching forth the hand of encouragement and protection. Why should not California do so likewise? A much greater necessity exists here than in other States. At present our staples consist of a very limited variety, and of these, a surplus will soon be produced, hence the vast importance, the overruling necessity of encouraging the cultivation of new products; and before the extensive cultivation of new products can be with prudence engaged in, experiments must demonstrate the adaptation of our soil and climate to their production. It must be ascertained that such new products can be successfully and profitably cultivated. Your committee believe that the surest and speediest mode of attaining the great ends in view, is the immediate organization of a State Agricultural Society, with liberal appropriations for its support. This appropriation is not asked for merely to support an institution as such, but to enable it to perform duties the accomplishment of which shall give back to the State, the richest returns to build up, make permanent and perpetual the most vital interests of the State, to open these fountains from which issue streams that will refresh forever the hills and valleys of this "bright land." This interest is receiving liberal encouragement in other States, and California now presents features in agriculture, that shall, if properly regarded, be as momentous as any the world ever saw. Our vast tule lands can be reclaimed, and fields of rice, cotton, and tobacco can be made to flourish and add their untold value to the wealth of our people and State. Tea, coffee and sugar will also be numbered among the rich products of California, if that wise care so much needed, be given to nourish the germ which is now in embryo.

The opening of China and Japan reveals sources of wealth in the forms of new and varied productions of the Celestial world; and shall California avail itself of there offering that progress holds out to us?

The sheep and the goat can feed upon our thousand hills, yielding their fleeces for our manufactories. Our sunny slopes will be adorned by fruitful vineyards and beautified by groves of the mulberry, affording food for the worm that shall clothe our people with the costly silks that now draw our treasures to other nations. The people, too, of the Celestial Kingdom will bring their knowledge, both of agriculture—of which they possess vast stores—and of the manufacturing of those costly fabrics, adding all these to our own sources of wealth.

To accomplish these great objects a stimulus must be given, the State must extend the hand of encouragement and protection. We, therefore, recommend the establishment of a State Board of Agriculture, and the passage of the bill referred to as providing for the Incorporation of a State Agricultural Society, with liberal appropriations in land and money for its support.

All of which is respectfully submitted by order of the committee.

W. S. LETCHER.

MR. SPEAKER :

The special committee appointed to take into consideration the communication of the Treasurer of the State, to ascertain the amount of property sold by the city of San Francisco under the Act of March 26, 1851, and to ascertain the amount of such sales to which the State is entitled to twenty-five per cent., and also, the amount otherwise disposed of under the provisions of said Act, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to make the following report :

Before giving a statement of the different sales which have been made of beach and water lot property, under the provisions of said Act, by the city of San Francisco, and other parties, we would say that to comply fully with the requisitions of the resolution under which we were appointed, demands more time than we, with other duties claiming our attention, could possibly appropriate exclusively to this subject, but being sensible of the magnitude of the interest entrusted to our care, we have labored assiduously to a correct completion of our task, and most respectfully recommend to the consideration of the Assembly, the following estimates of sales of Beach and Water Lot property.

That the amount of Beach and Water Lot property, sold by Peter Smith, on different executions against the city of San Francisco, included within the present water front since the passage of the law of March 26, 1851, amounts, as appears from schedule A, herewith submitted, to the sum of fifty-eight thousand eight hundred and sixty-five dollars, exclusive of property sold under same judgment on the 30th January, 1852, and which is claimed by the city by redemption.

That the Beach and Water Lot property sold by others on different executions, against the city, as appears from schedule B, herewith submitted, amounts to the sum of eleven thousand and eighty-nine dollars.

That the sum realized to the city of San Francisco, by the sale of the above property, amounts to sixty-nine thousand nine hundred and fifty-four dollars.

That the sales of property made by the Fund Commissioners, amounts to the sum of one hundred and nineteen thousand four hundred and forty dollars, as appears by reference to schedule C.

That the sales of property made by the Joint Committee on Land Claims, appointed by the Common Council of the city of San Francisco under an ordinance, approved December 5, 1858, amounts to the sum of one million one hundred and ninety-three thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars, which will appear by reference to schedule D, hereto annexed, that the sum of five hundred and twelve thousand four hundred and eighty-eight dollars and sixty-seven cents has been received by the committee from purchasers on account of payments, leaving a balance due from said sales of six hundred and eighty-one thousand two hundred and sixty-one dollars and thirty-three cents. The chairman of said Joint Committee further adds that notes were made by purchasers of portions of said property and delivered to them, amounting to the sum of three hundred and thirty-seven thousand three hundred and eighteen dollars and forty-eight cents, but that property amounting to three hundred and forty-three thousand nine hundred and forty-two dollars and eighty-five cents was sold, for which the city has no security, and which will probably never be called for, but remain in the same condition as if the same had never been offered for sale. Thus it will be seen that property to which the State of California is interested has been disposed of to the amount of—

By Peter Smith judgment,	$58,865
By other judgments,	11,089
By Joint Land Committee,	1,193,750
By Fund Commissioners,	119,440
	$1,383,144

In addition to the above, your committee would further report, that on the 30th January, 1852, a large amount of beach and water lot property was sold under a judgment rendered against said city of San Francisco, in favor of Peter Smith, for three thousand five hundred and sixty dollars, which said property, no sold, is specified in schedule E, hereto annexed; that said property was sought to be recovered by redemption, by the city of San Francisco, subsequent to said sale, but that your committee are advised (unofficially) that the Supreme Court have decided against the claim of the redemptionists.

That the amount of property sold, and the manner of such sale, as well as the amount due the State of California, is set forth in schedule G, hereto annexed.

That the entire sum of money paid into the State Treasury by the city of San Francisco, under the Act of 26th March, 1851, amounts to the sum of seventy-eight thousand five hundred and sixty-seven dollars and ninety-five cents. That the sum of five thousand one hundred and sixty dollars and fifty cents has been paid into the State Treasury at different times, by purchasers under judgments against the city of San Francisco, in favor of Peter Smith and others, but that there is no evidence before the committee going to show that they were authorized by the city to make such payments, and in the opinion of the committee the said payments were made without any authority of law, and hence no rights were vested or created in consequence of such payment.

Your Committee, although not required by the resolution under which they are acting to report upon those matters which do not effect the disposition of the Beach and Water Lot property, under the Act of March 26, 1851, yet will refer incidentally to those sales which have been made by the Board of California Land Commissioners.

From a report made by the State Treasurer, it seems that property to the amount of seven hundred and nine thousand four hundred and seventy five dollars has been disposed of at public sale. That on the 3rd of April, 1854, at which time said report was made out, the sum of two hundred and thirty four thousand, nine hundred and five dollars and eighteen cents, had been paid into the State Treasury, said sum being exclusive of the payments made in State's Prison Bonds.

That the sum of ninety two thousand dollars in State Prison Bonds, was received, on account of said sales, making in all the sum of three hundred and twenty six thousand, nine hundred and five dollars and eighteen cents.

That there has been paid to the Fund Commissioners, by the lessees of the California and Market street Wharf, the sum of $11,936 69; by the lessees of Broadway Wharf, $3,222 74; and by the lessees of Pacific street Wharf, the sum of $16,159 56; making in the aggregate $31,318 99.

That the sum of seven thousand six hundred and eighty five dollars has been received by the Controller of the city of San Francisco, for the rent of certain other Wharfs, and which is more particularly set forth in schedule G hereto annexed.

By reference to the report of the Joint Committee on Land Claims (see schedule D) it will be seen that the sum of five hundred and twelve thousand four hundred and eighty-eight dollars and sixty seven cents ($512,488 67) has long since been paid by them, and that notes to the amount of one hundred and sixty one thousand and forty three dollars and forty eight cents, ($161,043 48) matured on the 23rd of February, 1854; and, also, four months notes, falling due on the 27th of April, 1854, for the sum of one hundred and eighty six thousand, two hundred and seventy five dollars ($186,275 00) which, if paid at the time they fall due, would show in the hands of the Joint Committee the sum of eight hundred and forty nine thousand eight hundred and seven dollars and fifteen cents, ($849,807 15,) of which sum the State is entitled to two hundred and twelve thousand four hundred and fifty one dollars and seventy eight cents ($312,451 75,) (less the amount heretofore paid) that being twenty five per cent. of the receipts arising from sales of the Beach and Water Lot property.

Until the time shall have expired for the purchasers to make their final settlements, according to the terms of sale, it will be impossible for the Committee to report the precise amount the State is entitled to, as a large amount of property will no doubt remain uncalled for, and must be resold; but as near as can be ascertained, a balance of one hundred and sixty-three thousand seven hundred and forty-three dollars and eighty-four cents ($163,743 84) is shown to exist in favor of the State from San Francisco.

Your Committee make up the amount as follows:

Payments made as per schedule D,	$512,488 67
Notes which became due 28th February, 1854,	151,043 48
Notes which became due 27th April, 1854,	186,275 00
Sales made by Fund Commissioners,	119,440 00
	$969,247 15
Of which sum, the State is entitled to 25 per cent., amounting to	$242,311 78
Deduct payment heretofore made,	78,567 95
Balance due the State from San Francisco,	$163,743 83

As has been already remarked, we have not had sufficient time to devote to this subject which its importance demands, and with increased powers, we respectfully ask leave to sit again. We, therefore, submit the following resolution for your approval:

Resolved, That the special committee appointed to take into consideration the communication of the Treasurer of the State, to ascertain the amount of property sold by the city of San Francisco, under the Act of March 26, 1851, and to ascertain the amount of such sales to which the State is entitled to 25 per cent.; and also the amount otherwise disposed of, under the provisions of said Act, have power to send for persons and papers, and to take testimony.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, }
 San Francisco, March 29, 1854. }

To the Special Committee of Assembly :

GENTLEMEN :

I yesterday had the honor to present to you a statement showing that the amount of money bid for the property sold by Selover & Sinton, under order of the Joint Committee on Land Claims, as authorized by Ordinance of the Common Council, approved Dec. 5, 1853, was $1,193,750 00

That there had been received by the Committee from purchasers, on account of payments - - - - - $512,488 67

$681,261 33

I beg leave now to add for your information that the Committee have in their possession notes of the purchasers given by them on settlement, amounting to 60 day notes, matured 28th February, - - - $151,043 48

Four months Notes falling due April 2, - - - - - 186,275 00

That amount will in all probability be collected, although the parties owing may require time. Then there remains the sum of - - - $343,942 85 unpaid for, which the city has no security, and which property will, probably, never be called for, but remain in the same condition as if the same had never been offered for sale.

In the present state of the money market, and in view of the known great depreciation in the value of real estate, I deem it advisable not to offer at this time the smallest four lots at public sale, but shall take occasion to do so when a more prosperous state of the money market shall justify. I hope that prices may be obtained approximating to those received at the last sale.

In the meantime all efforts shall be employed by me, not only to collect the notes already matured, and about to mature, but also to make the parties responsible for the balance due on purchases on which the first payment alone was made, and for which no notes were given, which sum will amount to in round numbers thirty five thousand dollars.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed :)

C. K. GARRISON, Mayor, and Chairman Joint Committee on Land Claims.

Mr. Musser introduced a bill for an Act to alter the time of electing County officers of Trinity county.

Read first and second time and referred to select committee composed of one from Placer, Nevada, Klamath and Trinity counties, with instructions to report on to-morrow.

Messrs. Whipple, Musser, Fairfield and Burton were appointed said committee.

The hour of 11 o'clock. There being two special orders for that hour,

Mr. Ashley moved to go into the consideration of Assembly bill No. 53, which was the Fee bill.

Mr. O'Neil moved to consider Assembly bill No. 272, in reference to the Water Front of San Francisco.

Mr. Bostwick moved to make the bill No. 272, the special order for Wednesday next at 11 o'clock.

Mr. French moved to amend the motion of Mr. Bostwick by inserting Tuesday instead of Wednesday.

Mr. Conness moved the previous question.

The previous question was sustained.

The motion of Mr. French to amend the motion of Mr. Bostwick,

Was not agreed to.

The question was then put upon the motion made by Mr. Bostwick to make the special order,

And adopted. H

The House then proceeded to consider Assembly bill No. 53, in Committee of the Whole, Mr. Van Cleft in the chair.

After spending some time in its consideration and amending the same,

On motion, the committee rose and were discharged.

Mr. Ashley moved a call of the House, and Messrs. Conness, Carr and Stowe demanded the yeas and nays.

YEAS.

Messrs. Ashley, Ballou, Bennett, Bowie, Carr, Conness, Godard, Gordon, Griffith, Hagans, Hastings, Hubert, Hunt, Hunter, Jones, Letcher, Musser, McDonald, McDuffie, McGee, Noel, Spencer, Springer, Stowe, Tallmadge, Warmcastle and Watkins—28.

So the House refused to sustain the call.

Mr. Hubbard moved to strike out the enacting clause, and demanded the previous question.

Mr. Conness moved to lay the bill on the table, and Messrs. Conness, Stowe and Carr demanded the yeas and nays.

YEAS.

Messrs. Anderson, Ashley, Ballou, Bennett, Bowie, Carr, Clingan, Conness, Cornwall, Ewer, Gilbert, Gordon, Griffith, Hagans, Hastings, Henry, Hubert, Hunt,

So the bill was laid on the table.

Mr. Nichols moved to reconsider the vote just taken to lay the bill on the table.

Mr. Van Cleft moved to indefinitely postpone the motion to reconsider, and Messrs. Conness, Warmcastle and Nichols demanded the yeas and nays.

YEAS.

Messrs. Anderson, Bagley, Briggs, Clingan, Fairfield, French, Gilbert, Godard, Herbert, Hoff, Hollister, Horr, Hubbard, Irwin, James, Kellogg, Koll, Mandeville, Myres, McKinney, Nichols, O'Neil, F. A. Park, J. W. Park, Pratt, Purdy, Ring, Rowan, Stevenson, Sweetland, Van Cleft and Mr. Speaker—32.

And Messrs. Conness, Bagley and Ballou, demanded the yeas and nays.

Mr. Nichols moved to indefinitely postpone the motion to lay on the table.

Mr. Godard moved to adjourn,

And Messrs. Conness, Ballou and Letcher, demanded the yeas and nays.

YEAS.

Messrs. Anderson, Bagley, Briggs, French, Gilbert, Godard, Hoff, Hubbard, Irwin, James, Koll, Mandeville, Myres, McKinney, Nichols, O'Neil, J. W. Park, Whitman and Mr. Speaker—19.

A. Park, Pratt, Purdy, Rowan, Spencer, Springer, Stevenson, Stow, Sweasey, Sweetland, Tallmadge, Tivy, Van Cleft, Warmcastle, Watkins and Whipple—49.

So the House refused to adjourn.

Mr. Conness raised a question of order, contending that the motion to indefinitely postpone made by Mr. Nichols was not in order, inasmuch as it was a privileged question which was proposed to be indefinitely postponed.

The Speaker decided the question in order, as a question of a similar character had just been taken by the House.

From which decision Mr. Conness appealed, and on the appeal Messrs. Conness, Nichols and J. W. Park demanded the yeas and nays.

YEAS.

Messrs. Anderson, Bagley, Briggs, Burton, Dannels, Fairfield, French, Gilbert, Godard, Henry, Herbert, Hoff, Hollister, Horr, Hubbard, Irwin, James, Kellogg, Koll, Lindsey, Mandeville, Myres, McDuffie, McDaniel, McKinney, Nichols, O'Neil, F. On motion of Mr. Hubbard, the following message from the Governor was read and 960 copies ordered to be printed :

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Sacramento City, May 8, 1854. }

To the Senate and Assembly of California :

In my Annual Message to the Legislature, presented at the commencement of the present session, as required by the constitution, I recommended measures deemed essential to the general prosperity of the State—the preservation of her faith and credit, and the diminution of the onerous taxation which now weighs so heavily upon the energies and industry of the people.

The means then pointed out for the accomplishment of these highly important and desirable objects were deemed ample and sufficient, and the hope indulged that ere this the several measures proposed would have been fully consummated.

The various measures commended to your early and favorable consideration at that time are still approved, and deemed necessary to meet the wants and liquidate the debt of the State; and I, therefore, feel called upon again to urge upon you the great importance of favorable action, and to implore you, in the name of our common constituents, not to adjourn until necessary measures for their relief shall have been matured and adopted.

The time appointed by the two houses for final adjournment is rapidly approaching, and unless some efficient plan to meet the wants of the State be adopted our existing debt must remain another year, without provision being made for its liquidation, rendering necessary a continuance of the present exorbitant rates of taxation. The most important of the measures there recommended, is the extension of the Water Front, of the city of San Francisco, and the sale, at public auction, of the lots within the same. It is believed that such an extension, while it would in no manner interfere with the rights or interests of the city of San Francisco, or be the least impediment to commerce, is demanded no less by the almost united voice of the people of California, than by the wants and necessities of the State.

That the title to this property is vested alone in the State, is no longer matter of doubt; and that it should be immediately placed at the disposal of her agents, and the entire proceeds of all sales made, applied to the payment of the State debt, is sufficiently demonstrated by the amount of that indebtedness, and the excessive taxation which is thereby rendered necessary to meet accruing demands upon the Treasury, and the interest falling due, semi-annually, upon our State Bonds.

A well matured plan for the extension of the Water Front, is, therefore, eminently demanded by the necessities of the State, and, it is believed, would be hailed by the people as a great and lasting benefit. During the late canvass there was no one subject more freely discussed before, and among the people, throughout the various counties of the State, than that of extension, and none received from them a more cordial and unmistakable endorsement.

I would, therefore, again commend to your immediate and favorable consideration this highly important measure, as one absolutely necessary to the present wants and future prosperity of the people and State of California.

Another subject which should command your immediate attention, is the selection of the balance of the five hundred thousand acres of land donated to the State by act of Congress, for school purposes, and also the lands granted for a seminary of learning and public buildings.

In order to secure the lands so donated, agents of the State should be authorized to make selections at the earliest practicable period; otherwise the State may lose, if not entirely, at least to some extent, the benefits to be derived from their sales, and our system of Common Schools, now dependent solely upon the interest accruing upon the proceeds of the sales of these lands, be left unprovided for, at a time, too, when it much needs aid and encouragement.

This exceedingly important subject should certainly receive favorable consideration at the present session. The amount of land donated for School purposes greatly exceeds the estimate presented in my annual message. The Secretary of the Interior, in a report made to the House of Representatives of the United States, on the 18th of February last, affirms that California, under an Act of March 3, 1853, which donates to the State the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections for School purposes, is entitled to six millions seven hundred and nineteen thousand, three hundred and twenty-four acres. Add to this the five hundred thousand acres donated by the Act of 1841, for the same important object, and we have a total of seven million two hundred and nineteen thousand three hundred and twenty-four acres, which if disposed of at the rate of two dollars per acre, will yield the sum of fourteen millions four hundred and thirty-eight thousand six hundred and forty-eight dollars.

In addition to the above, the Act of 1868 donates forty-six thousand and eighty acres for a Seminary of learning, and six thousand four hundred acres for Public Buildings. Of the five hundred thousand acres, two hundred and sixty thousand remain to be selected. In all cases where the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections were located before survey was made, and where there is no unoccupied domain in a township, the State is authorized to locate an equal amount in some other part of the State; so that by timely and vigorous exertions the whole amount of land donated by the several Acts of Congress can be secured to the State.

Judicious legislation for the protection of actual settlers on the public domain, is also a subject of deep interest to a large and enterprising portion of our fellow citizens, and, I trust, will receive favorable consideration before your adjournment. It is demanded by the wants of the people, and is rendered, by the present unsettled condition of land titles, necessary for the permanent welfare of the State.

As a necessary and practical measure of reform, I renew the recommendation to amend the Constitution of the State, as to provide for biennial sessions of the Legislature, and the abolishment of certain Constitutional offices, which would diminish State expenditures, annually, in the aggregate, at least, three hundred thousand dollars.

Your attention is again particularly invited to this subject, with the hope that the judicious and necessary changes proposed may be approved by you before adjournment, and referred to the next Legislature, as required by the Constitution.

The existing Hospital system has been a source of heavy expenditure to the State; and a more economical plan, it is hoped and believed, can be adopted, without materially curtailing the benefits of these institutions.

Proper and immediate legislation is also demanded in order to secure the interest of the State in all escheated estates. The laws existing in relation thereto are vague and meagre in their provisions, and require amendment and revision to enable the agents of the State to institute proper proceedings for the recovery of all such estates. Three estates of this character have been brought to the notice of the Executive, the value of which, in the aggregate, amounts at least to two millions of dollars. The importance of this subject will of course commend itself to your early and favorable attention. In this connection I would also refer to the suggestions contained in the communication of the Attorney General, transmitted to the Legislature a few weeks since.

I would also again call your attention to the importance of immediately adopting measures to secure the presentation to Congress of all the information necessary to correct and favorable action on the part of the General Government in relation to the Civil Fund and War Debt. In regard to the latter, it is proper to state that the Board of Examiners appointed to settle war claims on the State some time since applied for an appropriation sufficient to enable them to have the vouchers and accounts arranged in proper form for transmission to our delegation in Congress, but up to this date no action has been taken in the premises. It is highly important that these papers should, without delay, be forwarded to Washington. The appropriation asked for, it is believed, will enable the Board of Examiners, to place the necessary accounts and vouchers at the disposal of our Congressional delegation, and in all probability secure the restoration, in full, of the Civil Fund and the assumption of the entire War Debt, at the present session of Congress.

Additional legislation is believed necessary to compel payment into the State Treasury of the per centage now authorized to be collected on all sales made at public auction. It is understood that the existing law is uniformly enforced, so far as the collection of the per centage is concerned, but, judging from the small amount of revenue derived from this source, it is inoperative as to its payment into the State Treasury. This per centage, it is proper to state, is in addition to the charges authorized to be made on such sales by Auctioneers, and if its payment into the Treasury cannot be enforced, the provision in the Revenue Act authorizing its collection, in justice to the people, should at once be repealed. In this connection your attention is respectfully invited to the letter of the late Attorney General and Theo. Payne & Co., herewith transmitted.

More recently your attention has been called to the importance of modifying the several Acts on the Statute Book, "concerning corporations," so as to prevent the organization and existence of monopolies, to the restriction of trade, and the detriment of the whole people. These several laws require revision and amendment, and should receive careful and immediate consideration, while yet the evils complained of, are in their incipency, and within the proper and legitimate control of legislation.

These various measures, it is believed, have all been, more or less, subjects of examination and discussion on your part, and it is presumed, that their merits are now so fully understood, that it will require but little additional time to mature and pass upon them, and that it is not yet too late to mature those wholesome and statutory measures so imperiously demanded by the pressing wants and interests of the State of California.

Should you adjourn, however, without providing the means required to liquidate the debt of the State, as herein suggested, or by some other equally effective plan, the finances of the State will be left in the same critical condition as at your assembling, and the people, whom you represent, disappointed in their confident expectations, will justly regard the present Legislature, and the agents of the State, as having failed to accomplish the objects most desired by them.

It is, therefore, hoped that these considerations will induce united and prompt action for the relief of the State, ere a final adjournment shall leave us with a depleted Treasury and onerous taxation to struggle through another year of embarrassment. All these evils can be averted, and the credit of the State placed on a firm basis by the timely appropriation of those ample means at present within our reach, and to which your attention has heretofore, as now, been respectfully invited.

In connection with the foregoing suggestions, as well as those made in my Annual Message in relation to economy and reform, and providing the necessary means to liquidate the indebtedness of the State, it is deemed proper again to remind you that the constitution restricts the action of the Executive in these matters to a simple recommendation. Having once performed all that is required by the constitution, it was, perhaps, unnecessary for me again to refer to these several subjects, but impressed with the great importance of judicious legislation on all of them, before adjournment, I deem it my duty again respectfully to renew the recommendations then made, and to express the opinion that our common constituents, the people of California, at the date of your assembling, confidently anticipated that ample provision would be made during the present session for the payment of the existing State debt, that the expenditures of Government would be so far lessened as not to exceed the receipts into the Treasury, and that hereafter it would not be necessary to seek a market for the sale of depreciated evidences of State indebtedness.

All the measures above commended to your immediate and favorable consideration are regarded by me as eminently proper, and highly important to the whole people of the State, and, I trust, will each receive proper examination and meet with your approval before the present session shall have been brought to a termination.

In conclusion, permit me to express the hope that if my recommendations cannot be approved you will, before adjourning, devise and adopt other measures to protect the rights and interests of the people of California—secure the speedy payment of existing State indebtedness and justify a reduction of taxation.

Mr. Hunt, chairman, made the following report :

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred Assembly bill No. 810, entitled an Act for the relief of Captain Harry Love ; have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to submit the following report :

Your committee, after taking considerable testimony from Messrs. Harvy, Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate, McKinney and Herbert, of the Assembly, and McFarland, of the Senate, believes that the bill demands a due consideration by your body, and that it would be but an act of justice to refund to Captain Love a portion of the money expended by him for the benefit of the citizens of the State. Although there is no law to authorize the payment of this sum, your committee are confident that it will exert a beneficial influence upon, and tend to keep in check, other bands which may be formed in the State for similar purposes to that of Joaquin. That it is very expensive traveling in the mountains of this State no one at all acquainted with the country will deny, and that the small pittance of one hundred and fifty dollars per month would cover the necessary expenses of the commander of a company like that formed by Captain Love, cannot for the moment be expected. When it is known, that aside from the animals necessary for their own use, they must have extra animals to carry their provisions and camp equipage, and believing, as your committee do, that it is but an act of generosity on the part of the people of this State to one of its noble citizens, would recommend that the bill do pass.

The Committee on Enrolled Bills, to whom was referred the communication of his Excellency the Governor, with two bills having reference to the Asylum for the Insane of the State of California, have investigated the subject, and beg leave to submit the following report :

The bill to amend an Act to establish an Asylum for the Insane of the State of California, approved May 17, 1853, passed the Assembly on the 13th, and the Senate on the 21st of April, and was enrolled by the Enrolling Clerk ; but subsequently, on the 25th April, was reconsidered by the Senate, and was amended and passed with the addition of the " proviso " to the end of section 1st. The House then, on the 27th of April, concurred in the amendment of the Senate, and the bill was then enrolled as amended, and with others on the 29th reported to the Senate and Assembly as correctly enrolled, was signed by the proper officers, and was on the same day presented to his Excellency the Governor for his approval.

Subsequently the chairman of your committee, finding in his desk, with others received from the Enrolling Clerk, the first enrolled copy of the bill referred to, and not having been aware that it had been twice enrolled, believed that he had inadvertently overlooked the bill and had not taken it with the others to his Excellency as reported on the 29th, and then with other enrolled bills presented this second bill to the officers of the House and Senate for signature, and to his Excellency the Governor for approval.

The bill, therefore, which was signed by the officers of the Senate and Assembly on the 6th inst. is incorrect, it being the one that was passed without the proviso ; and it was by accidental circumstances that it received the signatures of the officers of the Senate and Assembly. Your committee would, therefore, recommend that the said copy be cancelled or destroyed, and the bill reported on the 29th inst. be returned to his Excellency the Governor, it being the correct law as passed by both branches of the Legislature as amended, and that the date of its passage as amended be endorsed upon the bill.

Mr. Herbert asked leave to make a report from the Committee of Ways and Means.

Leave granted.

Mr. Stowe moved to lay the report on the table.

Agreed to.

Mr. Myres offered an additional section to the bill 272, Water Front.

From which decision, Mr. Conness appealed, and Messrs. Dawley, Conness, and McDonald, demanded the yeas and nays :

YEAS.

Messrs. Bagley, Bowie, Bradford, Carr, Carrillo, Clingan, Cornwall, Gilbert, Green, Henry, Houghtaling, Hubert, James, Koll, Lindsey, McDuffie, Nichols, Noel, J. W. Park, Purdy, Stowe, Sweetland, Watkins, Whipple, and Whitman—25.

A. Park, Pratt, Ring, Rowan, Spencer, Springer, Stemmons, Stevenson, Sweasey, Tallmadge, Tivy, Van Cleft, and Warmcastle—47.

So the decision of the Chair was overruled.

The question then came up upon the motion made by Mr. Spencer to reconsider the vote, and decided in the affirmative.

The bill was then put upon its third reading, and Messrs. Hubbard, Stowe and Hollister demanded the yeas and nays.

YEAS.

Messrs. Anderson, Ashley, Ballou, Bennett, Bostwick, Briggs, Conness, Dannels, Davidson, Dawley, Fairfield, French, Godard, Gordon, Griffith, Hoff, Hollister, Horr, Hoyt, Hunt, Hunter, Irwin, Jones, Kellogg, Musser, Myres, McBrayer, McDonald, O'Neil, F. YEAS.

Messrs. Report the same back to the House without recommendation, not having time to make the necessary amendments.

J. H. BOSTWICK.

No action upon the bills.

Mr. Conness made the following report :

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred Senate bill, 199, " an Act appropriating money for the payment of Cornelius Cole, for services as agent of the State," have had the same under consideration, and respectfully recommend its passage.

Also, Assembly bill, 270, " to provide John S. Bradford with duplicate warrants, in lieu of certain warrants lost or destroyed," which they recommend the passage of.

Also, Assembly bill, 858, " an Act for the relief of A. M. Winn."

Accompanying the above entitled Act, or bill, is a petition from several citizens of Sacramento, representing that the State of California should pay to A. M. Winn an amount of nearly twenty thousand dollars, ($20,000,) and setting forth various kind and benevolent acts, which, they say, he performed in the years of 1849 and 1850.

Your committee have to express satisfaction that the character of a citizen of the State is thus certified to, and endorsed by so many of his most respectable fellow citizens, but in the opinion of your committee there is no basis for a claim on the State Treasury to be found in any of the certificates accompanying the bill. They therefore recommend that the bill do not pass.

They have also had under consideration Assembly bill, 345, "an Act for the relief of the city of San Jose," the first and only section of which reads as follows :

"The Comptroller of State is hereby authorized and required to draw his warrant, payable out of the General Fund, in favor of the Mayor and Common Council of the city of San Jose, for the sum of fifteen thousand"—What, the bill saith not; nor does any accompanying document set forth.

Your committee have, therefore, no evidence of the character of the distress experienced by the Mayor and Common Council of San Jose, as implied in the section of the bill above referred to. So they report the bill back, and recommend its reference to the introducer thereof.

Your committee have also had under consideration, Senate bill, 174, "an Act for the relief of Benjamin F. Marshall, late Sheriff of Calaveras county." And your committee can find no good reasons for allowing the claim of said Marshall.

It seems from information which we have derived from various sources, that Benjamin F. Marshall was elected Sheriff of Calaveras county at the general election in 1851, and that his right to the office was contested by one Nelson. And it further appears, that pending this contest, a bill was passed by the Legislature investing the Treasurer of the county with power to collect taxes. After the adjudication of the case by the District Court for Calaveras county, which terminated favorably to Mr. Marshall, he resumed the collection of taxes, the Treasurer having been only authorized to act in such capacity temporarily. Mr. Marshall now claims that the collection of taxes was by right a part of his official business, and that the State having invested another person than him with those duties, therefore the State is responsible to him for the profits resulting from their performance, as much as if his election had not been contested, and no person had been appointed by authority of law to perform those duties.

Your committee are of opinion that the collection of taxes forms no part of a Sheriff's duties, except as it may be permitted by legislative authority. And that the Legislature have an undoubted right to confer such power upon any other person whenever in its judgment the public interests may require such to be done. And that as a consequence they but exercised a proper discretion in authorizing the performance of those duties by another officer than the Sheriff.

This position was ably set forth in the report of the Assembly Judiciary Committee to whom the bill had been referred in the session of 1852, to which we refer. The report will be found on page 655, Assembly Journal of that year.

Without examining as to amount of the account against the State, your committee, believing that to allow such a claim would not only seriously embarrass the financial interests of the State, but that it would establish, without legal pretence, a precedent dangerous to the welfare of the people, recommend that it do not pass.

CONNESS, FAIRFIELD.

The following report was made by Mr. Hoff, chairman of the committee.

A majority of your Committee on Claims have considered the claim of B. F. Marshall, former Sheriff of Calaveras county, and with due respect to the opinions of a minority of the committee, most respectfully dissent from the conclusions at which they arrive.

It appears from good and reliable testimony that B. F. Marshall was, in the year 1851, elected Sheriff of Calaveras county, and received his proper credentials from the then County Clerk. After the decease of the clerk, his successor, believing that an error existed in the canvass of votes for the sheriffalty, issued his certificate of election to one Waterman H. Nelson, who thereupon commenced suit in the District Court in the name of the State against said Marshall, which resulted in a verdict in favor of the latter ; this too in a court where the facts presented were known to all parties, and who were better capacitated to adjudicate an issue of this character than a tribunal far removed from the people over whom the officer was to exercise his functions.

The defeated party, however, disturbed the solemn fiat of the jury, and through the direct intervention of the Attorney General appealed the case to the Supreme Court of the State. Such action in itself was not improper, nor opposed to the spirit of our laws, but after such appeal had been made the case was permitted to slumber upon the calendar, and at every period that it was brought forward for consideration it was placed again at its foot. This course was pursued by the State's law officer until the franchises of the office were entirely consumed by another party, when a decision in the case was had before a full bench and the original verdict of the jury unanimously sustained. It is unnecessary to dwell on the injustice of such action, nor is it needful to present innumerable decisions of able jurists that oppression like this is opposed to the fundamental principles of good government.

Pending this controversy in the courts a bill special in its character was passed the Legislature of 1852 conferring upon the Treasurer of Calaveras the power of collecting taxes, thereby depriving the sheriff of a portion of the legitimate emoluments of his office.

In view of these facts the majority of the committee consider the claim of B. F. Marshall entitled to the favorable consideration of the Assembly, and do most respectfully recommend the passage of the bill.

JOHN J. HOFF,
Chairman.

On motion of Mr. Fairfield, the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. Dannels in the chair, to consider the several bills reported by the committee.

After spending some time in their consideration, on motion, the committee rose, reported the bill back to the House, and asked to be discharged from their further consideration.

Mr. Conness moved the previous question.

The previous question was sustained.

The bill was read a third time and passed.

Senate bill No. 193, on its third reading, referred to the San Francisco Delegation.

Mr. Ashley made the following report :

The Committee on Education to whom was referred a petition from Lone Valley, asking an appropriation of money for the establishment of a Seminary of Learning at that place, would most respectfully report :

That, considering the great indebtedness of the State, it would be unwise at present to appropriate money for the purpose of establishing Seminaries. Should the prayer of these petitioners be granted, it would be incumbent on the Legislature to grant similar privileges to all persons similarly situated—and there are numerous such communities in our State—thus inducing an immense expenditure of money we have no means of raising. It is believed the Common School Fund will warrant the sustaining a sufficient number of Common Schools to satisfy the more urgent wants of the different communities in the State, and the organization of higher schools, by law, must await the receipt of funds it is confidently believed will be realized from the sale of State lands. So your committee report the petition to the House, and recommend no further action.

The committee has also considered the report of the Secretary of State and find that the important changes and amendments of the law relating to the State Library, suggested in the Secretary's report, are embodied in various bills now before the Legislature, and hence it is unnecessary to report any new bill, but we would respectfully ask the House to carefully consider the bills now before it based upon the suggestions of the Secretary of State.

Assembly bill No. 138, has been under consideration, and we find that its passage is unnecessary, because it is believed the House has already passed an Act satisfactorily providing for County Superintendents of Common Schools.

Also, an Act supplemental to an Act, to establish a system of Common Schools, as amended in Codified Laws by Garfield and Snyder, has been considered, and believing that its objects are attained by the Act concerning Schools which has passed the Assembly, your committee would recommend that it do not pass.

The report of the present State Superintendent, and the accompanying message of the Governor have been under consideration—and your committee have already reported resolutions carrying into effect the Governor's recommendation as to School Land Warrants, which resolutions have passed. As to the other recommendations of the Superintendent, the greater part are before the House in the form of bills, and we find it unnecessary to advise further upon the report.

Mr. Dawley made following report :

The Committee on Commerce have had under consideration Senate bills, Nos. 182 and 183, and beg leave to report the same back, without amendment, and recommend their passage.

Senate bill, No. 182, above reported, read a third time and passed.

Agreed to.

Mr. Conness moved that Mr. Hubbard be required to report back to the House a bill to repeal or abolish the office of Gauger for San Francisco, and Messrs. Sweetland, Conness and Lindsey, demanded the yeas and nays.

YEAS.

Messrs. So the House decided that Mr. Hubbard should report the bill.

On motion of Mr. Hubert, the House took up for consideration Senate bill No. 94, Deficiency bill.

On motion of Mr. Mandeville, the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. Van Cleft in the chair, to consider the bill.

So the amendment was adopted.

Mr. Nichols moved to reconsider the vote just taken, and Messrs. Conness, Letcher and Hubbard demanded the yeas and nays :

YEAS.

Messrs. Anderson, Ashley, Bagley, Ballou, Bennett, Bowie, Burton, Conness, Dannels, Ewer, Fairfield, Gilbert, Gordon, Hagans, Hollister, Hubbard, Hunter, Koll, Letcher, Lindsey, McBrayer, McDonald, Nichols, Noel, Pratt, Purdy, Ring, Rowan, Stemmons, Stowe, Sweasey, Sweetland, Tallmadge and Watkins—34.

Mr. Stowe, chairman of Select Committee made the following report:

The undersigned, a majority of the committee appointed to investigate the cause of the failure to pay the interest on the civil funded debt of the State of California, due and payable in the City of New York, on the first day of January, 1854, beg leave to submit the following report:

That on the 29th day of October last, Major Roman, late Treasurer of State, paid into the hands of Messrs. Palmer, Cook & Co. the sum of $61,750 00, for the purpose of meeting the interest coupons due in the City of New York on the first of January last; and that said Treasurer took from said Bankers a Bond, with sureties that they would "well and truly" pay the said coupons at the American Exchange Bank, in said city, as payment of the same should be demanded.

The conditions of this Bond were not complied with—the American Exchange Bank alledging that no funds had been provided for that purpose by the agents of this State.

At this juncture, Messrs. Duncan, Sherman & Co., of New York, generously volunteered the payment of said coupons from their own funds, and at last advices had paid nearly the entire amount falling due—thus rescuing from impending ruin the credit of the State. This firm, by letter under date of January 5, called the attention of his Excellency Gov. Bigler, to the part they had acted in the premises, and requested an early reimbursement of their outlays in behalf of California.

We regret to add, that up to the 15th of March, no action had been taken upon the communication of Duncan, Sherman, & Co., by those who should have given the subject their prompt attention.

Palmer, Cook & Co., claim to have had a sufficient amount of money in the hands of the American Exchange Bank to meet the interest when due. Upon this subject your committee express no opinion. They would state as a reason, that their investigation has been necessarily of an ex parte character, being able to refer only to the books and correspondence of Palmer, Cook & Co., without facilities of procuring the statements of the American Exchange Bank.

It is apparent that there are discrepancies and wide differences in the balance sheets of these two banking houses, and it is to be regretted that the credit of California should have suffered so seriously by being entangled in the business differences of private bankers, and demonstrates the importance of entrusting such vital interests as State credit to none except such as the people have selected for the transaction of their business, and as guardians of their interests.

If it be admitted that Palmer, Cook & Co. did have the amount they claim to have had in the American Exchange Bank to meet the interest, yet we cannot exculpate them from great blame in the premises, nor from gross negligence as guardians of the interest committed to their keeping. Two reasons for this censure will suffice. First, This House should have transmitted a specific fund to their correspondents in New York to meet these demands against our Government, and not have involved State funds and State credit with their own confused business affairs—and, Second, If no special fund was to be remitted, definite and specific directions should have been given to the American Exchange Bank to pay the interest out of deposits in their hands. The business relations of these houses were such as commonly exist between establishments of this character. The Bank in this State making remittances to their correspondents in New York, and drawing drafts against the same, interest coupons against the State of California could scarcely be denominated the drafts of Palmer, Cook & Co., or payable out of the remittances of that firm unless by special direction. In these two particulars we think that Palmer, Cook & Co. are most grossly at fault. The credit of a State, temporarily entrusted to that party, would seem properly to have demanded more careful keeping and attention than its fate in this instance would indicate. This negligence would have been much more injurious in its results but for the timely action of the House of Duncan, Sherman & Co. To it California owes a debt which the simple reimbursement of advances volunteered in our behalf cannot cancel. Up to the 15th of March nothing had been done by way of liquidating this demand—nor had that firm as late as the 25th of March received even the poor pittance of an acknowledgment of their communication of January 5th, to our Executive.

It is alleged that on the 15th March a messenger was dispatched with the necessary funds, to settle with Duncan, Sherman & Co., and redeem the interest coupons in their hands.

Such tardy justice as this is without excuse, and added to the failure to pay the interest when due, renders those having charge of this matter, doubly in fault, and well nigh places the State upon the list of repudiators.

Prompt reimbursement of Duncan, Sherman & Co., was in an eminent degree due that firm, and would have greatly tended to mitigate the delinquencies of our agents in this State.

In closing, we feel constrained to express the hope that in future the State Treasurer will adopt some plan for the payment of these demands by which the recurrence of similar failures will be securely guarded against. Our people pay their taxes, though onerous, as cheerfully as the citizens of any State in the Union; and it is with regret that they see that their liabilities are not met when they have provided the means therefor.

Owing to our isolated position, the ruinous speculations entered into by eastern capitalists in conjunction with our citizens, and the consequent distrust entertained towards us, both as private citizens, and as a sovereign State, our executive officers are loudly called upon to keep and protect, with ceaseless vigilance, the vast interests committed to their charge by a confiding people, so that the world may be compelled to acknowledge that California credit rests upon as secure a basis as that of any of her sisters of the Atlantic—the broad basis of both ability and willingness to meet promptly every demand.

The following messages were received from the Governor :

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT. }
Sacramento City, May 15, 1854. }

To the Assembly of the State of California:

I have this day approved an Act entitled an Act to appropriate money to enable the Trustees of the Insane Asylum to erect an additional building, and to enclose the grounds belonging to the Asylum, which originated in the Assembly.

This bill, I would state, was received on the 10th instant, and action, on my part delayed, because it was hoped and believed that provision would be made in the Revenue Bill, for the redemption of the eighty thousand dollars of Comptroller's Warrants, authorized by this Act to be issued from the General Fund.

The Act, passed at the last session, authorizing the erection of a State Prison, provided for the collection of a special tax to meet accruing interest on the Bonds issued to the contractor for the work, as well as for their redemption at maturity. A similar provision should have been incorporated either in this Act, or in the Revenue Bill.

In this connection, I would refer you to Article eighth of the Constitution, the spirit of which, is by some, regarded as demanding that provision, should, in all cases, be made for the payment of indebtedness incurred for special objects, or works, authorized by Acts of the Legislature.

A proper regard for this Article of the Constitution no doubt prompted the provision in the above named Act, authorising the erection of a State Prison.

The State, however, is possessed of means amply sufficient not only to pay her entire indebtedness, but also to provide for the erection, in splendid style, of every necessary public building. The failure to secure and appropriate these ample means is certainly not chargeable to neglect or indifference on the part of the Executive. All the power given me by the Constitution has been exercised to secure favorable action, and place the Treasury of the State in a condition to fully warrant such appropriation as the one provided for in this bill.

The peculiar character of this benevolent institution, designed as it is to extend relief to those suffering fellow-beings, who, bereft of reason and wrecked in mind, are thrown upon the charity of the State, alone could have induced me at this time to approve an Act so deficient in its provisions as the one under consideration, and I sincerely regret that there is not sufficient time to allow you to reconsider the same and make suitable provision for the redemption of the warrants authorised to be issued for the benefit of this charitable institution.

In conclusion, I would add that I am so anxious for the success of this institution, and so entirely willing to extend to it all the aid and encouragement necessary to its welfare, that although departing from the wise and judicious policy pursued in relation to the erection of a State Prison, I feel constrained for the reasons above stated to approve this Act, but hereafter I will, in every case, refuse to sanction appropriating large sums of money for specific objects or works which do not provide amply for the liquidation of the indebtedness thereby incurred.

JOHN BIGLER.

Resolved, That Dr. John B. Trask be requested to deliver to the Secretary of State the minerals mentioned in the list attached to his Geological Report on the Geology of the Coast Mountains, and part of the Sierra Nevada, submitted to the Legislature on the 4th of May, 1854.

Mr. O'Neil, offered a concurrent resolution appointing a joint committee to examine the Comptroller's books after the adjournment of the Legislature.

On motion, the resolution was laid on the table.

Mr. Bradford offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be directed to distribute the number of Geological Reports ordered printed, to the members of this House, in a pro rata proportion, after retaining 500 copies for his office, and 200 copies for Dr. John B. Trask.

Mr. Burton offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Assembly are hereby unanimously tendered to the Hon. J. W. Mandeville, for the able and impartial manner in which he has discharged the duties of Speaker pro tem. for this House.

The hour of 12 having arrived, the special order of the day, a report made by Mr. Stowe, from the committee appointed in reference to the interest due in January last, was taken up.

Mr. Sweetland moved to take a recess for one hour.

Lost.

Mr. James moved the adoption of the report:

Mr. O'Neil moved to lay the report on the table, and Messrs. Letcher, Conness, and Stemmons, demanded the yeas and nays.

YEAS.

Messrs. Ashley, Bagley, Ballou, Conness, Davidson, Dawley, Fairfield, Gilbert, Godard, Hoff, Hollister, Horr, Hoyt, Koll, Musser, Myres, McBrayer, McDonald, O'Neil, F. A. Park, Pratt, Purdy, Ring, Rowan, Sweasey, Tallmadge and Van Cleft—27.

So the motion to lay on the table was lost.

Mr. Conness moved a call of the House, which was sustained by the following vote: Messrs. Hoyt, Van Cleft and Pratt, demanding the yeas and nays.

YEAS.

Messrs. Anderson, Ashley, Bagley, Ballou, Bostwick, Clingan, Conness, Dawley, Fairfield, Gilbert, Godard, Gordon, Hoff, Hollister, Horr, Hoyt, Irwin, Jones, Kellogg, Koll, Musser, Myres, McBrayer, McDonald, O'Neil, F. The roll was called by the Clerk, and the following members were absent:

Messrs. French, Green, Griffith, Herbert, Hubert, Hunt, McBrayer, Nichols, J. W. Park, and Springer.

The Sergeant-at-Arms was dispatched after absentees.

On motion of Mr. James, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

Mr. Hoyt moved to indefinitely postpone the motion to adopt the report.

Mr. Letcher moved the previous question, which was sustained; Messrs. Hoyt, Stowe and Letcher, demanding the yeas and nays, by the following vote:

YEAS.

Messrs. Anderson, Bennett, Bostwick, Bowie, Bradford, Briggs, Burton, Carr, Carrillo, Clingan, Cornwall, Dannels, Ewer, Gordon, Hagans, Hastings, Henry, Herbert, Houghtaling, Hunter, James, Jones, Letcher, Lindsey, Mandeville, McDuffie, McDaniel, McKinney, Noel, J. The motion to indefinitely postpone then came up.

Mr. Myres objected to the motion, giving as a reason that the hour of one o'clock had arrived, and, according to a resolution which passed this day, it was not competent to do any business after that hour.

The Speaker, Mr. Mandeville, in the chair, decided the motion in order; stating that the previous question had been sustained by the House prior to the hour of one o'clock, and the next motion was the indefinite postponement of the motion to adopt the report.

From which decision, Mr. Myres appealed.

The Chair refused to entertain the appeal.

The vote was then taken upon the motion to indefinitely postpone the motion to adopt the report, and

Messrs. Stowe, Letcher, and Hastings, demanded the yeas and nays :

YEAS.

Messrs. Hoff and Hollister—2.

NAYS.

W. Park, Stemmons, Stevenson, Stowe, Warmcastle, Watkins, and Whitman—34.

There being no quorum voting, the question was not decided, many of the members refusing to vote.

The Speaker then announced the hour of one o'clock, and stated that no further business would be done, except to receive reports and communications.

Mr. Conness moved to take a recess until 3 o'clock, and Messrs. Bradford, Carrillo, and Whitman, demanded the yeas and nays :

YEAS.

Messrs. Ashley, Bagley, Ballou, Clingan, Conness, Davidson, Dawley, Gilbert, Godard, Griffith, Horr, Hoyt, Hubbard, Irwin, Kellogg, Koll, Mandeville, Myres, McBrayer, McDonald, F. A. Park, Pratt, Ring, Rowan, Tallmadge, and Van Cleft—26.

So the House refused to take a recess until 3 o'clock.

Mr. Conness moved to take a recess until 4 o'clock.
Agreed to.

Four o'clock, P. M., the House met pursuant to adjournment.
On motion of Mr. Bradford, the House took a recess until half past 7, P. M.

Half past 7, P. M., the House met pursuant to adjournment.

The following messages were received from the Governor :

Sacramento City, May 16, 1854. }

To the Assembly of California :

An Act entitled an Act in reference to the Journals of the Senate and Assembly, is herewith returned without approval.

This Act would seem to authorize compensation to the officers named in addition to the per diem allowed by existing law without fixing the amount which they are to receive.

Believing the compensation now allowed amply sufficient, the bill is returned without approval.

JOHN BIGLER.

The House refused to pass the bill by a two-thirds vote.

An Act entitled an Act to authorize William F. McLean and George Calloway to build a Wharf in the county of San Francisco beyond the western limits of the city of San Francisco and near the said line, is herewith returned without approval.

This Act grants the parties named in it the privilege of building a Wharf on property belonging to the State, and also to enjoy, for twenty years, the entire proceeds derived from its use.

I cannot yield assent to this Act for the reason that long before the expiration of the term of years for which the privilege is granted, the limits of the city will, unquestionably, be extended, and if the Wharf authorized to be erected should prove not to be on a line with a street, serious inconveniences must result, and the interests of the State thereby injuriously affected.

JOHN BIGLER.

The House refused to pass the bill by a two-thirds vote.

Mr. Van Cleft offered a Concurrent Resolution, which was adopted, appointing a Joint Committee to wait upon the Governor prior to adjournment, and Messrs. Van Cleft, Myres and Whitman were appointed on the part of the Assembly.

Mr. McBrayer offered the following, which was adopted :

Resolved, By the Assembly, that the thanks of this House are hereby tendered to Blanton McAlpin, Chief Clerk of the Assembly, and to J. W. Scobey, Assistant Clerk, for the attentive and efficient discharge of the duties of their office.

Mr. J. W. Park offered the following, which was adopted :

Resolved, That the thanks of the Assembly be hereby tendered to the Sergeant-at-Arms, Door-Keeper, Pages, Porters, Clerks and Attachees, for the faithful and prompt discharge of their duties.

Mr. Dawley offered a resolution tendering thanks to the different reporters for their impartial reports through the various papers of the State.

Resolution adopted.

The following message was received from the Senate :

I am instructed to inform the Assembly that the Senate has concurred in Assembly Resolution to appoint a committee to wait upon the Governor, and have appointed on their part, Messrs. Mahoney, Sawyer and Bryan.

Respectfully,

JOHN Y. LIND,
Secretary.

Mr. Ring offered the following, which was adopted :

Resolved, That the porters be requested to clean up the Assembly Chamber tomorrow morning, and that the Sergeant-at-Arms be instructed to allow for the same in the certificates furnished them.

Mr. Conness was appointed in place of Mr. Whitman to wait upon the Governor.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
Sacramento City, May 15, 1854. }

To the Assembly of the State of California :

I have this day approved the following Acts, which originated in the Assembly, viz :

An Act to authorise William Roberts and others to build a Wharf at Bucksport, in Humboldt county.

An Act to fund that portion of the debt of Trinity county accruing previous to the 12th of May, 1853, apportioned to Humboldt county, and provide for the payment thereof.

An Act for the relief of Powell Weaver.

An Act amendatory of an Act dividing the State into counties, and establishing the seats of Justice therein, passed April 25, 1851.

An Act amendatory of an Act to provide for the incorporation of Railroad Companies, approved April 22, 1853.

An Act to amend section seven of an Act entitled an Act concerning the office of Surveyor General.

An Act to provide for the appointment of Deputy County Treasurers.

An Act for the relief of Capt. Harry Love.

An Act creating a Board of Commissioners, and the office of Overseer, in each township of the several counties of the State, to regulate water courses within their respective limits.

An Act concerning the office of Secretary of State.

An Act for the relief of John Boling, Sheriff of Mariposa county.

An Act to authorise Larkin Richardson to build a Wharf in Solano county.

It is proper here to state, on the eve of your final adjournment, that the several relief bills approved this session only received my signature after having the assurance of Senators and members of the Assembly from the respective counties in which the claimants reside, that the claims were equitable and valid.

JOHN BIGLER.

Mr. Van Cleft made the following report :

The committee appointed on the part of the House to wait upon his Excellency, the Governor, for the purpose of ascertaining whether he has any further communication to make, report that they have discharged that duty, and that the Governor has no further communication for this House, except what is herewith presented, in writing, addressed to the Speaker of the Assembly.

The following message was received from the Governor, and 2,000 copies ordered to be printed :

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
Sacramento City, May 15, 1854. }

To the Senate and Assembly of California :

Your committee inform me that you are ready to adjourn, and desire to know whether I have any further communication to make.

In response I cannot refrain from expressing sincere regret that all the more important measures required by the people, have been defeated either by a direct vote or delay in acting upon them.

The bill providing for the extension of the water front of the city of San Francisco, passed the Assembly, but was defeated in the Senate, by an adjournment of that body on Friday last, before it could be received and read a first time.

This important measure, if it had received your sanction, would, in a comparatively short period of time have secured the payment of the entire State Debt, and relieved the people from the burthen of taxation, in which they have heretofore acquiesced patiently, believing that the present Legislature would provide for their relief, by the appropriation of those ample means so entirely within their reach.

The bill providing for the selection of the balance of School, Seminary, and other Public Lands, to my great surprise, met with determined opposition, and was finally defeated.

I deeply regret the defeat of this bill, because a failure, for another year, to select these lands, will doubtless place beyond the reach of the State, all the more valuable public lands which might now have been secured, and, of course, to some extent deprive the rising generation of the benefits of the liberal donations made by Congress.

The bill providing for the protection of actual settlers, although passed in the Assembly by a large majority, failed to receive the approval of the Senate.

I had indulged the hope that this measure, so exceedingly important to the interests of the great mass of agriculturalists, would have received your willing approval.

This hope, confidently indulged, no less by the people than myself, has not been realized, and the duty will again devolve upon them of selecting representatives before favorable action on the subject can be obtained.

Notwithstanding that the evidence of the Auctioneers themselves has been presented, to the effect that the "State duties," are by them uniformly collected to the amount annually of not less than one hundred thousand dollars, measures have not been adopted to compel payment into the Treasury. It is proper to state, that although interested persons have most unremittingly assailed and misrepresented this measure, the amended bill provided effectually against monopoly, and allowed every person to engage in the business of an Auctioneer by giving sufficient bond for faithful compliance with the provisions of the Act and should have received the approval of your bodies, as a measure essentially necessary for the interests of the State.

You have more than once been invoked to adopt the necessary measures to secure for the State the Leidesdorff and two other escheated estates, amounting in value, in the aggregate, to at least two millions of dollars. But this recommendation, like others equally important, has not, in any effectual manner, been sanctioned, and it is now quite probable that before the meeting of another Legislature, new difficulties will arise to prevent their recovery by the State. Prompt and decisive action, in relation to these estates, would have added, at least, two millions to the School Fund.

The necessity for amendment and revision of the several Acts on the Statute book relating to Corporations was so apparent, and the evidence so clearly before you, that protection to the rights and interests of the people required your interference, that I never doubted, even for a moment, that you would take favorable action on the subject before adjournment. But, like the other important measures referred to, the people must again give expression to their views, before proper legislation in relation to corporations can be obtained.

Amendments to the Constitution have been repeatedly recommended, which, if adopted, would annually lessen the expenditures of government not less than three hundred thousand dollars. This recommendation, like most others made, has not been carried into effect by necessary legislation.

It is well known that vigorous effort is now being made by our delegation in Congress, and others, to secure the restoration of the "Civil Fund," and the assumption by the General Government of the War Debt. In order to have the statements, accounts, and vouchers, relating to these important matters so prepared, that Congress could properly understand them and legislate intelligently in relation thereto, action on your part was deemed necessary. It is to be hoped, however, that this neglect will not seriously interfere with the favorable action of Congress on these important subjects.

Your attention was also directed to the fact, that Congress, disregarding the wishes of the people of this State, as expressed by the Legislature in 1852, has authorized the Superintendent of Indian Affairs to set apart five reservations and locate the various tribes of Indians, within the limits of the State. This is not only a departure from the course pursued by the General Government for more than half a century, but cannot fail to be alike injurious to the people of the State and the Indians themselves. Not a word of remonstrance on your part has been sent to the councils of the nation, and it is, therefore, presumed that this policy, injurious as it will certainly prove to be, is fastened upon the State.

Complaints from the people have been made in almost every form, in relation to the vast immigration from Asia and the islands of the South Pacific, which is now crowding our mines to the injury of our own people, and filling our principal cities and towns with a population ignorant alike of our language and laws. By special message in 1852, I expressed fully my views on this subject, and did not deem it necessary at this session to renew them, especially as the people through the press and other channels, were making known their opinions and desires in relation to the subject ; but cannot refrain from expressing the opinion that a judicious enactment in reference thereto, should have been passed before your adjournment.

While you have failed to appropriate the vast means belonging to the State, and apply them to the payment of her debt and the support of Government, you have been lavish in appropriations for various objects, exceeding in the aggregate one million three hundred thousand dollars, from a large portion of which ($528,219 16) I have felt constrained to withhold my sanction,

In conclusion, I would repeat that I sincerely regret that these various measures, so highly important to the interests of the State, and which in the late canvass received the unmistakable endorsement of the people at the ballot-box, have not received your favorable consideration.

Our common constituents confidently anticipated that wise and salutary measures would be adopted to meet the wants of the State, and that a thorough system of reform would characterize the legislation of the session now drawing to a close. They hoped and believed that early provision would be made for the speedy payment of existing indebtedness, and that the finances of the State would be placed on a firm basis. By the timely and judicious appropriation of those vast means which the liberality of Congress and the unequalled resources of this young State have placed immediately within our reach, this undoubtedly might have been accomplished, and the State of California prepared to meet any future exigency that might arise.

These just hopes and expectations, however, I regret to say, have not been realized, and now, at the close of a session of four and a half months, without any provision having been made for the payment of an increased State debt, the people must another year bear oppressive and exorbitant taxation to meet the wants and requirements of a government whose expenditures under existing circumstances necessarily exceed the receipts into the Treasury.

Having, as I believe, fully discharged my duty as required by the Constitution, and from time to time, even at the risk of being considered importunate, directed your attention to these various subjects, it only remains for me, in conclusion of this, my last communication with your honorable body, respectfully to inform you that I have now no "further communication to make."

JOHN BIGLER.

The following message was received from the Senate :

I am instructed to inform the Assembly that the Senate having concluded the business of the session, is now ready to adjourn sine die.

Respectfully,

JOHN Y. LIND,
Secretary.

Mr. O'Neil moved that the Speaker adjourn the House sine die.

Whereupon the Speaker rose and said :

At the commencement of the present year it became my privilege as well as my duty to address you, on the occasion of being elected to preside over this body. Now that the hour has arrived for the final adjournment of this House, before we separate I must be permitted to return to you my thanks, for the kind, generous and forbearing treatment, I have received from the beginning to the end of the session. During the present term of the Legislature we have been called upon to consider many matters of vital importance and original character ; during these deliberations opposing opinions have often fiercely contended for supremacy in these halls. But the storms soon faded away. Friendship and mutual esteem with their genial influence put aside the cloud and restored the sunshine of harmony, to an assemblage collected to discuss the interests of California, and not to consider speculative or individual ends. The result has proved most beneficial. The important business of the session has been transacted and we are about to part—to sunder the cherished ties which many of us have formed during the past few months, and return to render an account of our stewardship to our several constituencies, who will, undoubtedly, freely sanction what they conceive right, and as readily condemn whatever may appear to them to be wrong.

The ruffled passions and angry feelings engendered by fierce contention and heated debates, will soon be forever calmed, and remembered among the things that were, and give way to more pleasant remembrances of attachments here formed, which will be erased only by death.

The State no longer needs our services—our homes invite us to our domestic duties, and I pronounce this House adjourned sine die.

CHARLES S. FAIRFAX,
Speaker of the Assembly.

BLANTON McALPIN,
Clerk of the Assembly.

The Comptroller has estimated the taxable property of the State at one hundred million dollars. The returns already received warrant the belief that the grand list of assessments will not be short of that sum, when fully rendered. The total amount must, however, be far less than the actual amount of taxable property in the State. This is an increase of fifty-seven million dollars over the assessments of 1851-2, and thirty-five million dollars over the assessments of 1852-3. Under our present revenue law, sixty cents on the one hundred dollars valuation, is assessed and collected—thirty-nine cents of interest tax and twenty-one cents for the general fund. It is believed that four hundred and forty thousand dollars will be collected from real and personal property, which will give two hundred and ninety-two thousand five hundred dollars to the interest funds and one hundred and forty-seven thousand five hundred dollars to the General Fund.

The estimated revenue from Foreign Miners, it is confidently believed, will be fully realized, as also that to be derived from polls.

Should the decisions of our courts result in sustaining the suits directed by the State for the collection of the tax upon the sales of Consigned Goods, the estimate of revenue from that source may be too low.

As will be seen, there has been a large falling off in the amount derived from Gaming Licenses, and the indications are, that this source of revenue will soon be nearly, if not wholly, cut off, such has been and must be, hereafter, the decrease of the mere business of gaming in our State.

The revenue derived from the passenger tax, has also fallen off very considerably, and it is thought that the estimate of the same, for the present year, is full as large as will be realized.

It is believed that, at least, seventy five thousand dollars will be received from Auction Duties and Licenses, should the decisions of our courts sustain suits now pending for their collection.

The expenditures for the Executive and Judicial Departments have been materially lessened, also the expenditures for Hospitals.

The Comptroller has not estimated the amount which will be required for the payment of interest on our seven per cent. (Civil) Bonds, as it is impossible, at the present time, to know the amount of this class of indebtedness, so much is now being redeemed in payment for State property. It is probable also, that these redemptions may continue, and that the whole will be absorbed during the coming year.

The entire Civil, School and War Debt of the State, existing at the close of the Fiscal Year, June 30th, 1853, was $3,193,081 30—and up to Dec. 20th is $3,464,815 70

The debt to the School Fund ($463,360) is, however, owned by the State, and does not constitute a real demand for which she is to provide, other than for the payment of seven per cent. interest on the amount accruing from sales of School Lands—$9,576 25 of three per cent per month bonds remain unredeemed at this date, noth aving been presented for payment at the Treasury.

It is confidently believed that our War Debt will be assumed by the General Government (See article on "Indian War Claims" in a subsequent part of this report.)

The State Prison Bonds will be nearly absorbed for State property by the 1st of January, 1854.

The joint proceeds of the Interest Tax of 1851 and 1852, (35 cents on the one hundred dollars valuation of real and personal property,) is not only paying our interest on our seven per cent. Civil Bonds issued in 1851 and 1852, and payable in 1855, 1861, and 1870—but has redeemed (as will be seen by the subjoined table) $96,000 to this date. Although the interest tax would afford a surplus, annually, in amount sufficient to to redeem these bonds at or before maturity; still it is not probable that it will be required for this purpose much longer, as the sales of State property, pledged to their redemption under the Act authorizing their issue, will, from present indications, redeem the whole of these outstanding liabilities at no very distant period. Up to date of December 29th, sales of State property in the City of San Francisco, the results of which accrue to the "Sinking Funds" of 1851 and 1852, amounted to four hundred and ninety four thousand one hundred and seventy five dollars, sufficient to cancel all the seven per cent. Civil Bonds due in 1855, 1861, and a portion of those due in 1870. Other sales, it is believed, will, in the course of a few months, absorb the remainder of these obligations.

The large revenues derived from taxation, and the 25 per cent. of amounts received from sales made by the City of San Francisco, on the 26th of December, giving the State about three hundred thousand dollars in addition to the sales of State property, must, it is confidently believed, defray current expenses hereafter.

DELINQUENCIES.

The sum due the State from L. A. Besançon, and Robert Semple, surety, has not been collected. Mr. Besançon, died in the State of Louisiana some months since.

The judgment against D. J. Woodlief, has not yet been satisfied.

The suit against the absconded treasurer of Calaveras county and sureties, instituted in 1851, also remains unsatisfied.

The above suits were for defalcations occurring in 1850 and 1851, and it is not probable that the State will ever realize any thing therefrom. For particulars with regard to each of the foregoing suits and defalcations, see report of the Comptroller, dated December 1852.

The whole amount due the State by A. C. McDonald, treasurer of Sonoma county, has been paid over by his sureties, and the judgment satisfied.

On the 10th of December, 1852, the Comptroller directed a suit upon the official bond of John H. Philips, deceased, late treasurer of El Dorado county, after full trial, it has been decided against the State. On the 5th of December, 1853, a letter stating the history and progress of said suit was received at this office from the District Attorney of that county, which is now on file. In view of the facts therein disclosed, the Comptroller directed a suspension of further proceedings in said suit, unless ordered by the Legislature. The case was before the District Court at three several terms, and having been decided against the State, it was believed unnecessary and oppressive to prosecute it any further.

I am informed by the District Attorney of Shasta county, that the whole amount due from William Bonmifield, treasurer of that county, has been collected and paid to the present treasurer, for the State.

GENERAL REMARKS.

During the past year large accessions have been made to the general wealth of our State. And its resources, agricultural and commercial, especially agricultural, have been much more fully developed than in any former year. The product of gold has also increased over the preceding year, many millions.

Property has acquired a more stable and fixed value, not only in our cities and towns, but throughout the State. Although our assessments show an increase over any former year, still it is certain that the grand list of assessments is, in amount, far below the actual valuation of real and personal property, which should legitimately be embraced among the objects of taxation.

Could the titles to lands meet with a speedy adjudication and settlement, much property now paying little into the State treasury, would be reached, and afford the basis of a large and constantly increasing revenue.

Collecting Officers.

Partly from the fact that Collecting Officers have this year been better paid than heretofore, it is expected that the revenue will not only be greatly increased over any former year, but will be much more uniformly and promptly collected and paid over. In past years the remuneration to this class of officers was so small that in the mountain regions, they were unable in many cases to pay even their ordinary current expenses, while engaged in the performance of their duties—consequently no uniformity existed in collections. The change made in this particular, in the revenue law of the last session, was salutary and has been attended with beneficial results.

State Credit and Increase of Revenue.

The indications of a yearly increase of revenue gives future promise of success and credit to our Finances, provided, proper, prudent and economical legislation shall hereafter diminish the heavy draughts upon the Treasury which has to this period characterised our legislation, thereby enabling the State to practice a rule equally as necessary in public as in private policy of meeting expenditures with a certain income.

The financial embarrassments and debts which have been so burthensome and humiliating to other States, carrying them in some instances to the verge of repudiation, have generally been the result of using their credit for obtaining the means to carry on systems, or perfect schemes of internal improvements, and the agents who were instrumental in their creation, claimed the credit of having contemplated the construction of some great work having permanency, and from which they anticipated such income and profits, as would not only reimburse the expenditure, but eventually lighten the burthen of taxation. Our debt, however, has accumulated for ordinary expenses and temporary purposes, with few exceptions, such as for an Insane Asylum, State Prison, &c.

As has been shown in the preceding statements, our Civil, War and School Debt amounted, in the aggregate, to $3,193,081 31, on the 30th of June, 1853, and although a large sum to have accrued within the period of four years, still no cause of alarm exists with regard to our ability to meet it, provided it is not increased by further funding—requiring additional interest tax for its security and payment.

Chief causes of our indebtedness.

Notwithstanding the errors which may have occurred, as a State we are entitled to the just and charitable inferences which must be drawn from an examination of the various causes which, in the main, have created our indebtedness.

We had no territorial existence, but organized a State government with the advent and appearance of a hundred thousand men, bringing with them little else than that contained about their persons, and coming together like a heterogeneous mass, from almost every nation or community, with no views or prejudices, or feelings in common, resembling a mighty army of wanderers more than a body of emigrants, who usually go to a new country with their families and their property, with the intention of making a permanent location and settlement, thus adding immediately to the general wealth of a state, rather than to possess themselves of its rich resources and return to their former homes.

In the anomalous condition of the country at that time our Constitution was adopted. Immediately after its adoption the first Legislature commenced its session, charged with the duty of giving form and character to the government, and adopting and applying the same to the chaotic elements surrounding them, and for which there had never been a precedent in the history of republican governments, to guide, or control their action so as to provide for the unforeseen contingencies which subsequently impaired the efficacy and value of the revenue laws, or involved a greater expenditure than any one had reason to anticipate.

With an empty treasury, they were forced to provide for the immediate demands of the government, by an issue of bonds bearing three per cent. per month, a rate of interest less than that ruling in private transactions at the time, and although they confidently supposed that their redemption was provided for by the law authorizing their issue, and that by virtue of collections to be made, they would soon be liquidated, still the result has proved that they have remained outstanding with interest fast accumulating, and not until recently has the bulk of the whole issue been taken up by cash payments from the treasury, the State having been forced to defer cash payments to other objects, until bonds bearing such a ruinous rate of interest were cancelled. Unfortunately too, our constitution was not one which would secure an economical government, but provided for a large number of officers, and annual, instead of bi-ennial sessions of the Legislature. The prices of labor, and of every article, was, at the time, at a high standard; consequently, prices corresponding were required for every object within the range of State necessity, so that a large outlay immediately became necessary for compensation to all persons in the service of the State for contingents, &c. Without public buildings for its General Assembly, its Officers or its Courts, large appropriations were requisite for rents.

Destitute of prisons for the security of the large number of criminals that had infested the community, they were not only pursued, brought into custody, kept and prosecuted at great expense to the State, but guarded, secured and supported, while undergoing punishment for their crimes.

This expense has continued to the present time, and large claims are still pending for expenses incurred by ministerial and other officers, who, at an early day, in several instances, embarrassed themselves, having been compelled to use their own resources to bear their expenses, and those of their attendants while engaged in enforcing the laws, which expenditure they contend has not been reimbursed.

Nor was security and protection to our citizens, who had arrived within our borders, the only object of expenditure; for in the years 1850 and 1851, the intelligence was early conveyed to the State that a large number of our countryman were on their way hither from the Atlantic States, wearied—exhausted—or borne down and in a helpless condition from the fatigues of the journey and sickness when the calls for relief could not but be responded to, not only by individual philanthropy and aid, but the State itself made liberal appropriations, both years, for these objects, by sending out to meet the needy and destitute relief parties, or repaying private individuals for their advances and aid.

Arrived within our State, thousands immediately became a charge upon our charities. From exposure and depressing journeys, either by land or in crowded ships, through climates for which they were unsuited and unprepared, with the anxiety attending the enterprise in which they had embarked, and other depressing causes, many became the victims of obstinate and protracted disease. The larger proportion being destitute of friends or relatives to aid them, and without the means to secure for themselves proper care and treatment, became a public charge. For these objects the State exercised a laudable humanity, by either making those ample provisions for their relief demanded in the creation and support of hospitals, or by appropriations to be distributed among the different counties, and also to repay the expenditures incurred by individuals who had used their own funds for that purpose.

In this connection it may not be improper to remark, that the city of Sacramento has presented to past Legislatures a claim for expenditures of this character, estimated by Mayor Hutchinson in his message, dated 10th January, 1858, to amount to $150,000, exclusive of interest, for expenses actually incurred, and which, it is urged, should be borne by the State. A claim so equitable in its character, that if free from debt, and with the means of payment, it would in all probability be recognised and assumed by the State.

Our Indian wars have also involved the State in what now constitutes one-third of her outstanding indebtedness, the necessity of which, with other considerations pertaining thereto, will be treated under the head of "Indian War Claims," in a subsequent part of this report.

Destitute of money at the outset, by which to support the government, and thereby compelled to adopt a credit system, our bonds and warrants, from the high rate of interest and other causes, depreciated in value, and not until the past year or eighteen months, have they commanded in the market over fifty cents on the dollar as the average price. As a consequent a large loss has been sustained in payment for extraordinary services, for rents, contingents, &c.

The foregoing constituting some of the chief causes of our indebtedness having involved large annual expenditures, when justly considered it will be seen were almost unavoidable. They grew out of our peculiar condition at the time, a condition equally as fruitful for emergencies requiring an outlay of money or use of our credit, as unpropitious for realizing the necessary income from taxation.

Our Revenue laws, with the exception of the last, (see Article "Revenue Laws,") have fallen far short of attaining the objects sought in their enactment, and disappointed their framers. That passed by the first Legislature was wholly repealed by the second, and so on, each subsequent Legislature repealing the enactments of a former one, creating much confusion and embarrassment with the officers engaged in acting under them, and the public who were affected thereby. These periodical changes in our revenue system were believed necessary, for notwithstanding that each of the bodies creating them exercised their wisdom and best judgment in attempting to improve upon a former one, our population and property were so changeable and unstable in their character, and some of our objects for revenue so new and novel, that endeavors to realize therefrom were in a great measure, futile.

During the three first years of our existence as a State, the mining portions of the country paid comparatively little into the Treasury. Although assessments were made in these localities, the collecting officers were in many instances unable, a few months after, to find the parties or property assessed, so migratory and changing was the population.

Laws thought at the time of their passage to be uniform in their application, were not unfrequently so changing and inconstant were all the subjects to which they were applied, found either inoperative or were resisted when the officers charged with collections attempted to enforce them. Thus, in many instances the total amount realized was insufficient to pay the cost of their enforcement, and the expenses of litigation incident thereto.

The devastating conflagrations that so frequently visited our cities and towns, at an early period in our history, contributed much towards abridging our revenue.

Being compelled to draw from other states or foreign countries our staples, constituting the necessities of life, a constant afflux of gold was required in payment. It being our only product, and no means having been devised to reach it by taxation, no tenure existing in the soil from which it was obtained, it was shipped from the country without contributing its share for the support of Government. Thus it would seem to be a matter of no surprise that our revenue, during former years, was inadequate to defray even ordinary or temporary expenses, nor that the credit of the state was of necessity called in requisition to its fullest extent for this purpose.

The whole amount collected and paid into the Treasury since the organization of the Government, up to the 30th of June last, was $1,154,963 64.

The Comptroller has deemed it proper for a "better understanding of the fiscal affairs of the State," thus to enumerate and present in the foregoing summary, some of the causes of our present debt, resulting, as it has, from heavy draughts upon our credit and limited income, believing it equally required to secure just consideration, both at home and abroad, and for the purpose also of serving as a guide in future for attempts at retrenchment, or a change in the system from which our indebtedness has accumulated.

Our present necessities and indications of larger revenue contrast favorably with those heretofore existing.

It can hardly be expected that in our more advanced condition as a State, that unusual and uncommon expenditures will be required. The incoming immigration hereafter, probably will not need relief.

The expense of Hospitals will be abridged, permanent buildings having been provided for the Insane Asylum, and all other Hospitals, save that in the city of San Francisco, abolished. A Prison has been constructed for the security of criminals.

Land titles are in a fair way of settlement, so that permanent and valuable improvements will be made on our lands. Agriculture has become a leading object and business in our State, already supplying many of our wants, and enabling us to retain the money heretofore required for this supply, thus giving value to our lands and favoring an accumulation of property for taxation. Those now arriving, come with the intention of becoming permanent citizens, bringing more generally their families and their means to be added to our general wealth. Our active and extending commerce is attracting capital to our borders. From these as well as other causes, our assessments must be immeasurably increased, and a better revenue law will probably reach all and secure the income to be derived therefrom.

Our three per cent. per month bonds are substantially redeemed, and by the first of January, $96,000 of our seven per cent. civil bonds due in 1855, will be redeemed; while the sales of property in the City of San Francisco by the State, pledged to their redemption, is already quite sufficient to cancel the rest due that year, those due in 1861—as well as a part due in 1870.

Our floating indebtedness absorbed by funding and redemption, cash payments, it is hoped, will commence. Our credit abroad has improved so that investments are made in our securities. Under these circumstances it may be assumed that the credit of the State has now reached a point as extended as demanded by her wants or necessities, and that hereafter, having now ample means of sustenance from judicious revenue laws properly enforced, appropriations should be made to come within her income derived from taxation alone, leaving the proceeds of the sales of the property of the State, to apply to the redemption of our funded debt, for the liquidation of which they have been pledged.

At the meeting of the ensuing Legislature, our financial condition will be such (having but a small amount of floating indebtedness) as will enable that body to direct its measures for greater economy in public expenses, and for securing income to meet those which may be deemed indispensable. An opportunity so propitious, it is hoped, will not be passed by without securing cash payments for all the objects of expenditure. Every one is too familiar with the scrip system, either to advocate or tolerate it longer. Unavoidable as the practice of issuing scrip has been heretofore, the foregoing, it is believed, is sufficient to show, that a necessity of this sort no longer exists.

REVENUE LAWS.

The revenue law passed the last session has, in the main, operated well, with the exception of that portion pertaining to Licenses.

Under its provision, the tax on real and personal property has been much more promptly and uniformly collected than under any previous act of the kind. Although, a few amendments might be made which would lead to improvement in some of its details; still as it has been found, as far as relates to assessments and collections on property, so much better than any previously enacted, it seems desirable that it should remain without essential change.

CONSIGNED GOODS.

That portion, however, relating to a tax on sales of consigned goods, should be amended with a view to securing greater efficacy. More compulsory provisions are needed to enforce it in case of resistance on the part of persons on whom the tax is levied. As it is, it lacks stringency and force in its application to those, who, by subterfuge or open resistance refuse to submit to its requirements. With a change of this character, it is thought that the State could not fail to receive from a class of persons shipping goods to this market, the share of revenue justly due.

They have, heretofore, been able to compete with, and undersell our own merchants at their own doors, the latter having been compelled to pay taxes, rents and charges, from which the shipper residing abroad has enjoyed almost entire immunity.

As the law passed at the last session levying a per centage on sales of consigned goods was resisted, Messrs. Thomas, Hoge & Wilson, and Magraw & Tilford, Attorneys, were selected on the part of the State to conduct the suits instituted to enforce its payment, and it is believed, that a tax so just, notwithstanding the defects in the law, will be secured by judicial decisions in favor of, at least, its constitutionality, if not its policy.

Should the decision of our courts be in its favor, it would be a matter of congratulation, opposed as it has been by public meetings denouncing its provisions, and other voluntary expressions, as well as written arguments and opinions against it, and resisted by a resort to the usual subterfuge, that of protracted and vexatious litigation, sustained and supported by united capital and able influences. These unworthy endeavors to wring from the State its just proportion of revenue, due from a class of property equally protected with that belonging to, held or sold in the market by our own citizens, should the decisions be now in favor of the State, will hardly be repeated.

The mere fact that that every person, after a revenue law has been passed by a body who are the rightful judges of its "uniformity," cannot think it perfectly uniform, or that some may hold abstract views against the principle of licensing by our laws, it is hoped, will not be sufficient to allow the treasury to be cheated out of this tax, and to permit a real want of uniformity in taxation to exist, as would be the case, provided the property, goods, &c. of our own citizens (who are fully identified with the State,) can be reached by every species of taxation levied by State, County or City, and from which they ask no immunity, and the goods of citizens abroad, when sold here, should be exempt therefrom.

Consignors have not only thrown large amounts of goods into our markets, to be sold from the vessels on which they were shipped, or from "hulks" in our bays, without contributing their share for the support of the government, but have, in some instances, procured at home the printed bills, advertising them for sale, to be used here after their arrival.

The policy of licensing the ordinary resident merchant or trader, engaged in selling goods or merchandize may be questioned, and it is contended with much force and propriety that, as the State levies a tax of 60 cents on the valuation of their goods and property, it should not impose an additional burden in the form of a license tax, leaving them as free as the farmer or mechanic to pursue their occupations without further charges. But it cannot be contended with justice, that the agent or consignee of foreign or non-resident owners should escape the same measure of taxation which is imposed by law upon our own merchant or trader.

The assessor can reach all that is owned or possessed by the resident owner; while the goods and merchandize of the non-resident owner can only be reached when they are sold, and come in competition in the market with the goods held and owned here, mingling with them and becoming subject to the operation and protection of the same laws which govern all.

In order that taxation should be uniform, and that it should be equally borne, it is but just and proper that 60 cents on the $100 of sales of consigned goods, should be levied, thereby subjecting consignees or agents of non-resident owners to the same tax that is borne by our own traders or merchants, otherwise the one class would be benefitted at the expense of the other, and the State fail to protect her own citizens, discriminating in favor of foreign capital and enterprise.

BANKERS' LICENSES.

But an insignificant sum has as yet been received from licenses to bankers, brokers, and those engaged in dealing in money and printed, or written, evidences of indebtedness. Although the law designed to reach by taxation this class was drawn with much care, and at the time thought fully adequate to attain the end desired, still experience has shown that a better and more uniform system could be devised which would obviate some of the principal objections which have rendered the enforcement of the present one, if not impossible, subject to delays and embarrassment, amounting to a failure to realize anything therefrom.

The Comptroller believes that a more simple, uniform, and less objectionable system can be devised. On this point he has endeavored to avail himself of all the benefits derived from experience in endeavors to collect under the present system, or to enforce by law its provisions, and is of the opinion that a license law reaching this class, could be drawn, and should early be passed by the coming Legislature—a law which could not be successfully resisted, but would realise to the Treasury at least $75,000 or $100,000 a year, from the date of its enactment.

We have not been able to tax the great product of the country, either directly or indirectly, by taxing the lands, there being as yet no tenure or right existing in them, but left open to all, and it would seem but just that at least a moiety should be received into the Treasury from the millions of gold monthly produced and sent abroad. This object can in some degree be reached, by requiring those who deal and traffic in the article, or its fair equivalent, to procure a license for so doing, as the gold itself would then of course be indirectly subject to the per centage, levied in the form of a license to the persons engaged in these branches of business.

The suggestions and facts alluded to will be submitted by the Comptroller to an appropriate committee of the Legislature, if thought to merit an examination.

LEGISLATIVE EXPENDITURES.

The total amount of the expenditures paid at the last session, for officers, members, clerks and contingents, reached in the aggregate the sum of $389,619 48.

The article on Legislative retrenchment, in the last annual report of the Comptroller, is as applicable now as then, and as urgently called for.

The subjoined table will exhibit the annual expenses of this body since the organization of the Government :

HOSPITALS.

The Insane Asylum demands the attention of the Legislature at an early day. The income from the passenger tax set apart and designed for the support of that institution, has been found almost wholly inadequate, such has been the falling off in the numbers of persons arriving by ocean emigration, from foreign countries, paying the tax. No longer able to sustain themselves from the means provided, and the State officers unable to advance from any fund for their relief, a united application was made by the officers of that institution and the Treasurer and Comptroller of State, to the Commissioners of the Funded Debt of the city of San Francisco, who with a commendable liberality, advanced the sum required to meet the immediate and pressing wants of the Hospital. This amount was advanced by them, at the low rate of 10 per cent. interest per annum, payable on payment of the demand by the Legislature. It is suggested that a Hospital tax, for the support of the insane, be levied and collected with the ordinary revenue of the State. No one in the State would be found, it is believed, to object to a tax of 5 cents on the $100 of assessed property (real and personal) for the purpose of ameliorating the deplorable condition of a class of persons who have such claims on our charity. A State Prison tax of 4 cents on the $100, of property is now levied and collected, and the policy of a tax, payable in cash, for the support of the Insane, is undoubtedly preferable to the practice of paying warrants to be sold at depreciated rates, for their security and support. Most of the time there are over one hundred persons in that institution, and every prompting of humanity and sympathy, require that those more fortunate should provide for their wants, by placing ample means in the hands of those who have them in charge, for the purpose of bettering their condition, if possible.

The Insane Asylum building at Stockton has been completed by the enterprising contractor, J. M. Warner, Esq., during the past year. It is hoped that donations will hereafter aid much in the support of its unfortunate inmates.

The State Marine Hospital at San Francisco has been filled with the sick during the past summer, and the whole of the passenger tax would not be sufficient for its support.

STATE PRISON.

Under the present system of management, this Institution has proved adequate to the wants of the State. The appropriation made last year for its erection, has resulted by a creditable and judicious expenditure thereof, in providing permanent security for criminals. Should farther appropriations be required for the increasing number of its inmates, it is believed that a small per cent tax for this purpose could be as willingly borne as heretofore.

TRANSPORTATION OF PRISONERS.

This item of expenditure is not only constantly increasing, but the aggregate during the fiscal year, formed a heavy item in our State expenses. It is believed that it should be borne by the several counties of the State, as is the practice in most of the other States.

The counties are generally rapidly reaching a healthy financial condition. Many are already free from debt, and it is suggested that they could not only pay this compensation better than the State, but could better judge of the amount necessary and proper to be paid as a fair compensation in each case, to the Sheriff or officer performing that duty.

The Sheriff now receives one dollar each mile for the transportation of each prisoner. In some cases, with a single prisoner, it may not be too high a compensation; but when several are taken, a less sum would be fully adequate, and of this the counties could be the best informed as to the amount deemed necessary.

STATE PRINTING.

The expenditure for Printing the last year was much larger than estimated by the Comptroller in his last annual report. This, in a great degree, is attributable to the fact, that the session of the last Legislature continued much longer than was expected—and that the amount of printing ordered by that body was also larger than anticipated.

Could two-thirds of the amount of printing heretofore done, be avoided hereafter, and cash payments be made to parties performing that service, at fair remunerative prices, the whole limited by a special appropriation, a remedy would at once be found to the present system, which is now not only burthensome to the State but fails to pay those who do the work, when compelled to dispose of their warrants received therefor at depreciated rates.

It should be borne in mind that the bulk of the expenditure for printing is usually incurred during the session of the Legislature, and any substantial reduction in the same hereafter, must follow a reduction in the amount of printing ordered by that body, each branch of which has the right by law to incur expense for this object.

The saving and benefits which it had been supposed would result from the contract system, have not been realised, and it is believed by the Comptroller that a State Printer should be appointed, with a view of insuring that responsibility necessary, and leaving a better opportunity of defining his duties and changing compensation when advisable, than is the case under the present system.

An appropriate committee of the Legislature could readily ascertain the cost of the various kinds of printing required by law, and the rates of compensation for each, could be fixed and paid in cash instead of warrants on the treasury, to be sold in the market as has been the case heretofore, during the period when most of the printing is required, at from fifty to sixty cents on the dollar—a price which has often been inadequate to pay in cash the parties performing the service, when compelled to sell at such depreciated rates.

The Comptroller suggests that the paper used for printing be purchased or contracted for at the same time, and in the same manner as is now practiced by the State, in the purchase of stationery, &c., for the Legislature.

A large saving could also be made by a change in prices for appendixing and indexing the Laws and Journals.

CLAIMS OF THE STATE ON THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT.

The claim of the State upon the General Government, for the "Civil Fund," so long pending before Congress, it is hoped, will speedily be obtained, and the proceeds thereof received into our Treasury. Nearly two millions of dollars was levied and collected in California, by the officers of the General Government, while we were under military rule, and it would seem that we were certainly entitled to a portion of the same, or at least, a sufficient sum to defray the expenses of our State Government from its organization, on Dec. 15th, 1849, until the date of its admission, Sept. 9th, 1850. This expense amounted to $436,804 36, and was paid for the support of our State Government during that period. It was liquidated mainly by an issue of bonds, bearing three per cent. per month, interest, the redemption of which, with interest, has cost the State the sum of $462,682 25, leaving outstanding, in principal and interest, $9,576,25. This drain upon the Treasury for current expenses, while we were constructively a Territory, and like other Territories of the United States, entitled to aid and sustenance from the parent Government, should be reimbursed. This claim, then, founded as it is, in "justice and equity," ought to be pressed until recognized, and an appropriation, adequate to the demand is made by the General Government.

INDIAN WAR CLAIMS.

The total amount of our "War Debt" on the 30th of June, 1853, with interest to the 1st of January 1854, was $401,309 11. Nearly all the claims which constituted the basis of our war debt, have been examined and allowances made thereon, by the Board of Examiners of Military Claims. These Claims were the result of the various expeditions called out by the State to defend our frontier, and protect the incoming immigration in the years 1850, 1851 and 1852.

Pressing demands were made by the citizens of the State for relief and protection. These demands were not responded to by the agents of the General Government, then in Military Command in the State, as fully as the emergency required, from the fact that their forces were inadequate, and their supplies and munitions insufficient. The State was therefore impelled to call out, arm, equip and provision forces at great expense, or suffer her unprotected citizens, and the emigration on their way hither, to fall a sacrifice to the ruthless savage.

It was believed that this expense would be assumed and paid by the General Government, established as this practice had formerly been, by numerous precedents in its history. Congressional legislation in other cases of like character, has recognized and paid debts contracted in the prosecution of Indian Wars, by the States themselves, when obliged to undertake the duties of the nation in the suppression of these hostilities. The emergency which made it necessary for the State to interpose her authority, was such as rendered any delay hazardous. The distance of the authority of the General Government from the scene of operations, was so great also, as rendered any application to the Home Government for assistance, impracticable, so imminent was the danger, and so immediate were the requirements of our people, exposed to the depredations of the several tribes of Indians, whose hostilities required a prompt and sudden check, or, emboldened by success at the outset, no limit could be made to the sacrifice of life and property which would follow. The responsibilities thus incurred by the State, must be met by the General Government, as the State is unable, at this time, to do more than she has done by pledging her faith and credit to those who have performed services and furnished means for these objects.

This State has over eight hundred miles of frontier. The various Indian tribes that inhabit our border for that distance, early commenced depredations upon our people. Inhabiting a mountainous country, and enabled to retreat to their fastnesses after acts of violence or theft, it was impossible to pursue them with success at the time, with a small force, when single instances occurred of the kind. It therefore became necessary to adopt means ample and to raise a force sufficient to make a decided impression, and to convince them by a summary process, of our strength, and our determination that they should expiate their crimes.

Had the State delayed action until the General Government could have been informed with regard to the necessity which existed at the time, the result would have been disastrous to the defenceless emigration and frontier settlements. Leaving wholly out of consideration the effect that delay would have produced upon the State, the cost to the General Government in the end would have been greater than that incurred by the State and which constitutes the claim upon which it is based.

The Indians, emboldened and rendered formidable by uninterrupted success, would have by the time the Government could have given protection, been far less readily brought into subjection, and a much larger force and greater expenditure would have been required to subdue them. It is also believed (and even admitted by Government officers then in the State,) that army soldiers could not have been retained in the service at that time, in numbers sufficient for the emergency.

The compensation paid to soldiers by the United States, was much less for a month's service, than the price of a single days labor in the mines. Desertions therefore, would probably have left the officers without adequate force. This was foreseen, and State forces composed of effective men, it was believed indispensably necessary to accomplish the ends demanded.

The cost of supplies, transportation, &c., were procured by the State at as reasonable rates as they could have been by the General Government.

A rigid and careful scrutiny has been exercised by the Board of Examiners, (consisting of the Comptroller, Treasurer and Secretary of State,) in the auditing of War Claims, and in the allowances made therefor. Full vouchers, satisfactory proofs, and evidence of the authenticity of each was required, and in the settlements, the Board, (as required by law,) endeavored to be guided by the "Rules and Regulations of the United States Army," prescribing the mode and manner of such settlements.

Nearly all of the appropriations made for the purpose of liquidating these claims by an issue of Bonds have been exhausted, and it is also ascertained that there are few claims outstanding. The State as yet has made no provision for paying the accruing interest on this class of bonds.

It is hoped that, as the General Government was bound to protect us and was unable to do so, that the debt incurred by the State for that purpose, in the absence of such protection, will soon be assumed and paid by the United States.

The laws of our State provide that the income arising from our School Fund shall be distributed pro rata to the children of the State, in organised school districts.

Already there has been received for the sale of school lands, $463,360. This, and all amounts arising from the sale of the 500,000 acres of land donated to new States, by Act of Congress in 1841, (and by our Constitution devoted to school purposes,) is subject to an annual interest at the rate of seven per cent., collected in the ordinary manner, and with the interest tax of the State for the purpose of paying the interest on all our seven per cent. Civil Bonds. The whole amount of these lands will probably be sold, at no very distant day, giving to the School Fund a million dollars from this source, and seventy thousand dollars interest each year, to be distributed in the same manner. Add to this the proceeds of the sales of the 16th and 32d sections of all public lands within the State received by virtue of the legislation of Congress, together with escheated estates set apart by our State for the same purpose, and it will be seen that there has been already made full and permanent provisions for the education of the children of our State, provisions alike creditable and liberal.

The following statement exhibits the sales of school lands to date:

STATE LIBRARY.

Although a very considerable revenue has already been provided for the purpose of procuring a State Library, it is believed that a tax should be laid on each suit appealed to the Supreme Court, to be applied to this purpose and for the purpose of obtaining a Library for that Court, in conjunction with the State Library, giving the discretion of the purchase of books to the Supreme Judges. A moderate tax would soon secure a library, alike useful and necessary.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The policy of adopting hereafter the practice of appropriating moneys separately and distinctly for each item of State expenditure, is again earnestly recommended, and the practice of setting apart a gross amount, to be drawn upon when the law requires, or when in the discretion of an officer it may be thought necessary, discontinued.

This change is urgently demanded, for many important reasons. Were appropriations special and limited for every object of outlay, the auditing officer would be able to better discharge his duty, and never would be permitted to exceed the amount of expenditure intended, while under the present system where certificates of other officers are not unfrequently his only guide, or his own discretion can only be exercised, he is often charged on the one hand with injustice to claimants in not recognizing their claims, and on the other, if paid, with exercising that discretion improperly.

Should the plan suggested be adopted, the amount of expenditure required could be better known, and the amount requisite to support Government, could also be approximated and provided with greater certainty. At the close of each session, no doubts would exist as to the amount of outlay authorized for the succeeding year. The immediate saving which would be the result, is readily perceived, as no one would expect more than what had been provided, and no officer would have any discretion to exercise, or certificates to guide him in making farther payments. I beg leave also to repeat in this connection, the recommendation heretofore made with regard to the repeal of all laws authorizing the receipt of any moneys, or redemptions, or any drafts from the Treasury, without the "printed or written order or warrant" of the Comptroller, obtained after a settlement had been made, and the fact had become a matter of record, where by law all "accounts are to be kept. The laws organizing the Comptroller's and Treasurer's Office. make them distinct; and contemplate that settlement should be made by the Comptroller with any and every party with whom the State may have dealings, as well as with the Treasurer.

The Comptroller also is required to report annually and specifically, the fiscal affairs of the State to the Governor, to be submitted to the Legislature. This he cannot do if moneys are authorized to be paid "To the Treasurer," or "By the Treasurer," instead of "Into the Treasury," or "From the Treasury," as the law contemplated originally.

Inadvertently many acts appropriating monies, and providing for the manner of redemption or reception of monies, have substituted the first expressions for the latter, causing no little embarrassment on final settlement, and rendering it impossible for the accounting and collecting officer of the State, to keep such an account with the disbursing officer, and others making payment into the Treasury, or "with whom the State may have dealings," as it is by law his duty.

Confusion must be the result of these inroads upon the duties of those officers, if such irregularities in the modes of settlement and payment by the State, are persisted in much longer. The business of both of these Departments has, and will rapidly increase, and in order to an intelligent and proper understanding and condition of them, at all times hereafter, they should remain as distinct as they were made by law when organized.

CONCLUSION.

The Comptroller deems it his duty to call to the attention of yourself and the Legislature, the fact of the insecurity, and want of protection which now exists, for important papers, and the various kinds of blanks, or evidences of indebtedness, either wholly or partially finished which of necessity must remain for a time in the hands of the officers of the several departments, either awaiting delivery or final completion. As yet, the means of security afforded, have been wholly inadequate. The result has been, that in two instances, partially prepared warrants have been purloined from his office. This could not have been avoided by all the caution and prudence he was capable of exercising, so exposed were necessarily all his papers, and so insufficient were the means of security and protection.

If proper safes or vaults had been provided, and the business apartments had been so arranged as to separate the clerks while engaged in their vocations, from those who not unfrequently intrude upon them at times when pressed with business; such misfortunes could have been avoided. It is also suggested that stated periods should be named in the law providing for payment of officers, members, clerks, and attachés of the Legislature, and that the accounts and bills for each person should be certified by the proper officers of the body to which they are connected, and sent to the Comptroller, at least two days before time of payment. This precaution is demanded for the reason that it has not unfrequently happened, that a large number of bills requiring further authentication were presented in a single day, and the claimants, impatient and importunate, for payment at once, waiting settlement and delivery, to the great annoyance of the officers and clerks—subjecting them to hasty action and mistakes, which if more time were allowed, they would be enabled to avoid. In canceling the warrants which have been drawn and redeemed at the Treasury, it has recently been ascertained that only three warrants issued during the past two years, were erroneously issued and redeemed. One warrant drawn in favor of C. C. Hornsby, Sergeant-at-Arms of the Legislature of 1852, for $20 ; one in favor of H. A. DeCoursey for $80, Clerk in the Legislature of 1852 ; and one in favor of Wm. Patterson for $812 50, also issued in 1852. The Comptroller recollects the facts connected with the two first-named warrants which led to the error, occurring at the time, when from the want of sufficient clerical force in his office, and from a great press of business at the close of the Legislature, he was unable to keep up his books so as to balance all accounts. On one occasion, (the last day of the session of that Legislature,) over nine hundred warrants were issued in a single day.

The warrant drawn payable to Wm. Patterson appears to have been one that was purloined when partially finished, and put into circulation. The day on which it appears to have been in process of formation in the office, was occupied in issuing warrants of the same character, and the loss of it escaped the vigilance of the Clerk. It was not registered by the Treasurer, and was inadvertently redeemed at that office.

The Comptroller and Treasurer regret even that these errors have occurred, although, taking into consideration the imperfect security afforded them, the exposed condition of the offices, and the large amount of business passing through their hands, they congratulate themselves in view of the fact that no errors of a great magnitude have occurred. Many millions have passed through their hands, in the collections and disbursements required by law to be made. Also, in the redemptions which have been made during two years past in the issuing of the different classes of Bonds, School Warrants, &c., and those are the only errors found in the settlement of these accounts by themselves, and the Committee of the last Legislature, appointed to examine said accounts, and vouchers of these officers. Should however, the ensuing Legislature require it, these officers will jointly reimburse the amount lost by the errors pointed out.

With respect, I have the honor to be,

Your ob't servant,

WINSLOW S. PIECE,

Comptroller of State.

OPINION
OF THE
ATTORNEY GENERAL.

To the Hon. the Senate and Assembly of the State of California :

In accordance with your concurrent resolution of the 19th instant, directing "the Attorney General to prepare and present to the Legislature now in session, an opinion on the legality of the location of School Land Warrants as now practiced in this State," I beg leave to submit the following :—

1st. I do not think School Land Warrants can be legally located on public lands before they are surveyed, because the Act of Congress of September 4th, 1841, donating to each of the new States, five hundred thousand acres of land, directs that the same "may be located after it shall have been surveyed according to existing laws."

2d. After survey, there can be no doubt that School Land Warrants can be legally located on public lands, for the Act of Congress above referred to, provides that the land granted to the State may be selected in such manner as the State Legislature "shall direct;" and our Legislature has, by the Act of May 3, 1852, "directed" such lands to be located by the holders of School Land Warrants, whom, for this purpose, it has made the agents of the State.

3d. I consider that a location under our Act of May 3d upon unsurveyed land, can confer no right of possession or property in such land as against a subsequent purchaser or settler under the General Government, unless it be followed up by an actual possession of the land so located, but such a naked location without possession, will be valid as against a subsequent location under the same Act, or any other State law.

4th. A School Land Warrant for one hundred and sixty acres only, cannot be located alone, but two or more warrants, each for one hundred and sixty acres, may be located at the same time, and if the whole number of acres located under the two, are in a compact body, and conform to the "sectional divisions" and "subdivisions" the location will be valid.

GOVERNOR'S SPECIAL MESSAGE

AND

REPORT OF THE

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT. }
Benicia, Jan. 31st, 1854. }

To the Senate and Assembly of California :

I have the honor herewith to transmit a copy of an important report, received on the 24th inst., from the Superintendent of Public Instruction ; the suggestions therein contained are worthy of immediate and careful consideration.

In this connection, I deem it a duty again to urge upon you the great importance of legislative action, in order to secure to the State all the lands donated by Congress for educational purposes.

The Act of 1852, which authorized School Land Warrants to be issued, was passed to secure the proceeds of the sales of the five hundred thousand acres for the great object designed by the framers of the Constitution—the education of the children of the State.

These lands, donated by Act of Congress, approved Sept. 4th, 1841, were originally granted for purposes of internal improvement, but were diverted by our Constitution to the support of Common Schools. As yet, but a small portion has been surveyed : and it is held by agents of the General Government, that, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved March 3d, 1853, School Land Warrants, issued by the State, cannot be located on unsurveyed lands. Under this construction, the State will be delayed in her selections, perhaps, for many years, and, indeed, may eventually lose the greater part of the fund.

Is the State to be deprived of this fund, at a time when a general and comprehensive system of Public Instruction is so much needed ? Is the education of the children of the State, now numbering tens of thousands, to be subject to the delays and uncertainties incident to the action of the Federal Government ?

These are questions of vital importance to the people of California, intimately connected, as they are, with their present interests and future welfare. I hope, therefore, that the Legislature will, at an early day, memorialize Congress to confirm, by special act, the past legislation of the State, in relation to the selection of the five hundred thousand acres of school lands, and to remove the restrictions which, at present, retard her progress, and are inimical to her interests and the future welfare of her people.

Such a policy can work no injury or hardship to the actual settler, for the reason, that the lands selected can be disposed of by the State, under your direction, on the same terms as now exacted by the General Government, and with less actual expense to the purchaser, than under the existing laws of the United States. If the price be fixed at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, the school land unsold, including the 16th and 36th sections will yield six million eight hundred and forty-six thousand nine hundred and fifty-five dollars, which at seven per cent. will afford an annual interest of four hundred and seventy-nine thousand two hundred and eighty six dollars and eighty-five cents; a sum quite sufficient to sustain a system of popular education superior to that of any of the older States of the Confederacy.

The plan proposed by the Superintendent would give to persons of small means, an opportunity to secure homes at a trifling amount of annual interest, until prepared, at some future day, to pay the principal.

This plan, it is believed, would favor the interests of the actual settler, and is consistent with the requirements of the Constitution; which direct that the interest, only, shall be annually applied for the benefit of Common Schools: leaving the principal intact, and a perpetual fund for their support.

Should, however, the present Legislature fail, or neglect to adopt proper measures, in reference to these lands, there is great reason to fear that the State will be deprived of the greater part of them, and the cause of education within the State, be seriously retarded. The proceeds of these lands, unless immediate action be taken to secure their selection, instead of constituting a fund for the education of the children of the State, as designed by the Constitution, will accumulate in the treasury of the nation, now full to overflowing, and be forever lost to the rising generation.

To secure the selection of these lands and preserve the educational fund, is the object of this communication, and it is hoped that it will incite you to give the subject immediate and favorable consideration.

JOHN BIGLER.

REPORT OF THE
SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR:—

Under article 4, section 6 of the Act in relation to Public Schools, it is made my duty to suggest to the Legislature, "Ways and Means for raising funds for the support of Common Schools," and for the promotion of the general interest of education throughout the State," I desire to do this through your Excellency the chief executive officer.

The capital of the school fund arising solely as yet from the sales of school land warrants is $468,360.

The interest arising from the bonds of the State thus set apart, is the only revenue, as yet provided for sustaining the schools of the present year, viz: $32,435 20, with a reasonable prospect of support from the State, the number of pupils in the schools of this year can be at least trebled from that of the report of my predecessor for the last school year—will the Legislature withhold that support? or, will the people, under the existing excitement, expect it?

The sales of school land warrants has almost entirely ceased. It is unnecessary here to advert to the causes—the fact suffices our purpose.

There remain by consequence 268,320 acres of the 500,000 acres of school lands unsold and not yet located. This with the 16th and 36th sections, and the lands donated by Congress for a seminary of learning, "46,080 acres comprise the entire school property in lands."

Energetic action toward an early location of the 268,320 acres, and of such of the 16th and 32d sections, as by pre-emptor settlement have become liable to "float" location; will be apparent to every one desirous of husbanding all proper resources in aid of our schools.

It is evidently the desire of Congress and of the whole people of our common country to sustain, by all proper aid, the energies of the settler, and the means of educating the rising generation—soon to succeed them in the halls of Congress, and in the varied positions peculiar to the republic.

There can be no clashing of these great movements; they step in harmonious concert toward the goal of their great destiny.

So careful was the 26th Congress of the integrity of common school and seminary lands; that they provided that settlements made on the 16th sections four months prior to survey, (then necessary to pre-emption) should have the privilege to enter any other quarter section within the district "in lieu thereof"—and likewise that any settler upon "seminary lands, having settled before selection by the State," should have the privilege to enter a quarter section "within the land district in lieu thereof." Statutes at large, vol. 5, page 382.

By subsequent action of Congress, the settler on the 16th and 36th sections, is permitted to enter at the minimum rates; to exercise in other words, the same pre-emption right as though he had been located elsewhere—and this is evidently the exercise of an equitable right.

If we were to say that the settler was compelled to pre-empt—we should utter a silly thought; no settler is compelled to pre-empt. It is a privilege that he may, or may not use. He may, or may not pre-empt the 16th and 36th sections. If he does not pre-empt, where do the lands (the 16th and 36th sections set apart for school purposes) belong? certainly no where else than to the school property! if he pre-empts in his own name, he must pay in cash to the General Government. If he makes his entry at the Registers, as the agent of the State, under the 500,000 acre law, he does so now after having paid $2 in State securities for his land, and this realizes to the school fund 14 cents per acre per annum, being 7 per cent. interest of $2 of State indebtedness, and the township, in either case, then locate their two sections elsewhere.

The interest only of the school fund can be used—hence, I suggest that the settlers on the 16th and 36th sections, who choose to decline the exercise of their pre-emption rights with the U. S. government, be permitted, with consent of the township School Commissioners, to file their bonds to the township with lien upon the lands, providing for the payment of $1 25 per acre after ——— years, and paying in advance each year, the interest upon the same at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum to the proper officer for township school purposes.

Thus, if the whole of the school lands in each township of 36 sections be settled upon, they would produce to the township (6 miles square) the annual interest (on best security) of $160 on $1600 of capital.

Each township of six miles square may be expected to maintain a school, and this sum, though small, would be sensibly felt in the rural districts of the State, being applied only to cases where the town School Commissioners deem it preferable to locating elsewhere their two sections. It must be borne always in mind, that the 16th and 36th sections belong peculiarly to purposes of education, within the township, and cannot properly go to the State fund. An Act to regulate the manner of proceeding in this relation becomes imperatively necessary. It may be expected that the people of the township, immediately interested, will better than any body else, husband the small means provided, and they should be sustained by the necessary enactments of law.

Provision should be made in every township now established; and in every township of six miles square as soon as surveyed, not only for the election of School Commissioners, but also for the levying of such rates of taxation as they may deem necessary to support one or more schools, free of charge to all the children within the township. This should be made imperative: and in the event of any township failing to take such action, it should be made the duty of the County Superintendent to recommend, and the Court of Sessions, or the County Supervisors to confirm, subject to their modification, the rate of taxation for school purposes within the township so neglecting the duty.

An Act amendatory to the existing law, comprising the above named, as well as an amendment to section 4 of article 8 of the Act of 1852, providing that the school moneys shall be distributed in proportion to the average attendance, instead of the number resident, I deem of pressing importance to the success of the system. Under existing law, it is made the interest of the schools established within a district, to prevent the establishment of others, to share the funds. Some districts have large sums now lying idle, by reason of this clause in the law, whilst others, with a larger attendance of pupils, are suffering, if not discontinued, for lack of funds.

The inquiry, what shall be done in respect to the remaining 268,320 acres of the 500,000 acres, I should answer in this way. I would suggest that the Act of 1852 for the disposition of these lands be so modified as to reduce the price to $1 25 the acre, payable within ——— years to all actual settlers; payment to be secured to the school fund; and the failure to pay 10 per cent. per annum interest, in advance, to the County Treasurer of the county wherein the land may be situated; and the forwarding of the Treasurers duplicate receipt therefor to the Comptroller of State, to be charged against him; should work a forfeiture, and subject the land to sale for the use of the school fund, to highest bidder. I would further suggest, that parties locating and not occupying, should pay $—— the acre, in cash or State securities, or within ——— years: and that upon the payment of the interest of 10 per cent. one year in advance, or cash or State securities, they receive certificates of ownership, entitling them to register as the agents of the State, and providing therein for a forfeiture of title by non-payment of the subsequent annual interest, in advance, as before suggested.

The seminary lands awaiting only the U. S. surveys to be fully and conclusively located, I recommended to be placed, at once, under the entire title, control, and management of the Board of Regents of University, which I cannot doubt the Legislature will provide for at an early day, in "An Act to establish the California State University."

It may be expected that the regents will be selected by the Legislature from the several judicial districts, of gentlemen of distinguished ability and integrity of character, and that their disposition of this boon from the General Government, will be worthy themselves and the great object of the paternal donation. I know of no impediment to the organization of the State University, upon such basis as to meet the peculiar merits of our State, throwing aside all distinctions of birth, or wealth, or sect, or section, giving opportunity to all to prepare themselves and their children, by the power of knowledge, for those high positions ever earned and won by industry.

This Institution should embrace, beside the collegiate departments, primary, secondary, and grammar departments, to which could be sent, at comparatively small expense, children from districts now so sparsely settled as not to be able to support a school, and also a military department, sustaining the mental labors by healthful and cheering exercises.

I repeat the hope of seeing, within two years, in successful organization, after proper legislative enactments, schools of learning, not only in our cities, towns and villages, but within every "six miles square" of the settled portions of the State, and that they be conducted with that ability that belongs to the energy and intelligence of this people. Not as in some States, fighting at shadows, passing the substance; not quibbling in a school house about that, that don't belong there, but educating the youth of our State; preparing them to succeed you in these halls—to equal and to excel you—to replace the ermined judges—and last, not least, to form the cohort forces of the State, in that great struggle that awaits our common country.

This great State is not the propagandist of any creed—nor the factionist of any section; to elevate the general intelligence of man, and to disseminate and extend republican influences, is her more exalted destiny.

I have the honor to remain your Excellency's obedient servant.

GOVERNOR'S SPECIAL MESSAGE

AND

COMMUNICATION FROM HON. S. A. M'MEANS, STATE TREASURER.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Benicia, Feb. 4, 1854. }

To the Senate and Assembly :

I have the honor herewith to transmit a copy of a communication from the Hon. S. A. McMeans, State Treasurer. The suggestions it contains are cordially approved, and I trust will receive your early and favorable consideration.

JOHN BIGLER.

STATE TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Benicia, February 3, 1854 }

TO HIS EXCELLENCY GOVERNOR JOHN BIGLER :—

SIR :—The time is rapidly approaching when the Legislature should proceed to consider such revenue measures as they may deem necessary to secure the prompt payment of the interest and principal of the Civil Debt of the State.

As the late Treasurer's Annual Report only extends to the conclusion of the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1853, and I am not aware that a supplementary report has been submitted to your Excellency; and as some important changes have taken place in the condition of the State indebtedness since that period, I desire to submit to you, a brief statement of facts which may aid the Legislature, to some extent in determining the alterations necessary to be made in the present revenue laws.

It is deemed necessary to state that the sinking fund now on hand, which has been provided by law, to liquidate the principal and interest on the three per cent. bonds, or bonds issued under the provisions of an act, entitled "An Act creating a Temporary State Loan," passed February 1st, 1850, is ample for that purpose, and therefore any further provision for these will be unnecessary. There is at present a sufficient amount in the Treasury, to meet the interest falling due in July next, on the seven per cent. civil bonds, issued under the provision of the funding act of 1851, and leave a surplus of $39,476 22 for the redemption of the principal.

On the 9th of January, 1854, I proceeded to advertise for the redemption of $32,000 00 of the principal of said bonds, agreeably to the provisions of an act, entitled, "An Act supplementary to an Act to fund the debt of the State," &c., approved May 4th, 1852.

The total amount of Civil Bonds issued under the provisions of the funding act of 1851, according to the records in this office, was,		$458,500 00
Total amount redeemed to date,		98,000 00
Amount now outstanding exclusive of interest,		<hr/> $360,500 00
Of this amount there will fall due on the 1st of March, 1855,		$131,500 00
Deduct from this amount, the sinking fund now on hand, exclusive of interest,		39,476 22
Balance due 1st of March, 1853, exclusive of interest,		<hr/> $92,023 78

To meet this, we may reasonably calculate upon whatever cash may be received hereafter in payment for State property, sold under the provisions of "An Act to provide for the sale of the interest of the State of California in the property within the water line front of the City of San Francisco, &c." approved May 18th, 1853, together with the proceeds of the fifteen cents property tax provided by the present revenue law.

But it should be remembered, that while the last Legislature had but sixty-five millions of taxable property as a source of revenue, to base their calculation upon, the present will have near one hundred millions; therefore, without taking into consideration the cash proceeds of the sales of the State property in San Francisco, but little doubt could be entertained of our ability to pay the entire interest accruing on the seven per cent. bonds of 1851, up to January 1st, 1855, and of promptly meeting so much of the principal on the same as will fall due the 1st March, 1855. Hence, I infer that the assessment of fifteen cents might be reduced with safety, at least one-third; thus lessening the burden of taxation on the people. This opinion is strengthened by the fact, that $327,000 of the bonds issued in 1851, will not fall due until the year 1861.

Presuming that a considerable amount of cash will be received on the sales of the property above mentioned, which will be turned over to the sinking fund of 1851, a reasonable calculation may be made on a speedy liquidation of the funded debt of 1851.

The seven per cent. civil bonds issued under the provision of an Act approved May 1st, 1852, and the supplementary Act, approved May 17th, 1853, constitute the only portion of our civil indebtedness which would appear to require additional provisions for its payment.

The total amount of these bonds issued, as appears by the records of this office, is	$1,419,000 00
Total amount redeemed to date,	24,500 00
Balance outstanding, exclusive of interest, .	$1,394,500 00

To meet the interest which will fall due the 1st of July next, on this amount, we have on hand, $10,758 27. To this, if authorised by law, might be added the unemployed 20,000 now on hand, and set apart for the redemption of the principal of the State Prison bonds, without prejudice to their present holders, and would leave but little to do on the part of the Legislature, to enable me to make the July payment.

The necessary means for the support of Common Schools, in which all must feel a deep interest, will not of course be overlooked by the Legislature.

The interest arising from the sales which have been made of a portion of the five hundred thousand acres of school lands, donated to the State for school purposes, has proved to be inadequate to meet the public demands, now that the free school policy adopted at the last session of the Legislature, is beginning to be fully carried out. The partial experiment already made, has had the effect to reveal the fact, that California now has thousands within her limits, whose tender ages disqualify them for active participation in the affairs of Government, but to whom ere long, must be entrusted, to an important extent, the defence and preservation of her republican institutions ; a reflection, which doubtless inspires every philanthropic and patriotic bosom, with a sincere desire, that they to whom this great trust is to be committed, should be fully prepared to protect it understandingly. With a due regard to the dictates of prudence and wisdom, these great ends can be accomplished, and all reasonable assurance given of the willingness and ability of the State to promptly fulfil all her pecuniary obligations,

I have the honor to be,

Your Ob't Servant,

S. A. McMEANS,

State Treasurer.

APPOINTED 1853, TO

OF THE

STATE OFFICERS.

B. B. REDDING, STATE PRINTER.]

REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

His Excellency JOHN BIGLER :

Esteemed Sir :

Your uniform anxiety in relation to the financial condition of the State, induces me to send you a copy of the report of the Senate Committee on Public Expenditures, acting in connection with the Committee of the Assembly, instructed to examine the accounts and vouchers of the Comptroller and Treasurer of State.

Your obedient servant,

PAUL K. HUBBS.

Benicia, October 31, 1853.

To the Hon. SAMUEL PURDY,

President of the Senate.

Mr. President :

Your Committee on Public Expenditures, directed to examine the accounts of the Comptroller and Treasurer of State, having fulfilled their duties, in connection with the Committee of the Assembly, appointed for that purpose, respectfully report as follows :

The accounts of the Comptroller of State having received but limited examination from the Committee of the preceding year, your Committee have deemed it necessary to commence with the organization of the State, and have given the accounts and vouchers a more thorough examination than would have been called for, had the books of either Department, especially those of the first, second and third fiscal years, been kept with proper system. The duties of your Committee have been, so far as practicable, subdivided, and your Committee have not acted precisely as a Board, inasmuch as such action would have required much longer time without results proportionately material. The examination has been made with great care of these books of accounts for the four fiscal years preceding the first day of July last ; as also of more than thirty thousand vouchers necessarily traced from the original transaction to final settlement.

In view of greater simplicity in the accounts, and of having every account to present upon the Ledger, the actual amount due from or to the party, your Committee recommend to the Comptroller's department, an entire change in the manner of keeping the books. That all suspended accounts, such as amount of assessment charged to the Treasurer of the County upon the return of the duplicate, and others of similar character, be kept in a separate account, and especially, that the accounts of County Treasurers, and other officers, be kept in the name of the responsible officer. Some very able reforms in relation to these matters have recently been made by Mr. Hushon, of the Comptroller's office.

Your Committee do not think it important to notice here many small errors, further than to say, that with a different system, requiring monthly or quarterly "balance sheets," which necessarily test all the postings from the original entry, a recurrence of these errors would not be possible. The aggregate of the errors detected by your Committee, and the amount of which are sure to be repaid to the State, amount to more than ten thousand dollars during the four fiscal years, notwithstanding the very great care exercised by the ex and present Comptroller of State.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

In testing the settlements by county officers, your Committee regret to notice, that with few exceptions, their accounts have not been accompanied by the proper vouchers, required by law. Seldom has a County Treasurer had his accounts attested by the Auditor, nor has any check appeared, by which, in most cases, the Comptroller, nor your Committee, can know (by legal vouchers) whether the actual receipts for the State, by the County Treasurer, have been paid to the State Treasury. Conflicting statutes, with many general provisions impracticable of execution, have added much to this confusion. Considerable progress towards reformation of these evils, has been made by the present energetic Comptroller, aided by the revenue system enacted the past session; but a more rigid enforcement of the laws is eminently called for.

CASH PAYMENTS FROM THE TREASURY.

The question as to the proper manner of making payments in "coin" from the Treasury, is, and will be, very embarrassing to the Treasurer, unless promptly defined by legislative action. As the condition of the Treasury at the opening of the session will be very similar to that of the session of 1852, your Committee report herewith an abstract from the Cash Book, showing the amount of cash received, and the manner of disposing of it, from July 1, 1851, to April 1, 1852. (See Appendix "A.") A large amount of money appears to have been withdrawn by some of the County Treasurers, in private capacity, immediately after their payments to the State in official capacity, at a time when Warrants were readily purchased at forty to fifty cents on the dollar. From January 1 to March 1, 1852, there was paid into the Treasury in coin $98,556 29, nearly one-half of which belonged to the "General Fund;" during this time, members of the Legislature receiving $10 per diem, and $5, after sixty days' session, as was then supposed. Many of them were obliged to sell their warrants at forty to forty-five cents on the dollar. The whole amount paid to members before the 2d of March of this large receipt, was $938!

On the 8th of March, 1852, the Legislature passed an Act, requiring, substantially, that the members should each be paid $300 in cash. A similar Act passed at the session of 1853, included the officers of the two Houses. Believing that neither State officers, their employees, nor members of the Legislature, should take a preference over other creditors of the State, your Committee recommend as a means to prevent anything of this sort in the future, that an Act be passed requiring the warrants of the Comptroller to be so drawn as to permit and direct the Treasurer of State to pay them in the order of their presentation for registry, and that when, after notice posted in the office for one month, the warrant is not produced, it be placed at the foot of the succeeding list.

SCHOOL FUND.

The interest has not been paid in to the School Fund, as provided by the Act of 1852, for the disposal of the 500,000 acres of School Lands, although a large amount of 7 per cent. bonds have been redeemed out of monies collected as interest tax.—The School Fund is undoubtedly entitled to receive the ratio of interest tax for the funded debt of 1851 on so much of Comptroller's warrants paid in for school lands as were fundable under Act of 1851; and those received fundable under Act of 1852, and the Act of 1853, are entitled to their proportion of the interest tax receipts for that fund.

The interest to be credited to this fund to

WAR DEBT.

No progress has been made by the Board of Examiners towards compliance with the joint resolution of the Legislature, requiring their statement in relation to this debt; nor have your committee made such examination as these accounts should have in order to develop the extent of our claim upon the General Government.

The accounts of pay-master Foster remain unsettled. Warrant 778 for $400 lost by John L. Smith, (to whom by order of Legislature of 1852, a duplicate was issued on filing the proper bond,) has, with the duplicate, also been redeemed. The original appears to have been redeemed on the 28th of September, 1852, the duplicate on the 7th of August, 1852; both to John Perry, Jr., broker, San Francisco.

There has been issued of bonds bearing 12 per cent. interest,	$200,000 00

Total liabilities of the State, exclusive of Civil Warrants issued and not redeemed since July 1, 1853, and of outstanding three per cent. Bonds,	<hr/> $3,197,687 41

The extraordinary total of expenditures heretofore incurred, by legislative action, must in the future be greatly reduced, or the most serious consequences will ensue. The large amount raised by taxation is unequal to the expenditures provided by law. The debt of the State is constantly increasing. The funding system, if carried any further, will not only make the evidences of indebtedness worthless, but will increase the interest tax beyond endurance by the people. If the present State debt were to be paid to-morrow, the continued excess of expenditures would very soon replace it in larger amount.

LEGISLATIVE EXPENSES.

In the auditing of these accounts the Comptroller cannot go behind the orders for payment, directed severally by the two Houses. We find these expenditures audited in accordance with the orders attested by the clerks or Sergeant-at-Arms, and approved by the presiding officer for the time.

The amount paid for officers and clerks of the Assembly of 1853, has been $57,769 60.

This includes $2,413 50, paid to the Sergeant-at-Arms, over and above his per diem, for arrests, mileage and subpoenas.

This custom being no longer tolerated by Congress, your committee suggest a rule, allowing beyond per diem, actual expenses only.

The amount paid for officers and clerks of the Senate for the session of 1853, has been $54,824 00.

Total legislative expenses for officers and clerks session 1853, $106,096 60.

EXECUTIVE.

The salaries audited for Executive and State officers, including State Prison Inspectors and Commissioners for fourth fiscal year, $64,848 40

Will be reduced in the present fiscal year by course of law to the extent of $32,788 43.

There has been examined and found correctly audited for 1853, contingent expenses of the Legislature, $19,031 91.

The salaries paid from the State Treasury to Judges for 1852-3, amount to $123,964 34.

There has also been examined and found to have been paid in accordance with law, for hospital purposes during the third fiscal year, $90,989 75, and during the fourth, $210,806 42—together, $301,246 17.

Your committee have examined with great care and labor, the vouchers and accounts for PUBLIC PRINTING.

The expenditure for public printing prior to that incurred under the contract system of 1852, was as follows, viz :

Paid H. H. Robinson, on vouchers dated March 16th, to May 15th, 1850,	$53,132 79
To J. Winchester, up to Jan 28, 1851,	117,490 69
To J. B. Devoe, (mostly legislative) from Jan. 28, to May 2, 1851,	8,087 13
To Evening Picayune and other newspapers for publication of Laws of 1851,	48,946 01
To Eugene Casserly, Laws and Journals of 1851, and legislative and other printing in 1852,	85,246 74
To George Kerr, in 1852,	282 00
To V. E. Geiger & Co., in 1852,	16,657 90
From March 16, 1850, to July 1, 1852, total,	$330,443 26

There has been paid for printing since the adoption of the contract system, from July 1, 1852, to July 1, 1853, including the Laws and Journals of both years, viz :

Legislative,	$58,411 65
Census blanks and returns,	41,147 00
Paper,	16,962 20
Laws and Journals, 1852,	29,296 17
Ditto of 1853, (in part)	18,906 22
Miscellaneous,	87,771 05
	202,494 29

Total expenditure for printing since the organization of the State, - $532,937 65

By section 2 of the Act of March 9, 1850, it is required of the Secretary of State to "aid the Comptroller in the examination of all accounts rendered by the State Printer."

Your Committee find upon none of the vouchers, (or rather bills of account unaccompanied in most cases by the printed vouchers whereby to measure the amount of work,) any evidence of the rendition of such aid or examination on the part of the Secretary of State, nor prior to the year 1852, of any computation by disinterested practical printers to test the accuracy of the accounts. With the passage of the Act of 1852, that of 1850 was repealed, and the Secretary of State released from this duty. The custom since then has been for the Secretary of State to certify to the receipt of the document, when not ordered by the Legislature; and in the latter case for the Clerk of the Assembly or the Secretary of the Senate, to certify that the printing has been ordered, and with the Sergeant-at-Arms, that it has been delivered. The present Comptroller has used great care in all these matters; has had the printed vouchers filed away, and in most cases called in "experts" before final settlement. With this loose manner of settling accounts rendered under first printing law, before them, your Committee were stimulated to examine with severity the vouchers within their reach, and with the aid of a practical printer, estimated the work upon the Laws and Journals of 1850. See Appendix B.

Mr. Winchester had been paid	$30,222 85

Laws and Journals of 1851. Your Committee are of opinion that it was the intention of the Legislature [see Section 12 of the Act of April 22, 1850, page 341,] that when printing was done out of the State to the prejudice and injury of our own mechanics, a reduction of one half from California prices should be made. The Comptroller, on consultation with counsel, found a strict construction of the law to be adverse to this view, and audited the account for printing as presented. The Laws and Journals of 1851, were printed in New York, [see Appendix C.] that of the Laws badly executed, and were delivered in 1852, sometime after the meeting of the Legislature, having been purchased by Mr. Casserly from Mr. Fitch for about twenty-two thousand dollars in Comptroller's Warrants, and immediately turned over to the State and bills presented, audited and paid for thirty-nine thousand five hundred and fifty seven dollars and eight cents. Your Committee had the work on these Laws and Journals estimated at California prices. See Appendix B.

By voucher No. 3134 it appears that $9,834 was paid to E. Casserly for 1400 quires poll-tax receipts and 90 quires Comptroller's orders, paid in accordance with law; but by same voucher a bill for paper $3,297 and $180 is not certified by the Secretary of State as required, by section 5 of the Act of 1850, (page 84, of Statutes

*The bill of Mr. Casserly charges this binding at 1 1/4 cents per page. See prices fixed by Section 12, of Act of March 9, 1850, page 84, Statutes of 1850. "NOTE." of 1850,) under which this amount was paid. The paper upon which legislative reports and other documents were printed is charged at $16 the ream, and that for bills at $10 the ream.

CONTRACT PRINTING FOR 1852 AND 1853.

Some errors were discovered in the manner of executing the printing under the contract system of 1852 and 1853. The fault was ascertained and acknowledged by the sub-contractors to be theirs, and the contractors had the error immediately rectified. The promptitude with which the printing of 1852 and 1853 has been executed, contrasts greatly to the credit of the contractors, as compared with the printing of previous years. The cost of noting, indexing and appendizing the Laws and Journals has been the subject of examination by your committee. The accounts have been paid in accordance with law, and the rates not exorbitant if we except that for appendizing, which is clearly the solace of the office.

FOLDING AND STITCHING.

The cost of folding and stitching,* and putting up in blue paper covers the Journals only of the two last sessions, will amount to something more than twenty-five thousand dollars; the rate paid under the contract system being one and one-quarter cents per page, and this bid being below that of the Alta California, which was one and one-half cents per page, or over thirty thousand dollars for this work. The cost of folding, stitching and putting up in blue paper covers of each Journal of the Assembly for 1852 was eleven dollars; of each Journal of the Senate, nine dollars and ninety-two cents. And the Journals for 1853, at an estimate of twenty-five thousand pages, (far below the number,) will cost, if in one Journal, thirty-one dollars and twenty-five cents each, for folding, stitching and putting up in blue paper covers. Four hundred and eighty per session are printed under the Act of 1852.

THE ANNUAL APPROPRIATIONS.

By Act of February 12, 1850, there was appropriated to defray the expense of Government,	$1,000,000
Act of May 1, 1851,	500,000
Act of May 4, 1852,	600,000
Act of May 11, 1853, for expenses of Government to close of fiscal year, 1852-3,	300,000
Total,	$2,400,000

Your committee have examined with severality the warrants to pay expenses of Government drawn upon the Treasury, together with the vouchers, and find them to amount for

First and second fiscal years, eighteen months,	$983,869 09
Third fiscal year,	925,694 56
Fourth fiscal year,	1,151,801 04
Total,	$3,010,864 86
Expended beyond appropriation,	$610,864 89

The Comptroller of State, in view of the fact that most of the statutes providing for expenditures of money, have directed the warrants for payment to be drawn by the Comptroller, has considered the statute as clearly pointing out the line of his duty, and has by consequence drawn warrants, as above stated, far beyond the appropriations.

The custom of most of the States of the Union, as well as of Congress, require specific appropriations to be named in the annual appropriation bill; and where a failure in this respect is had to provide for any just account, it must nevertheless await subsequent legislative action. Your committee deem it important that this principle be properly defined by legislative action, for the guidance of the officers of State. The duties of the Comptroller of State especially, so arduous and responsible, should as far as possible, be clearly defined. Few men could have been found to wade through so large an amount of very intricate cases for adjudication with the same clearness of perception and ability of judgment as Comptroller Pierce. The matter of surprise rests with your committee that so few errors have occurred in such an extent of labor.

Your committee, in addition to recommendations under their appropriate heads, would in conclusion further recommend,

First, That the prices of the public printing be generally reduced, and be made to include the folding and stitching—that a fixed rate per volume be adopted for binding.

Second, That a Public Printer be annually elected by the Legislature.

Third, That the printing of reports of committees be made in limited quantity, and no bill be printed until after specific order of the Senate or Assembly, as the case may be.

Fourth, Provide for indexing and noting separately from appending; the former being now fairly and the latter extravagantly paid for.

Fifth, Direct by Joint Resolution that an attested copy of the Journals of the two Houses be made by the Secretary of the Senate and by the Clerk of the Assembly respectively, and deposited in the State Library for public examination. Your committee submit that this would be fulfilling the requirement of the Constitution in relation to the Journals, that they be published. A written document, open to the inspection of all citizens, is as clearly a publication as though it were a printed document open alike to inspection. The extract from the record is now as it then would be, attested by the Secretary from the written record.

Sixth, As the Comptroller cannot go behind the audit of the officers of either House, where errors sometimes occur despite the greatest care, your committee recommend that a joint committee on legislative expenses be raised, to examine every account for legislative expenses, and that the account, after being so audited, be approved by the President or Speaker, as the case may be, if he find it correct.

Seventh, Provide that the census of 1855 be taken by the Assessors of the various counties, embracing merely the constitutional requirement of enumeration of the inhabitants, and that it be done at a nominal rate per head.

The enormous amount of annual expenditures now provided by law and usage, contrasted with the position of the finances of the State, has induced your committee to go more thoroughly than they would otherwise have done, into recommendations for reforming our public expenditures. Unless the experience of the past be lies the future, these recommendations will receive little attention from the Legislature or from the people. By and by, however, when a continuous funding system will have saddled upon the people a rate of taxation of European character, and that too merely to pay interest, without one or scarcely one visible monument of value in return: there will, when too late, be some waking up from this prosperous dream. Not a building save the Insane Asylum and the Prison—not a place where a State officer can leave a paper with safety, belongs to the State.

After an expenditure of more than three millions of dollars, and after seven removals of the archives of State, they are subject to be burned or stolen by any one sufficiently industrious to take the trouble.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The Report of Senate Committee on Public Expenditures, acting with Assembly Committee in the examination of accounts and vouchers of Comptroller and Treasurer of State, October 31, 1853.

TESTIMONY OF G. K. FITCH, AUGUST 2, 1853.

Question.—Were you appointed State Printer by Governor McDougal, and if so, when?

Answer.—I was appointed State Printer by Governor McDougal, on the 2d of May, 1851.

Ques.—Did you cause to be printed, the "Laws and Journals" of the session of 1851, in book form, in accordance with the law directing the manner of printing the same?

Ans.—I caused the "Laws and Journals" for 1851 to be printed in accordance with the directions of the Secretary of State and the Constitution of California. There was no law or statute especially directing the manner of printing the "Laws and Journals" of the session of 1851.

Ques.—Where was the printing done?

Ans.—In New York.

Ques.—What disposition did you make with the volumes so printed?

Ans.—I delivered them to Eugene Casserly. The Secretary of State refused to receive them from me, in consequence of a decision of the Supreme Court, declaring my appointment null and void, and sustaining the validity of the election of said Casserly to the office of State Printer.

Ques.—Did you, on the order of Eugene Casserly, make any printed alterations; if so, what were they?

Ans.—At the request of Casserly, I had the title page of the Laws and Journals so altered, that his name appeared thereon as State Printer instead of my own. I also supplied an "errata" to be inserted in each volume of the Laws.

Ques.—Are the Laws and Journals before spoken of, the same that were delivered by Eugene Casserly to the Secretary of State, and which are now in general use?

Ans.—Yes.

Ques.—When you undertook to print the Laws and Journals, what was your understanding of the law in respect to printing done out of the State?

Ans.—It was my opinion when I first investigated the subject, that the law referred to, applied only to the Laws and Journals of 1850, and could not affect the printing of any subsequent year. At the time of my appointment, however, before making this investigation, it was my impression that a law remained in force, requiring a reduction of fifty per cent. on the statute price, for any printing done out of the State, and allowing the State Printer to charge for transportation of books, &c., should he avail himself of the privileges of the law. With this understanding I accepted the office; and such also being the understanding of Gov. McDougal, I felt bound to make out my bill accordingly; which would have been my course had I retained the office till the Laws and Journals were delivered to the State officers.

Ques.—What amount of money did you receive from Eugene Casserly in payment for the printed Laws and Journals, by you delivered to him ; and how many of the Statutes and how many of the Journals did you so deliver ?

Ans.—As near as I can recollect, I received from Casserly $22,000, in Comptroller's warrants ; varying, perhaps, a few hundred dollars from that amount. I think the number of Statutes delivered was 1050, and 750 Journals.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 3d day of August, 1853.

OF

COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE,

RELATIVE TO THE INCORPORATION OF THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE.

Mr. Speaker :

The Committee on Agriculture to which was referred a Bill, to "incorporate a State Agricultural Society," have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to report :

Your committee, appreciating the vast importance of the subject, would be wanting in the discharge of a high and imperious duty to the State and the people, were it to permit the occasion to pass, without making use of it, to commend the subject to the earnest and favorable consideration of the House.

This is not merely a Bill to create an incorporate society whose influence only affect those immediately interested, and has no bearing upon the State, or upon the great masses of the people—but it is a bill, the provisions of which will act upon every interest, affect all classes of our citizens and touch with electric power every branch of industry throughout the entire State.

Four years ago the agricultural resources of this State, were comparatively unknown. Prior to that time, so little attention had been given to the subject, that much of the soil which experience has demonstrated to be highly productive, was deemed almost valueless. A crude and miserable process of agriculture had induced the impression that but a limited portion of our soil would justify cultivation, without irrigation, and consequently immense tracts of our highlands and mountain slopes, were regarded as fit only for pastoral purposes. This error has given way before the speeding plow, and it is now found that the cultivation of those lands in grain, will yield as rich returns as the cultivation of the valley lands, and instead of the agricultural resources of the country being circumscribed, and confined to a few vallies, limited in extent, and requiring irrigation, highlands and mountain sides are found to be equally productive, and valuable.

It is a pleasant and cheering picture, to see hundreds of pleasant homes and wide spreading fields laden with rich abundant harvest, on lands which but a few years ago were deemed almost unfit for cultivation.

Thus, has the experience of a very brief period of time demonstrated the great fact, that the agricultural resources of California are vast and almost incalculable—not only capable of abundantly supplying the millions destined

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE.

Mr. Speaker :

The Committee on Agriculture to which was referred a Bill, to "incorporate a State Agricultural Society," have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to report :

Your committee, appreciating the vast importance of the subject, would be wanting in the discharge of a high and imperious duty to the State and the people, were it to permit the occasion to pass, without making use of it, to commend the subject to the earnest and favorable consideration of the House.

This is not merely a Bill to create an incorporate society whose influence only affect those immediately interested, and has no bearing upon the State, or upon the great masses of the people—but it is a bill, the provisions of which will act upon every interest, affect all classes of our citizens and touch with electric power every branch of industry throughout the entire State.

Four years ago the agricultural resources of this State, were comparatively unknown. Prior to that time, so little attention had been given to the subject, that much of the soil which experience has demonstrated to be highly productive, was deemed almost valueless. A crude and miserable process of agriculture had induced the impression that but a limited portion of our soil would justify cultivation, without irrigation, and consequently immense tracts of our highlands and mountain slopes, were regarded as fit only for pastoral purposes. This error has given way before the speeding plow, and it is now found that the cultivation of those lands in grain, will yield as rich returns as the cultivation of the valley lands, and instead of the agricultural resources of the country being circumscribed, and confined to a few vallies, limited in extent, and requiring irrigation, highlands and mountain sides are found to be equally productive, and valuable.

It is a pleasant and cheering picture, to see hundreds of pleasant homes and wide spreading fields laden with rich abundant harvest, on lands which but a few years ago were deemed almost unfit for cultivation.

Thus, has the experience of a very brief period of time demonstrated the great fact, that the agricultural resources of California are vast and almost incalculable—not only capable of abundantly supplying the millions destined to inhabit the great Pacific empire now springing up with magic rapidity, with all of the necessities and luxuries grown in the most favored regions of the world, but of producing a large surplus for external commerce.

It is conceded that agriculture is the basis of the wealth, and prosperity of all civilized nations, and that the condition of agriculture in a country, furnishes a true and unerring index of its moral, mental, and scientific progress. It is indeed impossible in the nature of things, for a people, or a nation to attain any degree of eminence without pursuing an enlightened system of agriculture.

Advanced agriculture and its kindred branches of horticulture and floriculture are pursuits peculiar alone to civilized life. The barbarian never plants a tree, nor flower; his coarser taste has no appreciation of the value and magnificence of the one, nor the beauty of the other. These pursuits, congenial alone to the cultivated man, constitute the foundation upon which the social system rests, and bind the citizen to his country by the strongest of all ties.

Give men land to own, to cultivate; let them adorn and surround their homes with the comforts, and the various forms of beauty which result from advanced and scientific agriculture, and you build up in the country fortresses more impregnable than can be devised in any other way.

Then to protect, to foster and encourage by every legitimate means this vast department of industry, appears to your committee, to be one of first and most imperative duties of the Legislature of this State. California in its relations to agriculture, is a peculiarly interesting country.

We are now in our infancy. We have the lights of experience to guide us; we are cognizant of the fatal errors other States and other people have committed; we see and know how to avoid those errors. Then, let us while we have a virgin soil, unparalleled in variety and richness of production, at once introduce a system of agriculture which will secure to us and to the State the highest degree of prosperity for the time being, and enable us to transmit—unimpaired by our negligence or folly—the great advantages which we now enjoy, to those who will succeed us. Let us establish a system which experience has demonstrated to be productive of the most beneficent results in other States, and lay now, the sure and enduring foundations of future prosperity and greatness.

It is believed by those well informed on this subject, that the immense sum of twenty-five millions of dollars is annually employed in the import provision trade of California.

Is it not important to arrest this vast drain upon the country? We have also reliable information that within the past year there has been imported more than half a million barrels of flour, making from five to ten millions of dollars for this single article. The latter sum will now, and hereafter, in all probability, be retained in the country, as the home production will fully supply the home demand.

Now in view of the general importance of the subject, other States are moving in the matter, and stretching forth the hand of encouragement and protection; why should not California do so likewise?

A much greater necessity exist here than in other States.

At present our staples consist of very limited variety, and of these a surplus will soon be produced, hence the vast importance—the overruling necessity of encouraging the cultivation of new products, and before the extensive cultivation of new products can be with prudence engaged in, experiments must demonstrate the adaptation of our soil and climate to their production. It must be ascertained that such new products can be successfully and profitably cultivated. Your committee believe that the surest and speediest mode of attaining the great ends in view, is the immediate organization of a State Agricultural Society, with liberal appropriations for its support. This appropriation is not asked for merely to support an institution as such, but to enable it to perform duties, the accomplishment of which shall give back to the State, the richest returns—to build up, make permanent and perpetuate the most vital interests of the State—to open those fountains from which issue streams that will refresh forever the hills and valleys of this “bright land.” This interest is receiving liberal encouragement in other States, and California now presents features in agriculture, that shall, if properly regarded, be as momentous as any the world ever saw. Our vast tule lands can be reclaimed, and fields of rice, cotton and tobacco can be made to flourish and add their untold value to the wealth of our people and State. Tea, coffee and sugar will also be numbered among the rich products of California, if that wise care so much needed, be given to nourish the germ which is now in embryo.

The opening of China and Japan reveals sources of wealth in the forms of new and varied productions of the Celestial world; and shall California avail itself of these offerings that progress holds out to us?

The sheep and the goat can feed upon our thousand hills, yielding their fleeces for our manufactories. Our sunny slopes will be adorned by fruitful vineyards, and beautified by groves of the mulberry, affording food for the worm that shall clothe our people with the costly silks that now draw our treasures to other nations. The people, too, of the Celestial kingdom will bring their knowledge, both of agriculture—of which they possess vast stores—and of the manufacturing of those costly fabrics, adding all these to our own sources of wealth.

To accomplish these great objects, a stimulus must be given; the State must extend the hand of encouragement and protection. We therefore recommend the establishment of a “State Board of Agriculture,” and the passage of the Bill referred to us, providing for the Incorporation of a State Agricultural Society,” with liberal appropriations in land and money for its support.

All of which is respectfully submitted by order of the Committee.

[SESSION 1854.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE

ON

SALES OF WATER LOT PROPERTY.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

Mr. Speaker:

The Special Committee, appointed "to take into consideration the communication of the Treasurer of the State to ascertain the amount of property sold by the City of San Francisco under the Act of March 26, 1851, and to ascertain the amount of such sales to which the State is entitled to 25 per cent.," and "also the amount otherwise disposed of under the provisions of said Act," have had the same under consideration and beg leave to make the following report:

Before giving a statement of the different sales, which have been made of Beach and Water lot property, under the provisions of said Act, by the City of San Francisco and other parties, we would say that to comply fully with the requisitions of the resolution, under which we were appointed, demands more time than we, with other duties claiming our attention, could possibly appropriate exclusively to this subject; but being sensible of the magnitude of the interests entrusted to our care, we have labored assiduously to a correct completion of our task, and most respectfully recommend to the consideration of the Assembly the following estimates of sales of Beach and Water lot property.

That the amount of Beach and Water Lot Property sold by Peter Smith, on different executions against the City of San Francisco, included within the present water front, since the passage of the Law of March 26, 1851, amounts, as appears from schedule A, herewith submitted, to the sum of fifty-eight thousand, eight hundred and sixty-five dollars, exclusive of property sold under same judgment on the 30th January, 1852, and which is claimed by the city by redemption.

That the amount of Beach and Water Lot Property, sold by others on different executions against the City, as appears from schedule B, herewith submitted, amounts to the sum of eleven thousand and eighty-nine dollars.

That the sum realized to the City of San Francisco, by the sale of the above property, amounts to sixty-nine thousand nine hundred and fifty-four dollars.

That the sales of property made by the Fund Commissioners, amounts to the sum of one hundred and nineteen thousand, four hundred and forty dollars, as appears by reference to schedule C.

That the sales of property made by the Joint Committee on Land Claims, appointed by the Common Council of the City of San Francisco, under an ordinance approved December 5th, 1853, amounts to the sum of one million, one hundred and ninety-three thousand, seven hundred and fifty dollars, which will appear by reference to schedule D, hereto annexed, that the sum of five hundred and twelve thousand, four hundred and eighty-eight dollars and sixty-seven cents, has been received by the Committee from purchasers, on account of payments, leaving a balance due from said sales of six hundred and eighty-one thousand, two hundred and sixty-one dollars, and thirty-three cents. The chairman of said Joint Committee further adds, that notes were made by purchasers of portions of said property and delivered to them, amounting to the sum of three hundred and thirty-seven thousand, three hundred and eighteen dollars and forty-eight cents; but that property, amounting to three hundred and forty-three thousand, nine hundred and forty-two dollars and eighty-five cents, was sold; for which the City has no security, and which will probably never be called for, but remain in the same condition, as if the same had never been offered for sale. Thus it will be seen that property, in which the State of California is interested has been disposed of to the amount of:—

In addition to the above, your Committee would further report, that on the 30th January, 1852, a large amount of Beach and Water Lot Property was sold under a judgment rendered against said City of San Francisco, in favor of Peter Smith, for three thousand, five hundred and sixty dollars, which said property, so sold, is specified in schedule E, hereto annexed: that said property was sought to be recovered by redemption, by the City of San Francisco, subsequent to said sale, but that your committee are advised, (unofficially) that the Supreme Court have decided against the claim of the redemptionists.

That the amount of property sold, and the manner of such sale, as well as the amount due the State of California is set forth, in schedule G, hereto annexed.

That the entire sum of money paid into the State Treasury by the City of San Francisco, under the Act of 26th March, 1851, amounts to the sum of seventy-eight thousand, five hundred and sixty-seven dollars and ninety-five cents.

That the sum of five thousand one hundred and sixty dollars and fifty cents has been paid into the State Treasurer at different times, by purchasers under judgments against the City of San Francisco, in favor of Peter Smith and others, but that there is no evidence before the Committee going to show that they were authorized by the City to make such payments, and in the opinion of the Committee, the said payments were made without any authority of law, and hence no rights were vested or created in consequence of such payments.

Your Committee, although not required by the Resolution under which they are acting, to report upon those matters which do not effect the disposition of the Beach and Water Lot Property, under the act of March 26, 1851, yet will refer incidentally to those sales which have been made by the Board of California Land Commissioners.

From a report made by the State Treasurer, it seems that property to the amount of seven hundred and nine thousand four hundred and seventy-five dollars has been disposed of at public sale; that on the 3d April, 1854, at which time said report was made out, the sum of two hundred and thirty four thousand nine hundred and five dollars and eighteen cents had been paid in to the State Treasurer, said sum being exclusive of the payments made in States Prison Bonds.

That the sum of ninety-two thousand dollars in State Prison Bonds, was received on account of said sales, making in all the sum of three hundred and twenty-six thousand nine hundred and five dollars and eighteen cents.

That there has been paid to the Fund Commissioners, by the lessees of the California and Market Street Wharf, the sum of $11,936 69; by the lessees of Broadway Wharf, $3,222 74; and by the lessees of Pacific Street Wharf, the sum of $16,159 56, making in the aggregate $31,318 99.

That the sum of seven thousand six hundred and eighty-five dollars has been received by the Comptroller of the City of San Francisco for the rent of certain other wharves, and which is more particularly set forth in schedule G hereto annexed.

By reference to the report of the Joint Committee on Land Claims, (see schedule D) it will be seen that the sum of five hundred and twelve thousand four hundred and eighty-eight dollars and sixty-seven cents ($512,488 67) has long since been paid to them, and that notes to the amount of one hundred and fifty-one thousand and forty-three dollars and forty-eight cents, ($151,043 48) matured on the 28th Feb., 1854; and also four month notes falling due on the 27th April, 1854, for the sum of one hundred and eighty-six thousand two hundred and seventy-five dollars, ($186,275 00), which if paid at the time they fall due would show in the hands of the Joint Committee the sum of eight hundred and forty nine thousand eight hundred and seven dollars and fifteen cents ($849,807 15) of which sum the State is entitled to two hundred and twelve thousand four hundred and fifty-one dollars and seventy-eight cents, ($212,451 78), (less the amount heretofore paid,) that being twenty-five per cent. of the receipts arising from sales of the Beach and Water Lot Property.

Until the time shall have expired for the purchasers to make their final settlements, according to the terms of sale it will be impossible for this Committee to report the precise amount the State is entitled to, as a large amount of property will, no doubt, remain uncalled for, and must be resold, but as near as can be ascertained, a balance of one hundred and sixty-three thousand seven hundred and forty-three dollars and eighty-four cents, ($168,743 84) is shown to exist in favor of the State from San Francisco.

Your Committee make up the amount as follows:

Payments made as per schedule D,.....	$512,488 67
Notes which became due 28th February, 1854,...	151,043 48
Notes which became due 27th April, 1854,.....	186,275 00

amounting to.....$242,811 78

Deduct payment heretofore made,..... 78,567 95

Balance due the State from San Francisco,.....$163,743 83

As has been already remarked we have not had sufficient time to devote to this subject, which its importance demands, and with increased powers we respectfully ask leave to sit again. We therefore submit the following resolution for your approval:

Resolved, That the Special Committee appointed "to take into consideration the communication of the Treasurer of the State, to ascertain the amount of property sold by the City of San Francisco under the act of March 26th, 1851, and to ascertain the amount of such sales to which the State is entitled to twenty-five per cent.;" and "also the amount otherwise disposed of under the provisions of said act," have power to send for persons and papers, and to take testimony.

SCHEDULE D.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, }
March 29, 1854. }

To Special Committee of Assembly—

Gentlemen:

I yesterday had the honor to present to you a statement showing that the amount of money bid for the property sold by Selover & Sinton, under order of the joint Committee on Land Claims, as authorized by ordinance of the Common Counsel, approved December 5th, 1853, was

$1,193,750 00

That there had been received by the Committee, from purchases on account of payments

512,488 67

$681,261 21

I beg leave now to add for your information that the committee have in their possession, notes of the purchasers, given by them on settlement amounting to

60 day notes matured Feb. 28, $151,043 48

4 months notes falling due April 27, 186,275 00

337,318 48

That amount will in all probability be collected, although the parties owing may require time.

There then remains unpaid, for which the city has no security, and which property will probably never be called for, but remain in the same condition, as if the same had never been offered for sale, the sum of

343,942 85

In the present state of the money market, and in view of the known great depreciation in the value of real estate, I deem it advisable not to offer at this time the uncalled-for lots at public sale; but shall take occasion to do so when a more prosperous state of the money market shall justify a hope that prices may be obtained, approximating to those received at the last sale.

In the mean time, all efforts shall be employed by me, not only to collect the notes already matured and about to mature, but also to make the parties responsible for the balance due on purchases, on which the first payment alone was made, and for which no notes were given, which sum will amount to, in round numbers, thirty-five thousand dollars, ($35,000.)

I have the honor to be, gentlemen, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Signed, C. K. GARRISON, Mayor, and Chairman Joint Committee on Land Claims,
by SMYTH CLARK.

[B. B. REDDING, STATE PRINTER.]

TO HIS EXCELLENCY,

JOHN BIGLER,

Governor of the State of California.

Pursuant to resolution of Assembly, passed Feb. —, 1854, I have the honor herewith to submit the accompanying report on the Geology of that portion of the State, authorized by Joint Resolution of Senate and Assembly of the fourth session, all of which, with accompanying plates, is respectfully submitted.

Yours, &c.

JOHN B. TRASK.

TO THE SENATE AND ASSEMBLY

OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

Under the Joint Resolution, passed May 6. 1853, by the Senate and Assembly of the State of California, authorizing a farther Geological examination of some parts of the Sierra Nevada and Coast Mountains, and report the results of the same to the ensuing Legislature, I have the honor of submitting the following report in relation thereto, and in conformity to the above requisitions.

JOHN B. TRASK.

The examinations authorized were entered upon soon after the passage of the resolution, and continued until the 28th of November, comprising a period in the field of about six months. The first five weeks were occupied in examinations of the more elevated and western portions of the Counties of Butte, Sierra, Yuba, Nevada and Placer, in determining, as far as possible, the position of an ancient water course in this section of the State, and its peculiarities—the description of which will be found in the body of this report.

On the 23d June, the southern portion of the tour was commenced, and carried on almost uninterruptedly for four months. The route south was carried through the Counties of San Francisco, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Monterey, and the north part of Luis Obispo; on the west, and returning on the east, (or through that range denominated the Monte Diablo Range) by the west part of Tulare County, Mariposa, Tuolumne, Alameda, Contra Costa and San Joaquin.

The range of country bounded on the north by the Straits Carquinez, and south by the Nacismiento, was divided into four sections, formed by lines running nearly east and west from the great valley to the coast. On the first of October, the country north of the Straits Carquinez was entered, and preliminary examinations only were made in the counties of Solano, Napa and Sonoma. From the County of Napa a section was carried across the basin of the Sacramento, and connected with examinations made two years previous on its eastern edge. A similar section was also made, passing eighteen miles south of Monte Diablo and continued across the San Joaquin.

The remainder of the months of October and November was employed in investigations of the middle mining sections of the County of Nevada and those intermediate between the former and the middle and western parts of Calaveras county. This range leads through that section in which the principal gold mines of the middle portions of the State are located, and was selected, with the view of conducting those examinations which will be found in the appendix of this report, under the head of Quartz Mining. As those mines have of late presented many interesting facts connected with their ultimate prospects, a set of sketches representing the positions of the views and investing rocks has been given for illustrating their present features.

Doing the tour in the agricultural sections of the State, the modifications of the soils in different sections has been noted, and the natural productions arising as resultants, where they seemed of a general character, and extending over any considerable area. The "Saline lands" have been observed, and the opportunities that were offered for their reclamation, when at any time demanded. The extent of cropping and resultant crops in some parts of the State, are of peculiar interest, and the facts developed in this particular will prove of much value to our agricultural interests, being an exhibition of the capabilities of some of our soils for the production of the necessities of life, unexcelled in the history of the world.

The temperature of the mountainous and valley sections of both branches of the coast mountains, was noted as far as the nature of attending circumstances would permit, for the purpose of ascertaining as far as possible the peculiar adaptation of the different sections to the culture of exotic fruits and trees, and where no opportunity of personal examination offered, a careful inquiry of persons long resident in different sections, was made, by which many interesting facts have been obtained, relating to this subject.

This report will embrace the examination of a district of country, included within  $120^{\circ} 16'$  and  $122^{\circ} 32'$  west longitude, and from the thirty-fifth parallel to the thirty-ninth degree of north latitude, inclusive of the coast mountains and mineral districts.

The coast mountains are watered by thirty-two streams, the most of which are small, their names and the counties in which they are located will be found below.

The coast range of mountains, and its included valleys, which form the principle subject of this report, extend from the 42nd paralel north latitude to the southern boundary of the State. Their general features present much more diversity of character than is usually to be found in the eastern chain of mountains, which forms the Sierra Nevada; from the occurrence of a greater variety of rocks constituting their mass, and the much greater area of covered by the sedimentary formations, the principle of which are sandstones, interspersed occasionally with calcareous rocks, and more rarely slates; this latter class of rocks forming but a small proportion of the sedimentary formations, of which later extensive portions of the coast line of mountains is composed.

The eastern belt of the coast range presents a repulsive aspect to the traveller as he approaches it from either hand, from its naked and barren appearance, producing but little of forest growth in any part of it, while those portions of the coast line of hills proper, are covered to a great extent with forest trees, consisting principally of the redwood, pine, and spruce, with groves of oak near their base, all of which are well adapted to the wants of the settler and usually easy of access.

This peculiarity in the two principal ridges of this chain was general for near three hundred miles of their course, the eastern ridge presenting no traces of timber except here and there an isolated patch of the pine on some one of its higher points; and for miles in extent even low shrubs are almost entirely absent.

Notwithstanding the barren aspect of the eastern belt of the coast mountains, it is not to be inferred that their slopes or valleys are unproductive, for it is found to be otherwise, being covered with a luxuriant growth of native grains and grasses, with herbaceous plants, affording extensive pasturage for flocks and herds. The lower foothills of the range, and the immediate banks of the small streams that meander through them, afford a few scattering oaks and other trees, but not sufficient in extent to furnish more than a very small local demand, to so extensive a population as the valley sections at the base of these hills must in a few years require. The oak groves found on the plains are not adapted to any other uses than that of fencing and for fuel. The western or coast line of mountains must become the principal source of supply, in lumber for building purposes, except that which may be obtained by importation.

The coast range consists of two principal and distinct lines of ridges for a distance of nearly two hundred miles of their length; these are separated from each other by wide and long valleys that continue almost uninterrupted through their whole course, and should be considered as distinct ranges of one system both from their geographical position as relates to the mountains in which they are situated. The valleys have received different names, as the Santa Clara and Salinas; and these again are subdivided and receive local names even on the same line of plain; they can be considered strictly but one valley, the line of continuity being broken by the interposition of a range of hills, not exceeding in altitude three hundred feet, and even below these figures.

This division of the Salinas from the Santa Clara is caused by a low spur putting in from the Gabilan range, in a direction nearly north-west. Across the northern part of this spur the Pajaro River, an inconsiderable stream, holds its course, discharging its waters into the Bay of Monterey. The extent and geographical position of these two valleys would seem to warrant a different arrangement than that at present existing in reference to the coast range; as they form a line as distinct and clear in the separation of the two principal ridges, as the valleys Sacramento and San Joaquin in the separation of the coast range on the west from the Sierra Nevada on the east.

The division of the coast range proposed will be bounded as follows: commencing at a point due east of Monte Diablo on the valley San Joaquin, the latter and the Tulare valley to form the east line to the intersection of both ranges with the San Bernardino Mountains, near the thirty-fifth degree north latitude, thence running west to a point that shall cut the west base of this range, and lying on the north-western border of the Salinas, thence north along the west border of the latter, and also the west border of the valley Santa Clara to the south-east terminus of the bay San Francisco, following the east coast of that bay to the point San Pablo. This range inclusive to be denominated the Monte Diabolo, and all mountains to the west of these lines to be still termed the "Coast Mountains." This division in the mountains now bearing the latter name, will become the more necessary when it is understood that much difficulty now exists in localizing phenomena and transactions that have from time to time occurred, as well also as another distinctive feature which marks them, viz: their relative age, the one being of comparative recent date to the other. The term "Coast Range" implies a line of mountains following the coast only; but which, as it is used at the present time, includes a chain whose eastern base is as far removed from the coast, as the foothills of the Sierra Nevada are from Bodega Bay on a line cutting through the City of Sacramento to the ocean. This chain, it will be seen, is separated by broad and long valleys, as distinct in their characteristics as the Sacramento and San Joaquin, while their length, including the bay San Francisco, equals the latter and has nearly half its average breadth. The geological and mineral characteristics of the two ranges are equally as marked and distinct as their geographical position and vegetable productions, while the courses which both pursue are widely variant, forming an angle of thirty-six degrees in ninety-one miles. For local convenience of description this division should be made, if for no other reason.

A division, or rather a new arrangement, is to be introduced in relation to the entire mountain chains that lie upon the west side of the continent, which will give more uniformity and a much better classification than that now existing. It is not proposed however to change local names in the arrangement, but to name those parts of the mountains, which, as yet, have received none, except "Sierras," as they are termed. Through Mr. Blake, of the U. S. R. R. Survey, I am informed that it is now proposed to term the entire chain of mountains, extending through to the northern part of Oregon, and running south into lower California, "Cordilleras or Western America," and all those portions south of the thirty-fifth parallel of north latitude, [which, as yet, have received no name,] are to be termed the "Peninsula range" in order to separate them from the coast mountains with which they are now often confounded, and again as often termed Sierra Nevada, by persons who have occasion to describe them, or any part of them.

The terms "Sierra Nevada," and "Cascade Range," will thus be retained as local names, with their boundaries the same as before. The coast mountains will comprise the entire chain lying to the west of the above, and which are found to have an age more recent than the tertiary rocks, which rest upon them, and such local changes as may be necessary will be applied, but so far only as will be required in order to elucidate any peculiar characteristics they may possess.

This arrangement is one much needed, and is founded on strictly scientific principles, and this proposition of Mr. Blake will meet the universal concurrence of the country, as it will reduce the mountain chains of the western part of the continent, to a more perfect system than they have heretofore possessed.

A more specific classification of these mountains has before been proposed by different persons, among them that of Lieut. Wilkes, who proposed the term of "California Range of the Cascades;" for the Sierra Nevada being but a continuation of the former, all of them heretofore have been objectionable on the ground that old and established names would be changed by the arrangement; notwithstanding those names conveyed erroneous impressions. No such objection can be urged against the present proposition of the gentleman above named, as it affords a convenience of arrangement not heretofore suggested or presented to the public for their consideration. With these remarks on this part of our subject, we will proceed to the examination of the chain termed the Monte Diablo Range.

GEOLOGY OF THE MONTE DIABOLO RANGE.

This chain of mountains forms the south shore of the Straits Carquinez and part of the bay of Suisun. The rocks bordering the bay and straits are mostly a sandstone, which belongs to a similar range occurring on the opposite shore. On the western flank of this portion of these mountains, or on the east shores of the bay San Pablo, and north part of San Francisco, a range of sharp Peaks are seen; their slopes are abrupt from the summit for a considerable way down toward their base, and in the latter part of winter and through the spring are covered with wild oats and grasses.

For several miles these mountains are made up of trapean rocks, which have forced themselves through the sedimentary rocks, and are in all respects similar to the volcanic series that has protruded through the older and also more recent formations in the Sierra Nevada. These rocks are cut through and disturbed by a suite of igneous rocks of still more recent origin, causing material change in the structure of the rocks that preceded them, both sedimentary and plutonic. Among the latter we find the pitchstone and obsidian, showing conclusively that they belong to that class known as recent volcanic rocks. These rocks may be conveniently observed in some of the lower hills about two miles east of the house of Victor Castro, in the County of Alameda. The more recent volcanic rocks form the first summit of the high ridge east of the bay, and the frequently isolated conical peaks to which they give rise, and which are known among the native inhabitants as (Picaches) stretch to the north for six miles, when they are replaced by the older trap rocks, and followed by the softer sandstones, which form the smooth rounded summits of the hills to the Bay San Pablo and Straits of Carquinez.

The sandstones on the shores present many marks of disturbance and change, by the intrusion of the late igneous rocks, and it is not unfrequent to find fine threads of quartz ramifying through them in every direction; when this is the case, or when they are in contact with the more recent of the igneous group, their former structure is usually found materially changed, a conchoidal fracture in these rocks is often the result of this contact either in large or small masses.

There are considerable areas of the sandstone in these mountains, that present little or no traces of change, subsequent to their deposition, except that of uplift; thus proving that they must have been deposited on the trap rocks after the latter had become firm, and parted with their heat: but where the sedimentary rocks are found in close proximity with the later igneous rocks the change indeed in them is clear and decisive: thus demonstrating the fact that volcanic action has occurred at a date long subsequent to the period in which these rocks were deposited, and probably after their emergence above the surface of the sea, in which they had their origin. It was found, in examining the sandstones lying upon the older trapean rocks of this part of the range, that the fine threads of quartz before noticed, gradually increased in dimensions as they approximated the inferior strata of the sedimentary rocks, and where the igneous rocks were exposed to view beneath them, in favorable situations, they often exhibited true well and defined, though small veins of quartz passing through them.

These general characteristics continue south untill a point nearly east of the town of Oakland is obtained, and here the trapean group of rocks are interrupted to a certain extent. East of this town we find the primitive rocks occurring, and an outcrop of serpentine makes its appearance, together with some of its subordinate members, among which the Shales and some of the cherty rocks appear. These are flanked to the east with rocks of the trapean group, forming the high ridge in that direction, and are surmounted with the fossiliferous sandstones. The serpentine rocks of this district contain considerable quantities of chromic iron, but its extent is not accurately known. South of Oakland to San Antonio, the country is of the same character as that immediately preceding it. The mountains were not examined, but the creek was followed four or five miles, and its bed showed nothing to indicate a change in the structure of the country from which it has its rise, with the exception, perhaps, that the sandstone pebbles exhibited no marks of fossils.

These features were general for the entire distance to the San Leandro, being about eight miles: but after crossing this stream, the fossiliferous rocks become more fully developed and continue to gradually increase to the arroyo of the Alameda. The sedimentary rocks of this district rest on the older trap formations, with frequent small threads of quartz passing through them, but no material change of structure was observed in these at the points of contact. The sandstone of these hills is much coarser in its texture than that forming the shores of the Bay San Pablo and Straits Carquinez, and its fossils exceedingly fragile and imperfect.

Crossing the Alameda and entering the hills in which the Mission of San Jose is situated, a distance of four miles, no change in the general character of the rocks is noticeable, with the exception that the sedimentary rocks have suffered more from disintegration than at any point north of the arroyo Alameda, and the contour of the country being such as to retain a large part of the detritus of these rocks, the result has been the production of a soil, throughout the hilly and rolling districts, of almost unequalled richness and fertility.

Following the west side of the Central Range we pass into the county Santa Clara, a short distance south of the Mission San Jose. The sedimentary rocks containing fossils continue to cap the summit of the ridge for the distance of twenty-five miles south of this point, all of which appear to be of the same age as those above described. South of the Hot Springs (a point defining the boundary between the counties Alameda and Santa Clara) the trachytes crop out in two or three localities, leaving but little room for doubt that the more recent of the volcanic rocks underlie this entire section. At the distance of sixteen miles south of the Spring, the chlorite slate flanks the west base of the ridge, and at short intervals along this distance fragments of these rocks are frequently met; on the Rancho del Palo this rock again occurs at a distance of three miles east of San Jose, here it crops out on the hills three hundred feet above the valley, and appears to have been much disturbed and broken up; immediately west of this an aluminous slate appears dipping southwest and corresponding to the inclination of the chlorites.

In the hills of this district there is considerable quantities of quartz, some of which has proved auriferous.

Traveling parallel with the ridge and south of the Pueblo San Jose, the fossiliferous rocks become less developed, and at the distance of thirteen miles very few sandstones containing fossils were to be seen. In the arroya Caoti the first specimens of scoriaceous lava were met with, this induced a more critical examination of the mountains to the east of the valley than would otherwise have been made. The hills were entered a short distance south of Laguna Seca, and followed thence southerly for eighteen miles. Small patches of fossiliferous rocks are sparingly distributed over the route, the predominating rocks being igneous and composed principally of trachytes and lavas; from Laguna Seca an almost continuous dike of the latter extends along the western base of the ridge for a distance of near twenty miles.

As you approach the Rancho Cantine it becomes more cellular than farther north at any point where it was observed. In the vicinity of Gilroy's it has been used for milling purposes, to which it seems admirably adapted; being unequalled in hardness to the best French Buhr. I saw at Gilroy's three sets of these stones which have been in use at that place for several years in flouring wheat. These stones are capable of being split out to the diameter of four feet and the requisite thickness that may be required for the uses of the mill.

The principal rocks forming the east ridge of the Monte Diablo range, and continuing southeasterly from Gilroy's, are composed of the more recent volcanic series, and are but a part of those above alluded to. At the distance of eight miles from this town, the ridge attains an elevation near three thousand feet, and shoots up into a series of jagged, conical peaks, which maintain this character for sixteen miles south of San Felipe; the pass known as "Pacheco Pass," leading from the Valley Santa Clara to the San Joaquin, is situated among these latter hills and near their northern terminus.

Nine miles northeast from San Felipe is the well known landmark known as "Pacheco's Peak;" it is visible for a long distance from the east, west and south, but not from the north owing to the hills between having a considerable altitude and their close proximity on the principle line of travel; it is formed of trachyte and scoriaceous lavas, and is evidently the remains of an extinct volcano.

The Santa Anna mountains stretch in a south-east direction from San Felipe a distance of twelve miles, and from this point sink gradually into an uneven ridge having an altitude varying from one thousand to fifteen hundred feet, but far more ragged than its equivalent north of the Alameda Creek. The section inclusive from the vicinity of Pacheco's to the extreme southeast part of the Santa Anna mountains, has been one of the grand centres of the more recent volcanic disturbances which has imparted to the mountains their present contour; the greatest amount of local disturbance is confined within a line of distance comprising about eight miles north and south, exerting a considerable elevatory force on the sedimentary rocks of recent date to the west and south-west.

The disturbance among the latter rocks is manifested in a striking manner on the south-east portion of the "Loma Muertas," (a range of hills extending from the south-east part of the Santa Clara Valley across its upper end, dividing this from the Valley San Juan) which extends also to the fossiliferous rocks near the Mission San Juan, they all have a dip to the west, which is continuous for miles.

The Rancho Tres Pinos, eight miles south-west of Santa Anna, may be said to be the southern terminus of the Valley Santa Clara, though south of the "Loma Muertas" it is called San Juan; at this point it narrows to a cañon and continues thus forty miles to the south-east; after passing the Tres Pinos it becomes rough and irregular, though attaining no great altitude for most of this distance, and from the appearance of the cañada beyond, obtained from an elevation of eight hundred feet, it is probably connected with the Tulare plain some forty miles south, and from its appearance the elevation must be very moderate, as no hills were visible along the axis of the cañon to obstruct the view to a horizon beyond.

The stream that courses this cañada is termed San Benito as far south as the Arroya los Muertas, and eight miles south of the Rancho Tres Pinos, after which it takes the name of San Juan; it discharges its waters into the Pajaro fourteen miles north of the Rancho Santa Anna; the latter river forming the boundary of the counties Santa Clara, Santa Cruz and Monterey.

The pass Santa Anna is situated in the Monte Diablo Range and enters these mountains from the west, two leagues south of the Tres Pinos, and from the cañada San Benito; it was extremely rocky so far as examined though attaining no great altitude, the mean of its course was fifteen degrees north of east. This cañon appears to have formed the banks of an ancient stream, and it is not improbable that the San Joaquin might have flowed through this section, and discharged its waters into the bay of Monterey; I did not pass through the entire length of the cañon and am therefore unable to form an opinion on this point that would be satisfactory in this particular. The features observed on which this supposition is founded, are that a series of outliers, or rather narrow terraces are traceable for nine or ten miles up the cañada, such as occur on streams whose beds have been drained from successive elevations from subterranean forces. These peculiar features are not uncommon in the more elevated portions of the Sierra Nevada or Coast Mountains, and in the middle and northern parts of the former they may be traced for long distances.

The Monte Diablo Range is connected with the line of mountains which separate the Tulare and Salinas Valleys; and constitute in fact but one range, having their terminus within the thirty-fourth parallel, when they are intercepted by the San Bernardino mountains, which it appears from the U. S. R. R. Survey, pursue a course nearly at right angles to the trend of the former; while the low mountains forming the east border of the Salinas from the Mission San Miguel on the south to the Pajaro River on the north, can be considered nothing but a spur of the Monte Diablo Range.

The principle part is of this spur of granitic and other primitive rocks, on which the tertiaries rest; the granite is first developed in and about the Ciénega del Gabilan, this mountain being made up for the most part of these rocks; at the next highest peak twelve miles south of the above known as the Chupadero, the granite passes into a coarse sienite much disintegrated and loose on the surface; the sienite continues to the cañada Solza a distance of six miles, beyond which it was not examined for twenty miles. It is doubtful if the granite rocks extend to any considerable distance beyond this locality, as the general aspect of the country changes materially after passing this point, and the magnesian rocks begin to be gradually developed.

The mountains were again entered fourteen miles above the cañada Solza, and followed for eleven miles, the magnesian rocks were met at short intervals throughout the entire distance. Chlorite and talcose slates with beds of impure serpentine occur, containing actinolite, and in the ravines fragments of chromic iron; at one locality this mineral was found in considerable quantities. No chromic iron was found in place in any of these rocks, but the detached masses in the ravines indicate deposits to a considerable extent.

The Panoches were visible from this point, and distant about seven miles, bearing per compass south-east by east, and the entire range of hills intervening leads to the belief that the same class of rocks as those above alluded to, compose the principal rock of this section. This opinion, was subsequently corroborated by the results of an exploring party from the Mission San Juan, who were out in search of what had been supposed an argentiferous vein, up the cañada of that San Juan, the ore brought in by this company proved to be an excellent quality of the chromic mineral, containing considerable quantities of the emerald nickel, which is far more valuable than the mineral with which it is associated.

A line from the cañada Solza carried east to the Arroya San Juan terminates at a point four miles north of a sandstone formation lying upon the east declivity of these mountains which contains marine fossils; those that were sufficiently firm for examination were found to be of present existing species of the Pacific Coast, consisting of Mytilus and Cytherea; in one part of these tertiary sandstones some fragments of Purpura were found, which are identical with those on the Arroya Pescadero, county of Santa Clara, and the littoral sea beaches on the Straits Carquinez. This was the only deposit of sedimentary rocks found on this spur of the Monte Diablo Range, and points to a period remote, when the waters of the ocean washed those shores, and furnishes corroborative testimony of the recession of the sea from those places by uplift from volcanic agencies below the surface.

On the west flank of the Gabilan (which is the most prominent peak on this spur) a bed of primitive limestone occurs, extending from the cañada Vergeles on the north nearly to the Sierra Chapadero on the south, a distance of twelve miles; it was observed on the lower hills of this part of these mountains only, and at no elevation exceeding five hundred feet above the level of the Salinas Plains.

At one locality these rocks have been cut through by two dikes of trap, and also a heavy dike of quartz is found on its eastern edge, which runs parallel with the course of the calcareous rocks; the quartz has cut both the granite and limestone, and thrown both to the west, it is heavily charged with iron, and contains in addition the blue and green carbonate of copper with a little gold. The limestone passes under the Salinas Valley and has a considerable inclination in contact with the intrusive veins above noted; it contains silver and lead (Argentiferous Galena) in small veins in several places. As the calcareous formation does not show itself on the opposite side of the valley, opposite this locality, the presumption is that it underlies the plain at a considerable depth, and should it carry those veins throughout which is found upon its surface it is not improbable that valuable deposits of ores may be found within it.

SALINAS VALLEY.

This extensive plain will follow as next in order, in the description of its general features, previous to the consideration of the Coast Mountains.

The valley is about ninety miles in length, and has a varying breadth from eight to fourteen miles; it is situated between the Coast Mountains and those denominated the Monte Diablo Range, and is bounded on the east by that spur of this range in which the Gabilan is situated.

The Salinas River flows through this plain from the Cadesal Pass in which it has its rise, to the bay of Monterey. The stream for fifty miles of its course follows the western margin of the valley, and crosses the plain for the first time eight miles south-east of the Mission Solidad, after which it becomes more irregular. Three observations were taken at different points, by which it was estimated that the river had a fall of eighteen inches in one and three-fourths of a mile for seventy miles of its course. The bed of the stream is composed of a loose micaceous sand, derived from the granite rocks to the east, and also from the tertiary rocks on its western border, the latter, however, do not enter largely into its composition.

The plain of the Salinas consists of three terraces running through nearly its entire length, thus making three different positions which the river has occupied since the formation of the valley, and its recession from the eastern to its western border where it at present holds its course. These terraces are very regular in their general outline, and impart to the mind an idea that the plain has a uniform grade for its entire breadth, when the point viewed is one or two miles distant. Commencing on the western side of the valley, the lower terrace is found to occupy a breadth of about four miles, and is composed of a rich alluvium; at this point the second terrace rises abruptly to the height of eleven feet, its average width being nearly that of the former; this is also composed of a similar soil as the first, though not in so fine a state of disintegration, or containing so large an amount of vegetable mould. Both terraces support a dense growth of indigenous grasses and plants, thus furnishing an abundant supply of pasturage for stock of all kinds.

The third and upper terrace rises nearly as abrupt as the second, and has a varying breadth from one to six miles, it is more irregular upon its surface than the two former, and attains a higher grading as it approaches the hills to the east; the irregularities of the surface are not sufficient to produce any sensible effect in destroying that uniformity which a view of four miles will give on any part of the plain, and would not be noticeable except in passing over it.

South of the Alisal Ranch, and situated on this upper terrace, are a series of little elevations that continue at intervals of half a mile or a mile through a distance of twenty-seven miles, on the eastern side of the valley. They are symmetrical in form and rise on every side to heights varying from six to ten feet above the level on which they stand; their surface is smooth and even, covering an area from fifty to one hundred yards square. They appear to be composed of the valley and neither rocks or small stones were to be found on any part of them. The first impression received by the traveler on coming up to them, is that they were the work of art, perhaps thrown up by the aborigines to secure themselves from inundation; but when we consider their extent and number, it will be found rather inconsistent with the habits of these people to erect works of this extent; there are no traditions among the Indians of this part of the country respecting the origin of these singularly formed hills.

The causes of their production must remain a secret which future time alone, and the art of man, will eventually unravel. Their irregular dispersion and general uniformity of character indicates an origin from natural causes than otherwise, though it must be confessed that the agents that are active in producing them are not very apparent.

The upper terrace or "Mesa" of the Salinas, exhibits more distinctly the sources from which the superficial covering of the plain has been derived; the soil is harsh and gravelly, and retains moisture but a short time after the rains cease; it much resembles the soils derived from the granitic rocks of some parts of the mining counties; but notwithstanding the sterile features of this "Mesa," it produces the wild oat in sufficient abundance to furnish extensive grazing land, and in the "Encinal" the natural crop is heavy.

The slopes of the hills on the eastern side produce the same grain, but here it is frequently replaced by the indigenous grasses; these latter do not become so general until after passing above the limestone range, and these rocks seem to favor in an eminent degree the growth of the cereal to that of the grasses in this section and south beyond the Chupadero; beyond this the grasses form the principle covering of the hills on the east side of the plain to the southern extremity of the range.

The Salinas has an inclination of eight degrees in twelve miles transversely to its course. The line was projected from the Chupadero and carried through the Carmel Mountains to the sea, and connected with another line which was carried through the Monte Diablo Range and cañada San Juan at a distance of two miles south of Los Muertos, thereby obtaining a sectional profile from the western edge of the San Joaquin to the ocean.

The section thus formed will give the following series, and the order in which they occur. First, alluvium of the San Joaquin, tertiary sandstone containing no fossils, and resting on trachytes; 1200 feet on east ridge, the trap rocks are found, same altitude on west ridge, porous and compact lavas, on the west slope 400 feet above the level of the Arroya San Juan, mountain limestone. Valley half a mile in breadth flanked by calcareous rocks, resting on granite, 1600 feet through to the Chupadero granitic and trapean rocks, 400 feet above Salinas Valley crystalline limestone, valley twelve miles in breadth, ascend one high plateau of sixty-four feet of gravelly alluvium, thence over a high ridge trapean rocks, which are followed by coarse granitic rocks to the sea. The highest ridge is the granitic mountains toward the ocean, and the highest point crossed 2900 feet.

FROM POINT PINOS TO THE NACISMIENTO RIVER.

The Coast Mountains extending from Point Pinos, Monterey, to the northern line of Luis Obispo are mostly primitive; the character of the rocks which form the principle basis of these mountains are best observed about Point Pinos and the town of Monterey; they are composed of a coarse-grained but apparently firm granite, having a bluish grey color where the solid masses have been recently fractured. In some places this granite contains imbedded translucent crystals of felspar, (Adularia) in others it is close grained, and contains but little mica, its disintegration forming a fine white sand but little discolored by iron, and from its brilliancy below the surface of the ocean, produces a most pleasing effect on its waters at considerable distance from the shore. The light-house at Point Pinos is constructed of this rock, and from the appearance of the stone when properly dressed, it is highly probable that if the ledges were properly opened, a good material for building purposes may be obtained and in sufficient quantities to supply all the local demands of this country.

The granite shows itself as an underlying rock for four miles into the interior, from the coast, where it becomes covered with the debris of the sedimentary rocks resting upon it and alluvium, but there is but little difficulty in tracing its course for forty-five miles easterly of Monterey; it becomes more largely developed after crossing the Carmello and entering the mountains on its southern side.

The trend of the Coast Mountains south of Monterey for fifty miles is south 50 degrees east, while the strike of the granite rocks is at an angle of nearly 18 degrees to the line of trend, or in other words cutting the course of the ridge at an angle of eighteen degrees. The granite rocks at Point Pinos are of the same series as those occurring in the vicinity of the Rancho Piojo, and south of the Estella, thirty miles distant from the latter in a southerly direction; the texture of these rocks in these southern localities is more compact than in the vicinity of Monterey, and in some cases are hornblendic in their character. On the east the granite is flanked by an extensive group of the Serpentine formations, which continue south as far as the Mission San Antonio; they constitute the principle part of a ridge running parallel with the granite, and situated between the latter and the Salinas Valley. The country over which the magnesian rocks predominate is easily distinguished from that in which granitic or trapean group is found, by the vegetation incident to both—the serpentine hills being generally destitute of the larger forest trees, and covered with a thick "Chamisal" and stunted varieties of the oak; this peculiarity of these hills is very striking, and cannot fail to arrest the attention of the traveler, either among the Coast Mountains or Sierra Nevada, in passing over them. The talcose and chloritis slates of these mountains were found to be auriferous in several localities, and mining to a considerable extent was conducted in some parts of these mountains during the past summer.

The magnesian rocks cross the Nacismiento River fourteen miles above its junction with the Salinas; on the banks of this stream they appear in the form of massive Serpentine, but assume a schistose structure three miles beyond to the south, and at the distance of six miles the chlorite slates abound. These mountains were not followed beyond this point to the south, but it became evident that the trapean rocks prevailed at the distance of ten or twelve miles farther on, the sharp outline of the higher hills corresponding with those of a similar character observed in other localities.

To the south-east and south-west the mountains were less rugged in their appearance, a considerable extent of a white micaceous granite was found, on which detached masses of sandstone were met with, containing marine shells, also a conglomerate apparently of the same age. The fossiliferous rocks were much disintegrated, and their fossils very imperfect; the species observed were Pectinea and Terredina, and evidently were of the same age as those in the immediate vicinity of Monte Diablo; all the other shells were so imperfect that nothing reliable was to be obtained from their examination, being merely fragmentary in their character.

To return again to the northern part of this range of mountains, and in the vicinity of Monterey, we shall find that the fossiliferous sandstones of this district do not compare in any degree with those above noticed, but, to the contrary, all of the marine fossils of the northern part of the range are found to differ in their character and relative age. On the Carmello this interesting fact may be conveniently observed; the fossils are found in an argillaceous sandstone, about nine feet in thickness, and rests alike on both serpentine and granitic, and has a dip of seven degrees west. It is found at intervals through eleven miles of distance on a course east southeast, and for a breadth of about four miles; this formation, which must be regarded as the Post Pliocene of this country contains imbedded fossils of the genus cancer, with casts of Cytherea, mactra and tellina, all of living species in the adjoining Bay and Bay of Monterey.

From the delicacy of the preservation of these small animals, and the character of the rock in which they are imbedded, it appears evident that it must have been deposited in still water, and was probably an estero into which the tide ebbed and flowed regularly, with sufficient protection to break the violence of the surf upon the coast. After its deposition it had been gradually elevated above the surface of the waters, and subsequently tilted from its horizontal position by the intrusion of igneous rocks in its vicinity.

The cause of its disturbance and inclination is found in the intrusion of a trapean dike which has cut through the granite and clay state, which latter passes into a micaceous schist, and near the contact of the igneous intrusion small but imperfect garnets are found imbedded. The fossiliferous rocks are regularly stratified, and cleave easily in one direction; they are much twisted and contorted nearest the points at which the trapean mass broke through, but become much less curved as the distance increases from that centre. A clay of fine texture and creamy color is found resting on the argillaceous sandstone, and covers a large extent of country stretching to the east of Monterey as far as the Toro Hills; this clay is composed almost exclusively of infusoria, apparently of marine origin; five distinct species have been observed, four of which are dis-coid. It is probable that they have been described either by Professor Bayley, of West Point, or Ehrenberg, as both these gentlemen have had opportunities for the examination of the infusorial formations of this State—and until access may be had to their descriptions, it will be impossible to determine this fact. Specimens have been secured for the State collection, and will be described at the earliest opportunity.

My route next followed a northeast direction across the Toro Hills and Cañada; the first range of high hills on the north side of the Carmello, and which divide the Toro from the Carmel valley, have an altitude of about seven hundred feet; they are composed of a coarse sandstone, containing a few indistinct impressions of shells of marine species; an out-crop of trap was observed among the latter rocks, flanked by granite of the same specific character as that found at Point Pinos, and may be seen four miles southwest of the Toro Ranch. On the south side of the valley an extensive bed of calcareous travertine occurs, and also a breccia of the same character, they cover about one mile of area; no limestone rocks were found in situ in this vicinity; the travertine here observed, evidently had its origin from springs highly charged with calcareous matter, and which were undoubtedly formed in the limestone described on the east side of the Salinas valley, and which dip under the same as described in the preceding pages. From the intrusion of the more recent volcanic rocks in the immediate vicinity of those springs, it is probable they were diverted into another channel, and thus ceased to flow in places in which the calcareous tula is now found. Similar springs now exist a short distance from Santa Cruz, around which the calcareous deposits are very extensive.

Crossing the Toro Valley or Cañada, and following the course of the bay of Monterey, there is little else to be seen than the tertiary rocks for fifty miles, and extending easterly in elevated plateaus and hills for eighteen miles from the coast; among the Chamisal hills frequent intrusions of trapean rocks are met, and in nearly every case where this occurs the granite is also seen broken through by the same igneous intrusions. The sandstone is generally of a buff colour, and yellow-brown, having a greater or less abundance of fossils, in some instances, firm and compact, and again loose and friable; it is almost continuous in a northwest direction, being broken through only by small streams, and is found north of the mission of Santa Cruz, from whence it gradually narrows out, being found immediately on the coast at the base of the mountains.

Beyond this point the principal rocks on the coast are primitive and volcanic, forming sharp, high hills and low mountains with a bold coast line.

SANTA CRUZ MOUNTAINS.

These mountains approach the coast a short distance northwest of the Mission and town of Santa Cruz. They extend from the head of the Santa Clara Valley and Pajaro river to Mount Bruno and Presidio Point west of the city of San Francisco; they are separated from the mountain forming the coast line to the northern terminus of the State, by the Golden Gate or entrance to the bay of San Francisco. The greatest altitude attained in these mountains, is the Black Hill, (Loma Prieto or Umhumín,) the latter being the original Indian name applied to this hill.

The entire range is composed, principally of the primitive rocks, among which the serpentine formations play an important part; this suite was traced from near the Rancho La Brae on both flanks of the mountains, to the Francisquito on the east side, and Anno Nuevo on the west, and belong to the same series as those occurring at Point Lobos and the Presidio. In several instances throughout the range, the trapean rocks have been broken through, as detailed of the mountains south of Monterey.

On the west flank of these mountains, and in the central and northern parts of the County of Santa Cruz, there are views of quartz cutting through the serpentine and other rocks in other places; and is particularly observable on the upper portions of the arroyos Sogell, Syant, and Rio San Augustine. The general rule heretofore laid down respecting the contact of these two groups of rocks in this country is found good in the present case. "That when the two series are found in contact, either as dikes of great length, or smaller views, one, or both is always auriferous." And such has proved to be the fact in the case before us; from all appearances the quartz has been one of the most recent disturbing agents here, as well as elsewhere.

The mineral characteristics of these mountains will be noticed more in detail when speaking of that subject hereafter.

The south-east spur of these mountains terminates at the Pajaro River, thirty-six miles east of Santa Cruz, and fourteen from Watsonville. On the southern extremity are found extensive beds of fossils finely preserved. The arroyo Pescadero and la Brae cut their way through these hills, and their beds abound with boulders containing these organic remains. The fossil sandstone at this point rests on the Serpentine and trapean intrusions, being changed in its texture near the points of contact with the latter rocks. On these streams are to be found several bituminous springs, which discharge large quantities of the fluid bitumen, at times covering several acres of ground. The occurrence of these springs has led to the belief that bituminous coal existed in this section, such, I think, is not the fact in the present case, though it might be a tenable supposition in parts of the world where coal measures exist, or where any of the superior groups of the secondary rocks may be found.

The position of these springs, geologically considered, would render it impossible for coal to abound, as they make their appearance among a mass of rocks having an igneous origin, where not even a lignite is likely to exist. There is but a possibility that the tertiary rocks in the vicinity may overlie some members of the secondary group, from which these springs have their origin, but no outcrop or other indications are to be found which will warrant such a conclusion. There is every evidence that the tertiaries above rest on the primitive and volcanic rocks with no intermediate series between them. The origin of bituminous springs is but little understood; in the present state of our knowledge they are found to arise from the newer as well as the older formations, and alone are not reliable evidences of the existence of coal, except when found among the carbouiferous rocks.

Following the east flank of the Santa Cruz mountains, we find small patches of the tertiary sandstones among the lower portions of the hills, from La Brae to the Llagos Creek; after which they are not again seen for several miles. Near the last named creek, the more recent volcanic rocks make their appearance and continue, at short intervals, for sixteen miles, when we again pass into the primitive formations, which become more metaliferous and particularly in the region about New Almaden in the county of Santa Clara.

North of Almaden, and near the Los Gatos Creek, a bed of recent conglomerate, loose and friable in texture, is found occupying an elevation of four hundred feet above the level of the valley, and having a thickness of about seventy feet, it occurs on both sides of the Los Gatos, and is found, at short intervals, for ten miles, crossing Camels Creek and following its banks for two or three miles; it has been considerably disturbed and large masses have been thrown down. West of McCartyville the mountain limestone occurs in large masses and is continuous for several miles to the west, north and north-west. Extensive operations are now conducted in the manufacture of lime for the market, for which purpose it is admirably adapted. This group of calcareous rocks cannot be less than thirty miles in length from east to west, and has a strike transverse to the line of the mountain range, appearing on the coast at Santa Cruz, at this point it is highly crystalline. These rocks extend north of Camel's Creek about four miles; and a calcareous rock of an amorphous character is found as far north as Sanchez Ranch, in the County of San Francisco. The west flank of the mountains, lying between the San Mateo and a point nearly west of Mission Dolores, was not examined personally, but from the specimens of rocks from that section, which I have seen, their geological characters appear identical with the rocks at the Presidio, which are mostly serpentine.

On Presidio point are to be found beds of a Jaspersy rock having a riband-like appearance, and colors from a greenish hue through red-brown to red and yellow; this rock has been considered by Mr. Dana as a variety of the Prasoid rocks, and as he says—"the graduation of prase into jaspersy rocks exhibits a close relation of both." These transitions were met with in other parts of the country over which he had travelled. In relation to this subject he further says—"From the transitions that occur, it also appears that the jasper and prase rocks are closely connected with the talcose series, and that the translucent jasper and bloodstones of this section are only different varieties of its condition." The jaspersy rocks of San Francisco are worthy of description; the green, red and yellow varieties occur in the same vicinity, they form a series of layers averaging two inches in thickness, and varying from half an inch to four inches; the layers are distinct and separated by open seams, and on the front of bluffs or ledges the rock has a riband-like appearance, the layers coalesce and sub-divide without regularity though uniformly parallel, they are often twisted, and thus change at short intervals from a vertical position to a dip of twenty degrees."

The colors red and yellow are often mingled and sometimes appear as parallel bands; in some instances, the surface is red while the rock is yellow beneath, this may have resulted from the burning of a tree on the spot, for by heat the yellow varieties readily change to red; a small specimen had an agate-like structure as though formed from an aqueous solution.

An impure talcose rock occurs at Point Lobos, which extends east for one and a half miles. The works of the "Mountain Lake Water Company" have been carried through a portion of these rocks, and the masses of serpentine that have been elevated to the surface from the depth of one hundred and sixty feet have exhibited an interesting feature in the history of these rocks. It was found, on examination, that the strong odor given off from these stones was composed of free Bromine and Iodine; it is very persistent, and specimens which have been exposed to the air for nearly three months have not lost their odor.

From the Presidio on the bluffs near the bay, slates and sandstones are found in a much disturbed condition from intrusions of trap; the strata are much contorted and twisted, and tilted in every direction, the inclination varying from five degrees to verticality in very short distances. These rocks, as yet, have presented no fossils in the immediate vicinity of the city, but pass into tertiary sandstone, containing organic remains one mile west of Montgomery Street, San Francisco, where they may be found forming the west point of the North Beach.

South of the city and near Rincon Point, the trachytes appear with small veins of quartz running through them and the adjoining slates; the latter having suffered considerable change in structure near the point of contact with the igneous rocks. Traces of carbonate of copper are observable in this vicinity.

Crossing the Bay of San Francisco from Presidio Point, the rocks on the Saucelito side correspond with the primitive formations above described. The serpentine series continue for several miles up the bay, varying in its mineral characters at short distances. At San Quentin the rocks are schistose, and half a mile beyond, again passes into a massive form, and contains actinolite in fan-like groups of crystals; a mile beyond this, the rock becomes hornblendic, and thence gradually passes into a trap formation, containing well defined crystals of the latter mineral.

On reaching the northern shores of the Bay San Pablo the hills to the north appeared rugged and conical, indicating a preponderance of the volcanic rocks.

The route traveled next, lay through the Counties of Solano and Napa. It has been before remarked that the sand-stone on one side of the Straits Carquinez was identical with that on the other, and the line of dip in both will be found to correspond. These rocks are permeated by minute threads of quartz, and contain considerable quantities of magnetic sand; in some cases the quartz veins acquire a thickness of one or two inches, and have in several instances been found to contain gold, while the sand-stone itself possesses this character in a limited degree; it is contained mechanically in these latter rocks, and in general will be found as a local deposit only. Small quantities of this metal have been found in the stone used for building in San Francisco, which were taken from the quarries in the vicinity of Benecia. It is doubtful whether these rocks would ever warrant mining explorations, except in those locations where the quartz has intruded to a considerable extent. In this case they would prove of sufficient value probably, for mining in the rocks below the sand-stone, and would be governed by the same natural laws that are found to prevail in other parts of the country in relation to auriferous veins.

These sand-stones are found to extend into the interior in a northwest direction, a distance of about eight miles, when they are succeeded by volcanic rocks of recent date for thirty miles in the same direction; the points of contact in the igneous and sedimentary rocks exhibit distinct and striking marks of change in structure among the latter in many places, and it is not uncommon to find trachytic injections into the sand-stone along the line of coast on the bay and straits.

Where these veins are large, the sandstone in contact is often nearly as hard as the trepan rock itself, a true conchoidal fracture, having quite sharp or roughened edges, with a semi-earthly surface, is the result of this metamorphosis. Above this sandstone and resting directly upon it, is a littoral sea-beach, having an elevation of about thirty feet above high tides, and extending for several miles along the coast of the bay. It is composed of fragmentary and entire shells, mixed with a little sand and clay; its thickness varies from one to three feet. Its position is immediately below the alluvium.

It forms a distant white line along the bay coast of San Pablo on its north side for eight miles, and may be seen at the town of Benicia in the vicinity of the sandstone quarries at that place. The shells of which this beach is composed consist of a small species of ostrea, purpura, and other small shells now inhabiting these waters. The elevation of this beach points to a period comparatively recent, when subterranean forces were in operation in elevating the lands adjoining the coasts and bays, which part of our subject will be considered more in detail when reviewing the geological changes which have occurred in the different portions of the coast-line followed.

Among the sandstones of this region is a bed of limestone having an average thickness of two feet; it is found one mile north of the town. This limestone was traced in a northeast direction for two miles, and is probably the same range as observed by Mr. Tyson on the east side of the hills on Suisun Bay.

The foot of the ridge lying between Suisun and Napa Valleys, was followed for twenty miles. At this distance from the bays it attains an altitude of about twelve hundred feet. The rocks composing this ridge are mostly volcanic, with sandstone on their eastern flanks dipping east towards the Sacramento Valley; a few very imperfect casts of marine shells were observed, but none sufficiently perfect for preservation.

The ridge on the west border of Napa Valley presents much the same characteristics as those on the east. These two ridges unite about eighteen miles north of Napa City, at which place they become extremely rugged and elevated.

The highest and most conspicuous peak in this range is Mount Helen; its sharply defined outline and truncated summit shows most conclusively its volcanic origin. A section cutting Napa Valley nine miles south of the town was made, and carried across the Sacramento Valley to the foot-hills on its eastern side, by which the grade of both valleys and the altitude of the hills were obtained.

Before reviewing the geological changes that have occurred in the Sierra Nevada, Monte Diablo and Coast Mountains, a view of that part of the great basin separating the Coast Mountains from the Sierras will be given; and in speaking of the Sacramento Valley, that of the San Joaquin will also be included, and the physical characters of both briefly explained.

STRUCTURE OF THE VALLEYS OF SACRAMENTO AND SAN JOAQUIN.

These valleys form a "single geographical formation,"* stretching from the terminal spurs of the Cascade Mountains at the north, to the junction of the Sierra Nevada with the southern terminus of the Monte Diablo range with the thirty-fourth parallel of north latitude. The length of the valley is about three hundred and eighty miles in length on an air line, with a breadth of fifty miles at its widest point.

The general appearance of the valley is that of an extended plain composed of alluvium, and this opinion would obtain in the mind of any person whose line of travel should lead him over the lower terraces of the plain, or what is denominated its bottom lands. It is only by making a transverse section of this plain that we should be able to arrive at any correct conclusions of its structure, and peculiarities of its formation; by pursuing this course, very distinctive and marked features are observable of different periods of elevation to which this portion of the country has been subjected subsequent to its emergence above the level of the sea.

To arrive at a correct understanding of the formation of the "California Basin,"† we must first observe the rocks which form its borders, their character, position and relative age; and in doing this it will be necessary to pass beyond either of its margins to ascertain the facts on which an opinion may be founded.

On the east side of the basin and at the distance of fourteen miles from its border, we find the first out-crop of the primitive rocks, (granite) on hills attaining an elevation of about one thousand feet above the sea. Resting upon this, we find detached masses of sand-stone, which increase to a well defined formation a few miles to the west; immediately below the latter a bed of slate makes its appearance, having a dip varying from thirty degrees to nearly a vertical position, but as the lower hills are approached, the inclination of these rocks become much less. Below the slate, a conglomerate having an argelaceous cement is found, firm in its texture, with a dip corresponding to the other rocks with which it is associated; the pebbles composing the conglomerate are quartz, jasper, granite and trap; at times this rock is highly ferruginous. The components of the rock are made up from rocks found in the mountains to the east, and must have been formed subsequent to the appearance of the older trapean formations of this part of the country.

Succeeding the conglomerate,‡ which by way of distinction, we will denominate Eocene, another bed of fissile clay slate and aluminous clay

* Col. J. C. Fremont.

† Being similar to the London and Paris Basins, this name will be adopted.

occurs, having a thickness of about one hundred feet; these rocks comport in position with the other sedimentary rocks above them, and are found resting directly on the granite, and other igneous rocks far into the interior; in the lower hills their structure is fissile, cleaving with ease over considerable surfaces, while in the eastern parts of the mountains they have often acquired a crystalline structure from contact with other and more recent volcanic rocks, and such as have broken through and disturbed the primitive formation.

On the western side of the valley or basin, the series do not follow in precisely the same order as occurs on the east; the sandstone and slate of the same age is found, but the conglomerate is wanting; if it exists, it is completely obscured from view, except on the west slope of the coast mountains towards the sea, and its occurrence there is a reason for the supposition that it does exist below the other stratified rocks on their eastern slope. Above all the others, the miocene rocks are found disturbed and cut through by the recent volcanic intrusions of that period.

With this arrangement of the stratified rocks which pass under the California Basin, it is obvious, that the waters flowing at the line of junction between the sandstone and the slate-rocks below them, must pass under the sides and central parts of the valley, varying in depth at the distance from either of its borders increases.

It must be remembered that the dip of the sedimentary rocks on which the alluvium of the valley reposes, will increase or diminish the distance that may be necessary to bore for obtaining water, as the inclination of these rocks is greater or less; and with the view to demonstrate if possible, (or at least approximately) the depth that it might be necessary to sink in order to obtain a plentiful supply of water for agriculture or other purposes, an examination of both borders of the basin was made of fifty miles in length, and the mean of all the dips taken.

It was found by measurement that the surface of the basin rises at the average rate of six feet per mile from the river to either of its borders. Taking the grade of the surface with the lowest average dip of the rocks where they pass under it, (being equal to twelve degrees,) and assuming that the sedimentary rocks decrease in inclination, as the distance increases, which is probably the case, it will be found necessary to reach the depth of 775 feet at the City of Sacramento, in order to obtain a permanent supply of water.

This presumption is based upon the fact that a constant source does not exist above the conglomerate, and this point is selected more for the purpose of exhibiting the greatest probable depth at which a permanent supply of water would be found; the probabilities of obtaining water at much less depths is strong, and amounts to almost a certainty, that water would be found immediately below the sandstone, and above the first slates; in that case the depth would be diminished about two hundred and fifty feet.

If a correct idea of the inclination of the sedimentary rocks is presented in the diagram, we shall have the following depths at different distances from the centre of the basin, on both sides.

At the distance of twenty miles the rolling hills are entered in which springs usually abound.

The rocks on both sides of the valley are arranged in the order in which they occur, as observed by the outcrop.

These rocks included within the Eocene lines are classed by Mr. Dana, as the early sandstone, slates, and conglomerates, to distinguish them from the more recent tertiaries among the Coast Mountains.

The geological structure of this basin was noticed by Mr. Tyson in 1849. He examined it with a view to ascertain whether a deposit of coal might not exist below the surface; and also whether its structure would indicate the means of supplying water for agricultural and mechanical purposes.

In regard to the first question he says: "The first query is answered by the fact of finding the comparatively recent strata of a formation, not older than the eocene and miocene periods, resting immediately on the metamorphic or hypogene rocks of ancient origin, the remaining members with all the sedimentary rocks of older date being entirely wanting, and the coal formation, which belongs to the lower of the secondary series." A coal formation under the basin is therefore out of the question, unless deeply seated, and entirely covered, edges and all, by the sedimentary rocks above noticed.

The character of the soil in many parts of this valley will render it of little importance as an agricultural district, unless water in ample quantities for irrigation can be obtained. (These remarks apply particularly to the upper terrace of the valley on each side of the river.) And we hope that attention may be called to this very important subject of making the extensive areas of the arid districts of the basin available for market and agricultural purposes."

Experience has demonstrated the almost certainty of obtaining water and in sufficient quantities for agricultural and other purposes, in all valleys resting upon sedimentary formations and having a basin-shaped structure, and where the different beds have a degree of uniformity or regularity in their position, and are of a texture that will admit the free percolation of water through the superior beds and sufficiently firm to prevent its escape in those below.

These conditions are all fulfilled in the basin of the Sacramento, and from the united testimony of different observers, we have ample evidence that the sedimentary formations of one side are the same as those upon the other, with the exception, perhaps, of the conglomerate.

The absence of the conglomerate on the west side of the basin, will not affect the result of obtaining water by the means proposed. The clays and clay-slate, below the sandstone, appear on both sides and are sufficiently impervious and firm to prevent the escape of any water that may rest upon them.*

REVIEW OF THE GEOLOGICAL CHANGES IN THE COAST MOUNTAINS AND MONTE DIABLO RANGE.

Having briefly detailed the more general characteristics of the geology of the above mountains, it will become necessary to review in a measure the geological changes that have been instrumental in producing the peculiar features noticed in the preceeding pages; in doing this the same lines will be followed as in the outset.

Starting from the Straits of Carquinez, it has been stated that the rocks forming the borders of those Straits and part of the adjoining bays, were composed of a recent sandstone; in following up these in a southerly direction for a few miles, we find the sedimentary rocks thinning out, and are succeeded by high hills and low mountains of volcanic rocks, composed of trochytes and other intrusive rocks of recent date. These are followed by the primitive rocks, composed of the older trap, and in the vicinity of Oakland, consist in a great measure of serpentine.

The latter rocks form the western side of this part of the Moun * Since October last, there have been three Artesian borings, carried to depths within one hundred feet, on the valley of Santa Clara, and in the vicinity of San Jose. The result of each has been successful, and a head of water from four to nine feet has been obtained. These indications of water so near the surface and in such quantities, will much enhance the value of agricultural land throughout this valley and render available much that would otherwise have laid uncultivated and unimproved for years.

Diablo Range for thirty-five miles, where a district of the recent volcanic rocks is again entered, which continue to the head of the Cañada San Benito and San Juan, for a distance of about eighty miles.

Returning on the Gabilan spur of these mountains, and which form the eastern boundary of the Salinas Plains, the primitive rocks are met with for twenty-eight miles, flanked on the east by the recent igneous rocks of the same age as those appearing at the Santa Anna peaks, twelve miles to the east; (during one of the convulsions that agitated this part of the country, about four hundred feet of the Galiban Peak, on its northeast side, was fractured and thrown down into a deep ravine at its base,) intrusive dikes have had the effect to change the sedimentary rocks when found in contact with the same.

In the Coast Mountains to the west, the granite and serpentine series are predominant, and on these rest the sedimentary rocks, of early and recent date, unchanged generally, except in local position.

Crossing the Pajaro Valley and entering the Santa Cruz Mountains, the main ridge is composed of the granite and serpentine rocks on which rest the fossiliferous formations as those above mentioned. The primitive series extend north into the County of San Francisco, but unlike the formations in the County of Santa Cruz; no tertiaries, containing fossils, are to be found, except in the sandstone forming the point to the west of the North Beach, and here the Pholas and some other shells of present existing species are found. South of the city the trachytes have intruded through the slates, producing considerable disturbance both by uplift and change of structure in the latter; on the north side of the city, similar features are to be seen, but on a more extensive scale; among the deep excavations which have been made about Clark's Point, it is found that the stratified rocks have been tilted from the horizontal position, and in some cases twisted and contorted into every conceivable position; at one time presenting a wave-like form, and in the distance of a few yards, passing from this to high angles or verticality.

Northwest of the Telegraph Hill the active causes of this diversity in the appearance of the rocks is seen. Nearly on a line with Dupont street, and fronting the bay, is a dike of the trap rock, passing up through the sedimentary rocks above. A change of structure in the sandstone in contact with the dike is observed.

This class of rocks (the volcanic) occur at frequent intervals along the bay coast on the west side, and thence into the valley of the Santa Clara. At the distance of four miles south of San Jose they form the low hills that protrude into this valley from the western side, and which are continued at intervals to the arroyo Llagos, a distance of thirty miles beyond.

In none of the lower hills on this side of the valley are the volcanic rocks found in contact with the sedimentary formations, until after passing the above arroyo, and then only after first breaking through fissures in the primitive rocks after reaching the Pescadero.

The intrusion of these rocks among the primitive series is marked by a discoloration of the rock through which the dike has passed, sometimes of several inches in breadth on each side of the volcanic vein; this is more particularly observable where the disturbed rock is of the granite class; in that case it usually presents a brown, or reddish brown color, and is decidedly more given to decomposition than at a short distance from the intrusive material. The slates and sandstones when thus acted upon assume either a sub-crystalline or completely metamorphosed structure, and comport themselves in this particular much in the same manner as similar formations on the west slope of the Sierra Nevada.

The area covered by the metamorphic rocks in the Coast Mountains is not as extensive as those of the mining sections, but the changes, when they do occur, are equally as perfect and complete. The most extensive change of this character noticed among these mountains was that on the Alameda Creek in Sunol Valley, eight miles north-east of the Mission San Jose, and again after crossing this valley on the road to Livermore's. The slates on the creek were changed into a hard, compact rock, for the distance of one mile, and three-fourths of a mile beyond they had assumed a porphyritic character.

Following this series to the right of the road, among the hills which divide Sunol's from Livermore's Valley, the greenstone-trap became largely developed, with basaltic fragments among the drift of the arroyas. On the east side of Livermore's valley the fossiliferous rocks again made their appearance, and continued south for eight miles, beyond which to the south the mountains were not examined.

The classification of the rocks in these mountains according to their relative ages will follow as next in order.

CLASSIFICATION OF THE ROCKS OF THE COAST MOUNTAINS AND MONTE DIABLO RANGE.

Our most northern point in this case will be Bodega Head and a line forty-three miles north of Napa City, and in this case shall avail myself of that part of Mr. Tyson's report on this part of the country, and which is contained in Senate Doc. No 47, 1st Sess. 31st Cong., this being the most northern geological section yet made.

By reference to his section, we find that the primitive rocks occur as far north in the Coast Mountains as the above locality named, and that the rocks of sedimentary origin are found to rest directly on the primitive rocks for a considerable distance east from the coast line.

After reaching eight or nine miles from the coast, the recent volcanic group succeeds the primitive, when the latter is again replaced in the hills bordering the western edge of the basin; from this view of the case it appears that all the rocks of this section are similar in their positions with those detailed farther south.

Commencing with the lowest in order we find:

FIRST.—The granite-series and serpentines; on these rest the older sedimentary rocks.

SECOND.—The more recent volcanic rocks. These are more largely distributed through the Monte Diablo Range. They consist of trachytes and lavas, and have protruded through all other formations that preceded them. These rocks form at least three-fourths of the mountain range extending from Point San Pablo to the head of the Cañada San Juan, beyond which the primitive rocks again occur, and continue to the extreme southern point visited.

THIRD.—THE TERTIARIES. These complete the formations found in these mountains. For convenience of description, this class will be sub-divided into the different periods to which they belong. They will occur as follows:

| PERIOD.        | GROUP.  | WHERE FOUND.                                                                                                                               |

POSITION AND RELATION OF THE VOLCANIC ROCKS TO THE TERTIARIES.

Before entering upon a description of the relations of the recent volcanic group with the primitive rocks, it is thought best to examine their positions and effects, among the sedimentary formations, both ancient and modern; in order to elucidate more distinctly the difference in age, of another group of the volcanic series, which have been described as having been cotemporaneous with those under consideration, and of which there is some question.

The examination of the Coast Mountains has shown us the fact, that those forces on the west side of the basin, which have been instrumental in elevating the range, have had the effect to produce a series of continuous and nearly parallel ridges, throughout the greatest portion of their length; this peculiarity will force itself upon the observation of the traveler if they are crossed at almost any point transversely to their course.

In many parts of this range, the ridges are narrow, and the declivities steep, and the higher isolated peaks are conical. On the summits of these ridges, there are often to be found nothing but bare volcanic rocks which are mostly of a trachytic character; on the sides of some of the hills, which are less abrupt, are to be met beds of sandstones and at times a few slates which from their nature modify and soften the rugged contour of the surrounding country, by their easy disintegration from natural causes.

The sedimentary rocks, as far as observed in this part of the State, are, without exception, of marine origin—the fossils they contain being of that character exclusively.* In some parts of the country they form beds of considerable thickness, and are rich in organic remains. In some parts of the mountains, the shells are of present existing species, not found upon the coast at the present time; these consist of three or four species of the Arca, and one or two of the Pectinea; these rocks are commonly found resting upon the primitive series, though at times on some of the more recent igneous intrusions. It is considered very doubtful by our conchologists in this part of the world, whether the living shells of the above species now inhabit these waters; and yet these imbedded remains are found in abundance on the summits of our hills, removed many miles inland from the element they formerly inhabited.

The fossils of this part of the Coast Mountains, and which now appear to be extinct, consist of three species of the gryphæ, two at least, of Pectinea, Astarte and Cytherea, the species of which will be noticed more in detail in another part of this report.

The position of the miocene rocks in the northern part of these mountains, appears to be directly succeeding the primitive; yet it is found often that they rest upon the trachytes; in all cases that have met my observation, the latter rocks when thus found in contact with the sedimentary group of this period, have broken through fissures in the primitive formations, subsequent to the elevations which occurred during the miocene and middle pliocene periods, or perhaps during the deposition of the latter. The trachytic rocks north of Napa, where they leave the sedimentary group, gradually pass into vesicular lavas, and in these sections considerable quantities of obsidian are to be met with; the Indians in the vicinity of Clear Lake use it for the manufacture of their arrow-heads.

Again, on the shores of Suisun and San Pablo bays, and on the Straits Carquinez, these igneous rocks are found injected into the seams of the sandstone, contorting the strata to a considerable degree. West of these bays the primitive rocks occur at intervals for several miles, and the fossiliferous rocks are found holding the same position as those further north. These alternate intrusions of the trachytic rocks continue south among the mountains on the east side of the Bay San Francisco, and for thirty-five miles beyond its southern extremity; after this they pass into porous lava, and compact masses, ceasing to present any traces of fossiliferous deposits resting upon them for forty miles on this western ridge; after this they again (the fossiliferous) make their appearance in small detached masses, which gradually increase to a well defined formation beyond.

These rocks in many instances are found to rest upon the recent volcanic series direct, and in these cases we find, as may be expected, a corresponding change in their structure, often to an extent that has obliterated every trace of organic remains; while in other cases, where the fossiliferous group has been protected from the more direct influence of the later igneous series by the intervention of any of the primitive formation, the fossils remain very entire and no change in structure is observable, except where the trachitic masses have broken through both.

Among the hills south of Monterey, other evidences of recent elevation from the intrusion of recent igneous rocks are found; and these occur among that group of sedimentary formations which have been denominated as the post Pliocene; (see Table,) these are found on the Carmello Creek, three miles above Meadow's Ranch, where the fine grained sandstone, containing impressions of existing crustacea are found resting upon the granite, but tilted from their former horizontal position by intrusion of recent trap rocks from beneath. This same feature is noticeable north of Monterey, and into the Santa Cruz Mountains, where the marine formations of the Pliocene period are found elevated to different heights above the sea, for miles interior from the present coast line. With these facts before us, it will be impossible to arrive at any other conclusion than that the volcanic series of which we have been speaking, has been continued into a period comparatively recent, and was the active agent in producing those disturbances so manifest throughout those portions of these mountains under our consideration.

An interesting feature in the geology of the eastern part of the Monte Diablo range has been developed during the past season, by the officers of the United States Land Survey, which is worthy of note, as illustrating the mutations which have been going on in different parts of the country, and has served also to fix the age of districts hundreds of miles remote from each other; the marine shells brought into the Survey office by Mr. Von Schmidt, from the hills bordering the west side of the Tulare Lake are found to be identical with those obtained from the Buttes on the Sacramento Valley; among the fossils are found the Arca, of which there are three species, with two species of Cardium, differing from any found in our waters at the present time.

The surveys of the United States Rail Road Exploring Expedition, under command of Lieutenant Stoneman and Williamson, on the desert of the Colorado has been the means of eliciting much valuable information of that almost unknown and desert waste. The personal and attentive examinations of Mr. W. P. Blake, geologist of the exploring party has opened a new field for investigation in addition to those already existing in other parts of the State. The old water line of the Gulf of California has been traced with unerring certainty for a long distance into the interior, and the fossil remains of marine animals and shells are found promiscuously mingled with those of fresh-water origin, which subsequently occupied the place where the waters of the Pacific formerly held undisputed sway. The discovery and demonstrations of those interesting changes in the elevation of the interior of this part of the State above the level of the sea, with its recession from natural causes, reflects much credit on the discrimination, and careful judgment of Mr. Blake, and must be regarded as a great acquisition to our very limited stock of knowledge respecting the absolute condition of that extensive portion of the interior. Among all those who have preceded him in crossing this "Jornada" at different points, not a word of information has been elicited from which not even a probability of its true condition could be gleaned; until the present time it was a blank in the geological history of this part of our continent; how far beyond the line of travel to the east, of where this expedition left it, it may extend, is equally as uncertain as was that portion of the ancient sea-beach, and bottom, over which the United States exploring party traveled the past season. The facts which have been gleaned from this interesting region will appear in the forthcoming report of the expedition, and from what little is now known of their operations, the parties in charge of its several departments have manifested a determination of purpose and assiduity in collating reliable testimony of this hitherto unexplored and unknown waste.

Our present information of this remote section of the State, exhibits in a still stronger light, the mutations to which the surface of the country has been subjected, and which are probably persistent at the present time; to what period the changes of this district are particularly referable will not be known probably until the following year, but enough has already been developed which leads to the inference that the sea has receded since the commencement of the tertiary era.

VOLCANIC ROCKS PRECEDING THE TERTIARY ERA.

On a preceding page it was observed that a suite of rocks which are often confounded with the recent volcanic group, existed in the Coast Mountains, these rocks and their peculiar position will be noticed at the present time.

Following the west side of the Valley of Santa Clara, from the arroyo Francisquito in a southerly direction, a range of low hills, generally barren in their appearance, is found, which protrude themselves into the valley nearly at right angles to its course. The range of hills were examined for the distance of forty miles, and in no instance, I believe, was there a trace of any one of the sedimentary formations to be found upon them. In this particular they differ much from the other volcanic series, either north or south of them, with the exception of those of the Santa Anna range.

Their naked and rugged aspect on the west side of these hills with their peculiar local position leaves but little room for doubt, but that they are the remains of the summit of ancient craters, elevated above the surface of the then existing sea, prior to the deposition of the marine formations which occur in other parts of the mountain range.

This suite of rocks have evidently found their way to the surface through the primitive rocks of this district, as it is found that they cut the latter in several places in the form of dikes, while the debris of both are found to enter largely into the components of the valley in which they are situated. Another evidence, which lends confirmation to this belief, is the fact, that had the emergence occurred at any time subsequent to the tertiary era, we should have seen some traces of such a fact in the elevation of those rocks of aqueous origin. The gradiency of the entire northern portion of the valley Santa Clara will also be found incommensurate with such an extensive series of disturbance as must have occurred at the period when these hills were elevated above the surface. The narrow limits within which they are situated, would have received an inclination much greater than that which the surface now presents, had their intrusion corresponded with those of a similar character found among the sedimentary rocks on every side of them. Our evidence that these rocks hold an age anterior to the tertiaries, rests in part on this fact; that if the change of position, which the latter rocks have suffered in adjoining districts bear any testimony of the maximum of disturbance among them, we should find some corresponding changes of similar character had this volcanic group been of the same age.

In all other parts of the coast mountains, wherever volcanic rocks occur, in masses or dikes, cutting either sedimentary or primitive groups, the evidences of uplift are conspicuous, and either a high uniform grade, distinct undulations, or a terraced form of the valley sections, mark the extent and character of the forces exerted over such areas; while in the case before us, we find the valley adjoining these igneous outbursts maintaining its level to the very base of these volcanic hills. Were there any differences observable in the inclination of the surface of the plain, taken from its northern to its extreme southern point, there would be some reason to suppose that the group under consideration was more recent than the tertiary era.

Passing to the west of these hills, we find the same undisturbed condition of the surface, extending to the base of the Santa Cruz, and you meet with nothing that would in the least indicate any subsequent alteration in the general level until you reach their eastern base; and here, for the first time, a narrow terrace is found, its face rising rather abruptly for twelve feet, and then very gradually for eight feet more, being nearly level from thence to the mountains, a distance of one-fourth of a mile. So little disturbance is manifest in the half formed conglomerate, of which it is formed, that it must be looked upon as having been gradually elevated by forces that have acted equally, and at the same time, on both the older igneous, and recent formations of this section, and the forces that thus gradually operated in producing these phenomena are unquestionably persistent at the present time.

MOST RECENT VOLCANIC ROCKS OF THE COAST MOUNTAINS.

Under this head, a brief description of a class of rocks differing essentially in relative position, lithological character, and general effects on the surrounding country in which they are situated, from those noticed in the preceding chapter, will be given. The section of the country through which they may be observed, has been stated to extend through about forty miles in length of the Monte Diablo Range, and make their appearance in the Santa Anna Picaches, on the south-east border of the Santa Clara valley.

In examining this group it was found, that they consisted principally of compact and vassicular lavas, having different degrees of firmness and texture.

A conspicuous and striking feature of these rocks is found in their connection with other formations, both igneous and sedimentary, and in the case of the latter class they are seen to have acted directly upon them, elevating the same to different altitudes above the sea level. The former rocks form the principal ridge, separating the Pass of Pacheco from that of Santa Anna Pass, (or Cañada Las Muertas), and present a very rugged and conical outline at a short distance. They were probably the grand centre of those recent volcanic disturbances that were in action during the elevation of this part of that mountain range. The higher peaks are composed of trachytic masses, while the lower hills contain immense quantities of the vesicular lavas above noted; from the position which the latter occupy to the former, it appears that during the later periods, when these fires were in action, fissures had been formed in the sides of the two principal craters, through which has flowed large quantities of the fluid masses: one of these dikes cannot be less than eight miles in length and ran in a northerly direction.

At the Santa Anna peaks, the principal crater has, apparently, fallen in during some period of its eruption, and subsequent to this, a large fissure has been formed, probably from the effects of an earthquake, and, perhaps, at the time when the north side of the Gabilan was precipitated into the deep ravine at its base.

North of the latter mountains at the distance of eight or nine miles, is the elevated peak known as "Pacheco Peak," which is a true volcanic cone, and in the ravines to the north of this crater, the Indians of this section of the country obtain obsidian for the manufacture of their arrow heads; to the north-east of the mountain a large dike of lava, similar to that noticed above is found, which appears to have flowed through a fissure very nearly down to the base.

South of the Santa Anna, the tertiary sandstones of recent date appear, resting directly on this class of volcanic rocks, and bear every evidence of having suffered their principal disturbance from these agencies; the almost complete metamorphosis of the sedimentary group is a proof of this; and the evidences of comparative recent action is found in the fact, that the organic remains found imbedded in these rocks contain a large per centage of present existing species on the coast.

It will be apparent that a difference in the age of that group found in the preceding chapter, and the one under consideration will be manifest, from the fact that in the present case the most recent of the aqueous rocks have been disturbed and elevated since their formation, while in the former group of igneous origin, no features of this character are observable. The vesicular character of the group under consideration and the trapean character of the others, is also a distinctive point that would place each in a different period as regards their age; the older group have every appearance of what has been termed the "primitive trapean rocks" found in some parts of the Sierra Nevada, and which could not have held an age but little posterior to the older rocks of the Eocene, as they are found not to have disturbed the middle group of that period.

The tertiary groups of the Coast Mountains consist of the miocene, pliocene, and post-pliocene periods; the eocene rocks being entirely absent as far as yet examined; it is also found that the miocene rocks do not extend on the coast line beyond a point sixteen miles north of Santa Cruz, and that south of this point the pliocene series predominate. This fact then once established affords a clue by which we are able to determine to a certain extent the age of the volcanic series which has disturbed them, and fixes that age posterior to the formation of the latest of the groups.

CHANGES OF LEVEL AND RIVER TERRACES.

The valley sections of this State present a general uniformity of character in their superficial structure, wherever found; their surfaces are distinctly marked by a regular series of minor elevations, which give them the terraced form so peculiar to those sections. The face of these terraces are of different heights, and the surface of each is found to have a gentle inclination toward the streams that flow through them. In some parts of the "great valley" there are to be seen a range of hills having flat summits, which on examination are proved to have been the shores of an inland sea; these usually arise from the higher portions of the upper terraces, and where they are found near the borders of the plain, they present often trifling evidences of excessive subterranean action. These "tables" when found on the immediate borders of the plains, do not appear to have participated in the more violent disturbing forces found in the interior; they are usually from four to five hundred feet in height, while those farther to the east attain an altitude frequently of more than two thousand.

Immediately succeeding these, the first terraces of the valleys appear, and from the observations of different travelers, we learn that they are continuous into the Territory of Oregon, and probably beyond that point; while south of California their existence is known to the northern boundary of the Province of Sinaloa in the Republic of Mexico. In these we see the evidences of gradual and probably persistent elevation over an extent of country nearly two thousand miles in length, and in the present state of our knowledge, must be regarded as part of one of those great continental elevations that has occurred during the comparatively recent history of the world. This State is situated nearly in the centre of this line, and from its position must partake to a greater or less extent in all the general changes of level that may occur on either side of it; and all observations which have been made within the last ten years have only tended to confirm this fact.

Mr. Dana who has given more attention to the formations of the valley sections of the Pacific Coast, and who probably had better opportunities for observation from San Francisco to the north, in speaking of them, says: "We traced these terraces from the Cowlitz to the mouth of the Sacramento, along many of the smaller streams as well as the rivers. There appears to be but two ways of accounting for these terraces, either lakes have existed along the rivers, which have burst their barriers, or the rivers have excavated the country in consequence of an elevation. The existence of lakes throughout a whole country, connected with all its rivers, is highly improbable, and requires for its proof the strongest evidence. Rivers cut out their channels by a gradual process, as a country is raised above the ocean, forming with few exception a complete drainage for the land. Lakes could not exist, therefore, to the universal extent implied by the facts, except, perhaps, as a sudden rise of the land from the ocean.

"The formation of such lakes by an abrupt elevation in a region having the ranges of heights parallel with the coast, is certainly a possibility. But the water to make the alluvial accumulations, must be running water, and be in operation in its channels a long period. And how long would such lakes exist after an elevation? If the violence attending a change of level did not open for them at once a passage, the accumulation of water during a single flood would break a passage through such soft sandstone beds as occur at the mouth of the Sacramento."

These terraces occur on the Sacramento to the distance of one hundred and fifty miles from the sea and at this point they were as high above the level of the river as at any point lower down, and have nearly the same elevation in all parts examined above the existing level of the stream.

The flats are several miles in width, and until reaching Carquinez Straits, no other place for a barrier could have existed. In this place a permanent barrier of at least four hundred feet in height would have been required, to set the water back so as to cover the upper terrace one hundred and fifty miles above the mouth of the river, and in the second place, the lake should have a surface slope like the present bed of the river, for this is the fact with the land of the terrace—of course an impossibility. Wherever the bed of the stream was four hundred feet above the level of the sea, there the terrace should disappear; in place of which they attain an altitude of seven hundred feet at the distance of two hundred and twelve miles from the head of Suisun Bay.*

It is therefore impossible that one or many lakes should accomplish the results we have before us; it is the proper effect of river floods, and the terraces must be received as indicating a change of level in the country.

Was this change of level an abrupt one, or was it slow and gradual? This seems at first, a question easily answered. We may best understand it by considering the changes that would take place during the elevation of a region of alluvial flats. If a country rise abruptly, the river will commence to work itself to a lower level, and proceed with rapidity, ending finally the very gradual slope of ordinary rivers, having a descent of one or two feet per mile. At the same time, in the season of floods the river would wear into the former alluvium (now its banks) and widen its surface; and this widening would go on at each succeeding freshet till the river had a new lower plain on its borders.

But would not the effect be the same during a gradual rise. As the country rose slowly, the excavation of the rivers bed, and lateral widening during freshets would go on gradually with the same results, producing a deeper bed and a new lower flat, both of which would change as the change of level progressed, and in case the lower flat resisted removal in any part, the portion left standing would form a subordinate

*I have in my possession at this time, specimens from this highest terrace, which is found on Weaver Creek, Trinity County. They were taken from different depths of a shaft which has been sunk through the alluvial deposit eight hundred feet; the different strata found though are composed of clay, gravel and sand, in nearly all of which, gold has been found throughout.

A terrace slope may thus be formed by a gradual elevation, and also without any intermission in the process, there might be intermediate terraces in some parts of the same region. A river terrace then, in an alluvial district cannot be considered an evidence of abrupt elevation of country in which it is found, the more especially if a uniform slope is found upon its surface.

The district south of San Francisco in which extensive valleys are to be found comport themselves in all general features with those found on the Sacramento and thence into Oregon. On the south part of the Santa Clara Valley, beyond the ranch of Cruz Cervantes, the terraced form of the valley is clear and distinct; in this place there were but two of these flats observable—that through which the San Benito flowed, had a rise of nine feet above the level of the creek, while the higher terrace to the east rose very abruptly eighty-five feet above the former. The surface level had an inclination of twelve degrees from the base of the Santa Anna Mountains towards the west; the river flowed upon the western side of the valley entirely.

Two successive terraces were found on the Pajaro, the upper one still retains the marks of tide water upon its surface.

The Salinas Valley exhibits the terraced form in a marked degree, and its inclination of surface from the east toward the west corresponds very closely with that just noticed as occurring on the south part of the Santa Clara and San Juan. The number of terraces on this valley are three, and have a varying width of three to five miles, the slope of each surface is gentle and smooth throughout the entire length of the plain. It differs from the Sacramento, or San Joaquin in having but one line of inclination or dip, the others have a dip from each border toward their centre, thus giving them their basin-shaped structure. The slope of the Salinas appears to have been acquired from the recent volcanic agency that formed the Santa Anna Mountains, and those to the north as far as Pacheco's Peak; on examination it is found that the dip of all the sedimentary or stratified rocks of this part of the country correspond in direction, and that the dip decreases as the distance from that centre increases. The Post Pliocene rocks of the Carmello were disturbed at this time, and the entire range of sedimentary rocks of recent date, throughout the Coast Mountains in this section of the country have suffered in a similar manner, and undoubtedly from the same cause.

From the peculiar features manifested in the formation composing the Coast Mountains, as noted in the preceding pages, and the more recent causes of disturbance which have acted in this part of the range, as is found in the modifications of level extending through the valleys above noted, and the intervening mountains between these valleys; it will appear very doubtful that any formation containing mineral coal will be found. The forces that have acted on this part of the country and have elevated the different rocks found on the mountain sides, have as yet developed no member of the secondary series, in which the coal formations are found; but like the mountains to the north, both in the Sierra Nevada and Coast Mountains, nothing above the primitive is to be seen, except the tertiaries, in which no coal beds of extent have yet been discovered.

From a careful examination of this part of the country, with this object in view, I feel no hesitation in saying that coal will not be found in any part of the Coast Mountains south of the thirty-fifth parallel of north latitude; what there may be south of this point, I know nothing having never visited it.

It is not unfrequent in passing over the country to hear of beds of mineral coal; during the past season I have visited four such localities, and, as was anticipated, each of them proved to be merely small beds of lignite, and two of them hardly deserving that name. One of these deposits proved to be but a bed of leaves, having a thickness of about three inches, resting upon a tertiary sandstone containing marine shells, and covered with twelve feet of a sandy alluvium. This is one of those coal beds which has figured so largely in the public prints of the State during the past year, and has induced several gentlemen to pay the locality a visit, and to return as deeply disappointed as their previous anticipations were elevated.

The report of coal veins in the Coast Mountains must be received with many grains of allowance, and at the best, none but tertiary deposits will be found, and these, even should they exist, would be capable of supplying but a limited demand, and that usually of an inferior quality.

SOILS OF THE VALLEY SANTA CLARA AND SHORES OF THE BAY SAN FRANCISCO.

The character of mountains on the borders of valleys, afford a good criterion to judge of the capabilities of the soils found at their base. It is therefore not difficult to form a correct opinion of the constituents of a soil, once knowing the nature of the rocks in adjoining sections, and consequently their adaptation to the various purposes of agriculture.

The more rapid disintegration of some classes of rocks compared to others, will form a striking feature in the productiveness of the soil with which they enter as a component part, their chemical constituents, adapting them to agricultural employment, or rendering them totally unfit for these purposes, without the addition of some agent not found as an integral of their composition. It is therefore not surprising that in passing over a range of valley, or mountainous district, to find so many and diversified features presenting themselves often in adjoining localities; it is not unfrequent to find a perfect transition in the indigenous productions of the soil, occurring in the distance of a few hundred yards.

These peculiar features are best exhibited among the native grains and grasses, and occur alike, on the valley bottoms or on ascending a hill-side. Thus, on ascending a hill, at whose base may be found a calcareous rock, resting on any one of the plutonic series, the native product at the base, and within the direct range of the limestone, may be the wild oat, almost as soon as these rocks are passed, and you enter the granite or trapean group, the cereal ceases to grow, and is replaced by the native grasses in some of their varieties, or if the rocks succeeding the former, should belong to the serpentine group, a useless shrub will often be the resulting growth.

Equally as perfect and marked are the phases presented on the valley bottoms alone; passing through the same transitions as above, and on an examination of the sources from which the soil has been derived, it will be found that the mineral constituents of both sections presenting those changes, will differ in a material degree. Take the upper terrace of any one of our large valleys, and by following this to a lower terrace, the first principal change occurring will be found near the junction of the former, with the latter, and this as it recedes from the former, will be found productive of a widely different and greater variety of plants than the hill-side or upper terrace preceding it, and the native productions of these, not unfrequently disappear entirely.

Another feature equally interesting and instructive, is found in transitions of the varieties of production on the same line of valley, which has derived its soils from the same suite of rocks, this might easily be mistaken for a change in the mineral constituents of such soil, which is not the case, but the modification of growths in this instance are attributable to the more uniform and equal distribution and communication of the material composing the soil, thus rendering its chemical constituents better adapted to assimilation, and the consequent production of variety as well as quality and quantity.

The soils on the Bay San Francisco differ much on its eastern and western sides; both borders of the Bay present the tertiary series, but both do not present the trapean rocks to the same degree of development; this, then, of course, will cause a distinctive and marked difference in the productive capabilities of either shore. It will be found that in all the soils which have been derived, in whole, or in part, from rocks more recent than the tertiary group, that a more extensive and varied adaptation to agricultural purposes will be present; this will be particularly manifest in those sections where the tertiaries, containing organic remains, enter somewhat largely into the components of the soil produced from such sources.

We often meet an extensive and even tract of country lying at the base of a range of hills of the character named above, which are found not to possess so high a degree of fertility as an adjoining section, yet both have derived their soil from the same sources; it becomes not only interesting but important to ascertain the cause of such a discrepancy, and an attentive examination will often point out a natural obstruction of a mechanical nature which has thus been the cause of the impoverishment which may be present. In this case a barrier will often be found among the foothills which has prevented the uniform distribution of the disintegrated rocks above, rendering the plain within its line less productive, rather than the introduction of any new agent, except, perhaps, that derived from the rocks forming that barrier, the amount of which would be inconsiderable, compared to the mass of alluvium beyond.

In illustration of this a single case only will be mentioned. On the Valley Santa Clara a few miles east of San Jose, the mountains are capped with fossiliferous sandstone for miles in extent, north and south.—On examining the slopes of these hills and the broad ravines among them, a rich and deep soil was found to cover the whole, and the vegetation growing upon them bore a just relation to the character of the ground on which they flourished. Passing to the westward toward the valley it was found that the same character of soil continued to the first hills rising from the plain, these bearing an altitude of one hundred feet above its level. On reaching the summit of these hills, the rich, mellow soil to the east instantly gave out, and in its place a heavy, clayey covering was found upon the surface for a considerable distance into the valley; this transition occurred within so short a distance that I was led to examine more particularly the cause producing it, and accordingly followed the line of these hills until an outcrop of these rocks were found; they consisted of aluminous and chloritic slates, having a high inclination and dipping to the west; from their position they presented a perfect barrier to the passage of the richer soil of the hills passing on to the valley in any other junction than north and south. As far as this line of slates extended, the valley beyond partook, in a greater or less degree, of the character that would be produced by their disintegration, and ill adapted generally to purposes of agriculture unless by artificial application of reclaiming agents and tillage. As soon as the slates began to disappear in the foothills, the character of the soil on the plain beyond assumed a different appearance, and a marked and corresponding change in its vegetable productions.

A mechanical impediment simply is the cause of unproductiveness in such cases, and in instances of this kind, the remedy usually abounds in abundant quantities and at short distances from the points where it may be required.

On the south-east shores of the Bay San Francisco, there are large areas of land that at the present time are considered useless for agricultural purposes, from their low position and semi-argilaceous character; they have often been denominated "mud flats," and heretofore have been considered unadapted even to grazing for sheep. These flats generally extend (toward the bay) one or two miles from what are considered available and good agricultural lands. Their general appearance to the passer-by is such as would not be likely to impress a person very strongly in their favor, as lands retaining much fertility, but from their superficial appearance would be regarded as a poor representation only of a salt meadow, productive of little else than the common samphire. But such is not the fact and if experience and experiment have any value or weight, they will be thrown in the balance to the favor of those lands; experiments have been made during the past season on these sections, which cannot fail to convince us of the fact, that the opinions heretofore entertained respecting the available character of a large portion of these districts, are entirely erroneous. A single experiment illustrating their capacity for production if properly tilled, will be given.

Near Uniontown, in the County of Alameda, several acres of land, producing the samphire on their flats, was broken up and planted to corn; in one case it was sowed in drills; the corn continued to flourish until September which was the last time I saw it; and at this time the stalk of that in the drills had acquired an average height of about nine feet. On the south side of the arroya Alameda another field was planted in hills, which was equal, if not superior in height. The soil, when broken up, is rich and highly productive in other grains, notwithstanding the meagre appearance it presents prior to tillage, and will in a few years be as successfully and largely cultivated as any other of the valley sections. The saline lands of the interior sections are also of the same character, to a certain extent, and if properly tilled are equally productive. Near the rancho San Felipe, Santa Clara County, a similar circumstance was met with; the corn grown upon these lands was being harvested in September and produced a full and well-formed ear, proving not only adaptation of soil, but climate—for the production of this staple in California. The latter case, the lands were 225 feet above the sea, and the field on every side except the south-east was covered with a thick growth of the salt grasses and other kindred plants (samphire) and when free from water the lands were covered with a saline incrustation.

Under a proper course of treatment these lands will be made available for the purposes of the agriculturalist, and our already large domain of arable lands thus much increased. The situation of these lands in the interior is such, that they may be easily reclaimed should they ever fall within the jurisdiction of the State, which undoubtedly they will under the law regulating "saline lands." In the counties of San Francisco, Santa Clara and Alameda the wet land that may be made available by drainage is about seventy square miles, exclusive of the "saline lands" at the southern part of the County of Santa Clara.

Most of the valley sections of this range of country is arable land, and that which is not can easily be made so when required; the agents for bringing this about being found in the adjoining hills to the east.—The character of the soil and climate adapts it to all the productions of temperate climates, and where local position modifies the climate of any section, it is found capable of producing plants of the tropical latitudes.

The extreme south-eastern part of this valley would be adapted to the growth of foreign fruits and other products, but it must be beyond the influence of the cold sea-wind that passes inland across the range of lower hills which divide the Salinas, Pajaro, and Santa Clara Valleys, the effect of which would be to blight the fruit, though the plant or tree might continue to thrive.

The low hills that flank the east side of the valley contain all the elements required for the culture of tropical plants and fruits; the climate and soil will be found adapted, and the only agent that appears in the least to be wanting is water sufficient to supply the demands of those plants. From the appearance of small lagoons and rivulets at different elevations it is presumable that a sufficient quantity of this agent may be found a short distance below the surface.

As a general rule the mountains lying upon the east border of the valley Santa Clara are covered with a soil superior to that of the plains, and of much greater depth. I have measured the depths of these soils in many places, and where it is well developed have found it varying from four to eleven feet for miles continuous; its extreme fertility produces heavy crops of the native grains and grasses which annually contribute to its increase by their decomposition.

Although these lands are situated within the reach of the sea-breeze from the Bay of San Francisco, they are protected from its cold by the slope of the hills and the modifications of its temperature acquired in its passage down the bay before reaching the northern portion of the valley. So much is the temperature increased that an addition of ten degrees is often acquired in its transit from San Francisco to the head of the valley, a distance little rising fifty miles. This increase of temperature in the air is accompanied with an increase in its capacity for moisture, hence it is usual to find a slight aqueous haze, which results from the condensation of its moisture, hanging about this entire range of hills during the summer months, and is usually seen early in the morning.

At this time and for a short time after sun-rise the leaves of plants in these hills are covered with moisture, when no trace of this deposit is observable on the plains. The foreign horticulturist seems to have seized upon the natural advantages which these mountains present for the culture of the vine and other fruits, preferring these elevated situations to the lower plain lands, the climate and soil being more congenial to their growth. The altitude at which the first qualities of the grape will flourish in these mountains (Monte Diablo Range) is seventeen hundred feet above the sea, the fruit produced equals that grown in lower situations; the temperature at this elevation through the night is higher than on the plains at their base and sufficiently comfortable to sleep without shelter.

But a very few years will elapse before these "barren" mountains will yield a handsome income to the planter, and a large revenue to the State, from the taxable property that will be found in these mountains, arising from the production of the vine alone; some idea of the extent to which it is now being propagated may be obtained when it is stated that nearly two hundred thousand sets have been put into the ground during the past year, and on one ranch alone over twelve thousand new sets were placed in the ground last season, in addition to those already in bearing condition on the same farm.

The absence of timber in these mountains is one of the most serious objections to the settler, if this objection can be removed there is no reason to doubt but that large tracts of this fertile district would command a population that would soon approximate that on the plains. It would not be difficult to produce a forest growth of trees upon these mountains, one that would prove useful as well as ornamental, conducing to health, comfort and luxury, as well as profit. The history of the Guava furnishes us with some facts on this point that are well worthy of notice; the tree is of rapid growth, spreading itself over large districts in a very few years. In Mexico it attains a height of forty feet, and grows at elevations of five thousand feet; its wood is used for fuel and many other purposes, and from its fruit the guava jelly is manufactured, and forms an extensive article of commerce.

Fifty years ago this tree was introduced at the Sandwich and Society Islands; it has in that short period of time formed one of the principal forest trees of those islands, and reaches the summit of their highest hills. A tree of this kind introduced into our timberless hills would in a short time render the barren aspect they now present, more pleasing and profitable as well as useful. There can be but little doubt that this tree will flourish in this country, as it is found so to do in a climate equally cool as that in which it would be required here. Other varieties of fruit bearing trees of foreign climates will flourish in these mountain; among them may be mentioned the date, prune and fig, and in this country we possess an advantage in the preparation of the two latter fruits for the market, which is seldom found even in countries where they flourish best, viz: a clear, dry air, or containing but a small degree of moisture, a most essential requisite in forming a good commercial article. Often the entire fruit crop is ruined in the drying process in countries where these fruits abound, (and where all conditions for their propagation are not more fully developed than in this country,) from the presence of too great a quantity of moisture in the air, a circumstance that cannot exist in this country south of the county of San Francisco.

We have the most ample proofs of the capabilities of our soils in the interior, in the production of the foreign fruits. In addition to the above, the olive and the almond flourish and produce plentifully, and though the latter is not indigenous, the luxuriance with which it grows and its plentiful production of fruit, must be received only as another evidence of the fact above stated. The value of these fruits as regards their quality, suffers no deterioration from having been naturalized to our climate, but in the case of the latter named fruit, it is found to be materially benefitted by the change, for as it loses none of its flavor it becomes the more valuable from its increase of size, being nearly double that of the ordinary fruit of the market.

Respecting the main body of lands on the valley and shores of the bay, but very little of which is not adapted to agricultural purposes, it may be said to cover an area little short of six hundred square miles, nearly all of which is well adapted to the cultivation of the cereals and root crops. The higher table of the valley produces excellent corn, and the season though dry permits this crop to mature well. I observed several corn fields on the high terrace of the valley last season, flourishing well at altitudes of three hundred and sixty to four hundred and ten feet, and in localities where it would hardly be supposed from its external appearance, that moisture sufficient to rear a blade of grass could be found. The cause of this productiveness in these localities, is in a great measure attributable to the existence of a small quantity of sulphate of lime in these apparently dry soils, derived from a limestone formation in these mountains, and which extends south beyond the Almaden district. The detritus of this rock is found mingled with fragments of other rocks containing ferruginous pyrites in a decomposing state, hence the key to its appearance in this locality, and in the case before it serves the purpose of an absorbent of moisture, thus materially facilitating the growth of crops in these sections.

VALLEY OF THE SALINAS.

This valley is situated south of the Pajaro River, and is separated from the Santa Clara by a spur of the Monte Diablo Range which sink into a range of low hills forming a divide between the former and the Pajaro Valley also. The length of the Salinas is about ninety-five miles. The main course of the valley is about south-east by east; and is bounded by one river (the Salinas) for its entire length. The stream is situated on the west side of the valley for the first fifty miles of its course, after which it crosses the valley a short distance above the Soledad Mission, at an angle of forty degrees to the main axis of the plain. The physical appearance of this large plain differs much from that of the Santa Clara or the Pajaro; when viewed from its centre it has a gentle slope from the east toward the west; but more minute examination exhibits a terraced form to the plain, similar to those observed on the Sacramento, and are three in number, and each possessing a soil of different degrees of fertility and value. The river has a fall of about two feet to the mile, and has acquired its present position within a very recent period, running as it does amongst the most recent tertiary rocks, and alluvium in its more northern portions. Near its sources there are several small streams putting into it, which furnish water throughout the year. The bed of the stream is composed of a fine whitish quicksand, which renders it dangerous to ford at times, and it is seldom attempted, except at localities which are used for this purpose. A large portion of the valley, within eight or ten miles of the coast, and on its south-east border and centre, is made up of low wet lands, covered with willows and tule, these terminate in lagoons and sloughs as they approach the coast, and contain a sufficient depth of water to float a medium sized vessel to the Bay of Monterey. The only obstacle that renders these waters innavigable for some distance into the interior of the valley, are the bars of drift sand which are thrown up by the surf on the coast: a good and substantial breakwater, constructed at some one of these points, would render navigation safe, and materially enhance the value of the public and private property of this section of country, and be the means of affording not only much needed facilities of transportation in the productions of the interior to market, but afford inducements for the permanent settlement of this immense tract of country (now almost, it might be said, uninhabited and unimproved,) which this, or some other equally efficient measure would be the means of consummating in a short period of time. The extent of land in the interior that would be affected by a measure of this kind would be very great; it being not less than one hundred and fifty miles in length, and possessing capacities for agricultural production equal to any in the State. This will appear the more evident and necessary, when we find that the lower bottoms above the Salinas Valley are capable of producing a wheat crop, (at thirty-two bushels per acre) sufficient to meet the demands of a population numbering three times that of the present within this State:—say nine hundred thousand.

A district of our State presenting capacity and advantages of this character, and crippled as it is for the means of transporting its productions to our markets, should command some attention, and such, at least, as would have a tendency to induce an early and permanent settlement of such lands, if nothing more; and this the more especially as a considerable area of the over-flowed and saline lands of these plains must ultimately fall within the jurisdiction of the State.

SOILS OF THE SALINAS.

The soils of this valley have been derived from the primitive formations on both sides of the plains: that derived from the granite series on the coast side is coarse and easily permeable to water; this obtains more particularly in the vicinity of the Gabilan mountains, and this variety of soil does not extend beyond the high "mesa" on the eastern side. The trapean rocks and limestone of this range exert an important influence in modifying the sterility usually attendant on soils derived from the detritus of the granites, and in this case they exist in sufficient quantities to render those soils productive on the upper terrace of the valley. The productions of each of these terraces differs in a material degree, arising principally from two immediate causes; the first moisture, the second, the finer disintegration of the material composing the soils; to these may be added a third, which sometimes exerts a wide influence on the lower bottom. The upper terrace produces the native wild oat for the most part, or a wiry tough grass; the oat flourishes to the exclusion of the latter on a brown red soil composed of loam mixed with the harsher material derived from the granite, and wherever this loamy matter is found to diminish in quantity, a corresponding increase in the native wire grass is found. This rule was found to hold good in the entire length of the plain on its eastern border.

Passing to the second terrace, plants of a different character are found. The oat is found to a considerable extent on some parts of this, but is usually succeeded by another variety of grass which seems much better adapted for feed to animals, and usually grows very thick and matted; among this the common bargrass, which increases in quantity as the lower terrace is approached, and which animals are extremely fond of eating, in preference to the oat when placed side by side; on the western edge of the second terrace, the wild mustard abounds, covering thousands of acres, and growing to the height of ten to fourteen feet, forming an impenetrable jungle to man or beast for miles in extent; wherever the settler has succeeded in eradicating this article from the soil, it has been found to produce abundant crops of grains or roots, and if anything superior in some cases to the lands of the lower bottom. The lower part of the terrace on which the mustard is usually found in greatest quantities, is sufficiently moist for the propagation of any crops that may be necessary to be placed upon them. Water is obtainable within a few feet of the surface on any part of it.

Passing to the lower terrace, we find the principal native productions to be the burgrass and a variety of the rumex, mingled with a much greater variety of others than is to be found on any other part of these bottoms. On the higher positions the mustard also abounds in considerable quantities. Some parts of this terrace are arenaceous, being covered to the depth of two feet with a loose, fine sand, usually the result of a heavy freshet, and not otherwise. In this is found a third cause for the varieties which these bottoms produce. An interesting exhibition of this occurred from the freshet of last winter, on the Castro Ranch, adjoining the Wacional. At this place about three hundred acres were covered with this sand to the depth of two and a-half feet; on a portion of it a fine field of corn had been raised the previous year, also wheat and barley. The land formerly produced a heavy growth of mustard, but was reclaimed from this in part by tillage. The effect of the overflow was to destroy every vestige of former vegetation, and in its place a thick growth of willows had sprung up that were equally impenetrable with the mustard on the plains. At the time I visited them they had attained a height of about four feet. This immense deposit of sand on the arable land of this part the lower bottom is covered by the obstructions on the beach of the coast to the free egress of the waters from the interior during freshets, and until they shall be removed, some of the best lands of this valley will be constantly subjected to this ruinous result in all coming time.

The amount of land liable to be thus buried beneath this arenaceous deposit is great, and as it comprises a large part of the most valuable property in this section of country, it demands consideration.

The quantity of arable lands contained within the Salina Plains, is estimated at about seven hundred and eighty square miles, this being comprised in the lower terraces only; the upper terrace cannot strictly be considered as available for agriculture, but it more properly a grazing country with very few exceptions. The above quantities are divided as follows: the lower terrace or river bottom contains three hundred, twenty miles, and the second terrace about four hundred and sixty, and enjoying a climate in its different sections which will be found adapted to the growths of the extremes of temperate zones.

PAJARO VALLEY.

This valley is situated on the coast, and is bounded on the north and east by the southern part of the Santa Cruz Mountains, and on the south by the low hills forming spur of the Gabilan Range, and which divide it from the Salinas Plains. The valley is about eight miles in length, and about four in breadth on an average, exclusive of the foot hills, or low, table hills, on its west border; the Pajaro River forming the boundary of the counties Monterey, Santa Cruz, Santa Clara, has its rise near San Felipe, and flows in a westerly direction through the low hills at the base of the mountains, thence along the northwest border of the valley for about two miles, where crosses the latter within about a quarter of a mile of the town of Watsonville, and reaches the sea at a point south ten degrees west of the latter locality, four miles distant.

This plain is of comparatively recent formation, and formerly was a well-sheltered bay of the sea; the sandstone formation in the hills to the north and east are of the same age as that now forming the coast line between it and the town of Santa Cruz, the fossils of which of present existing species; the forces that were instrumental in elevating this section have been gradual, as is evinced in the highly disturbed position of the sedimentary rocks along the coast for thirty-five miles; in these localities, it is difficult, in some instances to detect any inclination of the strata whatever, and it is only in the mountain sections that this disturbance becomes markedly manifest; the uplift of this entire section has taken place since the rocks on which the tertiaries rest assumed assumed the solid state, as no instance of change in the structure of any of these rocks is apparent at the points of contact. The under-lying rock is primitive and of the granite class, and this continues for eighteen miles north of Santa Cruz. In this valley and also in the vicinity of Santa Cruz the soils are made up of a mixture of the primitive and sedimentary formations, thus rendering them fertile and easily tilled. In the lower lands the soils are much better developed, yet the hilly lands are capable of producing abundant root crops and grains. The cause that render these hill-sides adapted to agriculture is the same as that found on the high terrace of the Santa Clara, viz.: a quantity of sulphate of lime acting as an absorbent, and retaining sufficient moisture to support a healthy nutrition in the plant.

The entire range of hills lying between the Pajaro and south part of the Santa Clara, and also a large portion of that range between the Salinas and Pajaro are well adapted to cropping, particularly for winter grains, and in some instances they are preferable to the valley lands, and would, if brought under cultivation, produce better crops than the plains; they are also much better adapted to the culture of fruit-trees than valley sections, possessing all the elements of which the valleys are composed, and which render them fertile, they possess the advantage of sheltering the young tree from the effects of the strong winds that pass over these sections from the sea, and also its chilling effects on the young blossoms and fruit.

There is no part of this State that I have visited, which possesses the same natural advantages for fruit culture as are to be found in the district above alluded to; while artificial irrigation is necessary in other parts of the State, in order to sustain the vitality of the tree; this is furnished regularly each night by aqueous exhalation from the ocean, and extending some thirty miles into the interior; during the months of July and August, last summer, an opportunity to observe this part was offered, and I found that over this entire section a sufficient amount of moisture was deposited each night to wet the leaves of plants very sensibly, and during the heavier fogs, a quantity sufficient to keep the ground wet under medium sized trees until near mid-day; a person entering this section of country in the morning would suppose from the appearance of the ground that a light rain had occurred during the night, and it was not unfrequent that I was obliged to dry my blankets in the morning previous to saddling my horse.

The soil is equally adapted to their propagation being of texture that will permit the expansion of the roots below the surface without the necessity of sinking deep into the earth, as is the case in many parts of the country, where even the most hardy indigenous trees are found to send their roots to great depths in order to obtain nourishment and support for the trunk. It is surprising that with the advantages presented for the cultivation of American fruit-trees in this section of the State, that so little attention has been given to this subject in this vicinity; heavy losses have been sustained by individuals in attempting to rear trees in many parts of the country, and this has, in a great measure, prevented others from embarking in this enterprize; but in most of those cases where failures have followed the attempt, it has been from a soil illadapted to their propagation, or in localities where floods have had the effect to destroy them.

These injurious influences are absent here, and there is every thing that can be desired to invite the pomologist in this ornamental and useful enterprize.

Fruit culture is to form an important branch in the industrial pursuits of this country; the lands best adapted these purposes in other localities than those mentioned, are to be found in the south and middle portions of the County San Francisco, from the San Mateo to the Francisquito and toward the foot of the mountains to the west. North of San Francisco, the upper portions of Napa Valley and Sonoma are equally as good as those of some parts of the county of Santa Cruz, affording much the same general characteristics as those of the latter county.

LIVERMORE VALLEY.

This valley is situated in the central portion of mountains lying east of the bay San Francisco and valley Santa Clara; it divides these mountains into two distinct lines of ridges, and runs rather obtusely to their course. The different names that are applied to this valley convey the idea that there are as many distinct valleys, but such is not the case, as no hills intervene to destroy the general level throughout its entire extent. From its extreme north to its extreme southern terminus the valley is about sixteen miles in length and from five to seven in breadth. On the north it is bounded by Monte Diablo and its adjoining hills, separating it from Pacheco Valley; on the east by a single high ridge separating it from the plains of the San Joaquin; on the south by the hills near the northern part of the Cañada Corall, and on the west by the high ridge separating it from the Bay San Francisco. A large portion of the northern centre of this valley is occupied by a lagoon filled with tule, and the latter extend for a considerable distance from its borders.

The soil of the valley is generally good on the borders, but toward the centre it is either wet and heavy and withal somewhat saline, on the higher parts dry and gravelly. The entire district appears much better adapted to grazing lands than to agriculture, unless water for irrigation is obtained through artesian borings, and from the appearance of the valley there is but little question that an abundant supply is obtainable from these sources. The altitude of the valley is four hundred and thirty feet above the sea; and derives the principal portion of its supplies of water from the slopes connecting with Monte Diablo. On the south and southwest sides, among the hills, considerable masses of the metamorphic rocks are to be seen, and the appearance of quartz veins is more frequent in this vicinity than in any other section of these mountains that were observed.

On all the hills that surround this basin, are to be found fossiliferous sandstones, and among the alluvium, in some localities, are to be found considerable quantities of fragmentary shells, among which a large Gryphaea has heretofore existed in considerable quantities. Some specimens of the latter fossil are to be found in the office of the U. S. Land Survey, but none that were sufficiently perfect for cabinet specimens could be obtained at the time I visited the locality from which the above specimens were taken. These monstrous bivalves retain the animal in a petrified state most perfectly preserved, and it is evident from their distribution and appearance that they must have been elevated above the surface of the waters during life; the evidence of this exists in the fact that nearly every shell contains the animal, which if they had been raised above the surface after life had been destroyed the probabilities are that very few animals would be found.

The route from this valley to the San Joaquin plains lays through a narrow pass emerging from the southwestern side of the valley. The pass retains the name of the valley into which it enters, and is about sixteen miles (inclusive of that part of the valley through which it passes,) in length: at this point you enter the San Joaquin Valley at a point known as the Elk Horn. The house at this place is two hundred and twenty feet above the sea. A gentle rise of the land occurs here for about half a mile, and then the valley slopes gently towards the river. The road to the river follows the course of the tule bottoms for about twelve miles, and then enters an Encinal of oaks, which continue to the river.

One of the chief points of interest in this vicinity is the extensive area covered by tule; they commence near the junction of the river and Suisun bay, and extend to a point about eighteen miles south of Castoria on the west side of the river; having an average breadth of about twelve miles. From the appearance of the country in which they are situated, I had formed an opinion that a large proportion of these lands might be easily reclaimed, and if so, they must ultimately become valuable property. With this view the altitude above the sea was taken in several places, on my return to the mountains to the west, and the average of those results gave the sum of eighty feet above tide level. Should it prove that this level is maintained to any considerable distance and the general character of those lands favor this presumption, or should there be a depression to the amount of twenty-five feet from their border to their centre, which is rather improbable, there will still remain fifty-five feet fall to reclaim them by drainage.

If properly drained, these lands could be applied to the culture of rice or other vegetable productions, and judging from the character of the soils immediately about them, they would prove highly prolific. And here in passing I will mention one incident in relation to the capacity of the soil for production, that may prove not only interesting but useful, in illustration of erroneous opinions heretofore expressed relative to lands on the San Joaquin Valley, and which perhaps has exerted as great an influence in preventing the permanent settlement of these plains as perhaps anything that has been urged against them. Toward the foot-hills of the mountains to the west, is a low table of the valley apparently destitute of water, either for the support of vegetation or animal life, in some parts this land has a slight gravelly appearance, but this is not general; on one ranch situated on this plateau there has been two full crops of barley harvested from the same piece of ground, and when I visited this place in October the third crop was then being harrowed in; the whole having occurred within the term of two hundred and seventy-three days.

As soon as this fact became known, settlers were soon found to be on their way thither, and at that time there was not a farm to be found vacant for a considerable distance around. There is no reason for the supposition that land on the west side of the river and toward the mountains is unsuited for cultivation, for the fact before us is a sufficient proof to the contrary.

Having noticed the more general characteristics of the geology of that part of the country embraced in the examinations of the past season, and also their more general adaptation to the industrial departments of agriculture, it now remains to speak of their resources and the uses to which they may be applied.

MINERAL RESOURCES OF THE COAST MOUNTAINS.

The minerals of these mountains are widely dispersed throughout their entire extent; they consist principally of copper, iron, lead, silver, gold, mickel, and antimony, with agates, calcedony, and many others too numerous to mention here, but will be found under their proper head.

The metallic minerals are widely distributed; the ores of copper are found in the form of carbonate, sulphuret, and silicate, among the Santa Cruz Mountains; in the vicinity of Rincon Point, south of San Francisco, it is found sparingly disseminated among the trap and metamorphosed rocks of that section. In the mountains, south of Monterey, it is also found over a limited area, and again in the lower hills on the east side of the Salinas Valley, near the Rancho Alisal. At this locality it occurs in an extensive quartz dike that has forced its way through all the other rocks both igneous and sedimentary; the forms in which it appears are the blue and green carbonate, in crystals, the sulphuret, the latter found in small masses detached from the gangue. In the same rocks is to be found considerable quantities of iron pyrites, generally disseminated and containing a small quantity of gold. The above ores of copper are often met with in these mountains, their occurrence over so wide a range and the trapean rocks with which they are so often associated leads to the belief that at a future day they may be found in sufficient quantity to be profitably worked.

SILVER.—In the county Monterey, this metal occurs in the form of argentiferous galena (or lead and silver) this mineral is found in the primitive and transition limestone abounding in this section; it is found in small veins and disseminated; the range in which it occurs, extends from the Gabilan Peak to the Chapedero on the south, a distance of twelve miles inclusive. The limestone in which it is found, and the granitic rocks adjoining have been disturbed by the intrusion of trapean rocks to the east, and from the opportunity that was offered for its examination it dips under the valley of the west at a considerable angle. A cross-cut has been driven from the west side of the hill for the purpose of intersecting the line of the view, but was abandoned before reaching the limestone. A shaft has also been sunk on the vein to the depth of fifty-five feet, and at the bottom the granite had been reached, an opportunity was presented in the level from the bottom of the shaft to make an examination on its line of strike, and from all that could be seen, (as there had been much caving in of the walls) it is evident that the metallic vein is confined to the calcareous rock, as no vestige of it was to be found in any part of the granite below it.

At one point the decomposed vein showed a power of four or five inches for two feet in depth, this was followed down to the granite, and at its junction all traces of the vein ceased to exist. It is not improbable that a well defined sett may be found under the valley, but it will require much exploration and expenditure of capital to determine that point, as mining operations cannot be entered upon with small means and ultimate prospects of success.

Traces of this mineral are to be met with for several miles north and south of this locality, and its distribution over so wide a range of country induces a belief that a profitable vein may yet be found in these mountains.

IRON.—This metal is found in almost every variety of form, from one end of the Coast Mountains to the other, the prevailing mineral however, is the peroxide and protoxide of this metal; the latter is often found in the form of hydrate, and when occurring in proximity to serpentine rocks often found to be more or less auriferous. This mineral is largely developed in some parts of the auriferous district of Mariposa county, and from one of the most valuable receptacles of gold among the gold-bearing rocks of that section.

SULPHATE IRON.—This article known in commerce under the name of "Copperas," is found native in large quantities near the town of Santa Cruz. Its principle had occurred a short distance west of the house of Mr. Medor in a gulch running from the mountains through the low hills to the coast. I followed the course of the ravine from where it enters the high hill near the crossing of the road north-west of the town to near the sea, the average depth of its banks varies from fifteen to thirty feet, its length from the hill to the coast being about two miles.

The copperas formed an efflorescence on the sides and bottom of the ravine covering entirely the earth and stones, on which a great quantity had crystalized; it was not difficult to scoop up a pound or more, at any one of these places; the banks of the ravine above the water were covered with the effloresced salt to such a thickness that a white and green color was given for several yards in length, the ground being entirely obscured. The depth of the earth that was thoroughly impregnated with the salt, would average ten feet for the whole length of the ravine the depth to which this descends below the surface is unknown, but it is probably considerable; the rocks at the bottom are a micaceous schist and were broken into for two or three feet and at that depth seemed as strongly charged with the ferruginous salt as at the surface. A small stream of water runs through the gulch which is permanent throughout the year, and carries a sufficient quantity to answer all the purposes of an extensive manufacture of this article for commerce. It would be difficult to find a locality that combines the same advantages that this does for the manufacture of sulphate of iron; all that is necessary to be done has been performed by nature, and to extract the salt it is only necessary to erect vats upon the coast and shovel the earth, to be leached, directly into them. An area of several square miles is highly charged with the mineral and the day is not far distant when Santa Cruz will become as celebrated for the manufacture of this article as it has been heretofore for its vegetable productions.

MAGNETIC IRON.—At the distance of two miles north-west of the above locality, an extensive bed of magnetic iron occurs, running down to the coast, at which point it crops out and exhibits a depth of several feet. Toward the mountains I have been informed that it again shows itself above the surface in several places; there is every reason to believe that it underlies an extensive district, as much difficulty has been experienced in obtaining correct courses by the compass; in one instance the needle was deflected to thirty-one degrees on approaching its southern edge.

GYPSUM.—Sulphate of lime is reported to abound in the northern part of Santa Cruz, and in the vicinity of the Palo de los Yesca, some six miles from the Mission; it was frequently spoken of by the inhabitants of this place but I was unable to learn its precise locality. It is not improbable that it does abound in this vicinity, as ample material for its formation exists in this section of country. An extensive bed of mountain limestone occurs in close proximity to the native sulphate of iron alluded to in the former paragraph.

CINNABAR.—Has also been reported to have occurred in this vicinity. I found one small piece east of the San Lorenzo on the side of a hill, but it is not impossible that it might have been carried there by human means, as no other mineral of the same character was observed; the occurrence of small detached pieces of cinnabar in these places is not sufficient evidence to found a belief that it occurs in situ, or that a deposit may occur there.

NIKEL.—The ores of this metal are found from Contra Costa on the north to the utmost southern limit reached in the Coast Mountains. It occurs in the primitive rocks, associated with chronic iron in almost every case where the latter may be obtained. It appears as a bright green mineral on the fractured surface of the other ores, and is known in technical language as "nicked green." The scarcity of this metal renders the discovery of its ores in this country an object of some importance, and its wide distribution leads to the belief that it exists in sufficient quantities to warrant investment for its extraction from other ores, at no distant day. It is extensively used in the manufacture of German Silver for wares and household utensils. When reduced, the metal is white, much resembling silver in its general appearance, and for which it has been mistaken in this country. The principal localities where it has been observed this season are at Contra Costa, in the ser-serpentine rocks south of Tulecita and near San Antonia in the county Monterey, among the large beds of chronic iron from the San Benito, and the Panoches, of the Gabilan range. These localities afford the largest amounts yet found in this State, and it is to be hoped that those explorations which are now in progress in this part of the country may result in the development of this mineral to a much greater extent than yet known.

GOLD.—This metal has been found in the Coast Mountains, from the County San Francisco on the north to Luis Obispo on the south. The slates and serpentine formations which have been noticed in the preceding pages of this report are found to be receptacles of gold here as in the Sierra Nevada; these rocks are extensive in the Coast Mountains, often comprising an entire ridge for miles, they are usually flanked by the granite. During the past summer, the placers in the County Santa Cruz were much worked; the gold found here was principally on the San Lorenzo and its tributaries; it was fine, and much resembled that found in the Caoti Hill, near Nevada; under the glass it had all the appearance of having suffered but little from attrition by water, the surface of the grains being rough, as though just detached from their original matrix. The slates and serpentine rocks occur on both sides of this creek, with small veins of quartz running through them, and from what we know of auriferous districts of this and other countries, the presumption that gold in situ exists here, amounts nearly to a certainty.

On the upper portions of the Carmello, in the county Monterey, gold is also found, in the immediate vicinity of the Rancho Tulecita. Farther to the southeast, near the head waters of the creek, it is also found on the tributaries of the main stream, that flow from the western ridge of these mountains. On the Francisquito, a tributary of the Carmello, coming from the southwest, and twelve miles from the coast it is also found near the house of Barondo. Three or four Mexicans were working with the battaya at the time I passed that ranche. The serpentine rocks are largely developed on the east flanks of the granite ridges, and from their course they may be considered as forming the northern part of a series which occurs at the Mission San Antonio fifty miles south.

I was informed by Mr. Meadows, who has traversed the interior of these mountains probably more than any other man in this part of the country, that the same class of rocks are found throughout the distance inclusive between the Carmello and the above Mission. Near San Antonio there were several persons at work during the past summer, in the placers in this vicinity. This was no new discovery, for the existence of gold at this locality has been known since 1850. Those at work at this place were mostly Mexicans, and while traveling on the Salinas I frequently met companies of five or six, with their camp material and tools, wending their way to this section.

On the Pescadero Creek, a tributary of the Pajaro River, gold was found during the past summer; it was first observed a short distance above the bituminous springs lying on the north bank of this stream; the serpentine rocks abound in this vicinity, and also some of its subordinate members; at this place the Magnesian Group of the Santa Cruz Mountains, which run north into San Francisco, have their southern terminus.

On the Rancho La Brue, near the Pescadero, and into the very edge of the Valley Santa Clara the talcose series and gold is found; on crossing the Pajaro, these rocks and with them the gold closes; not a trace of this metal, or rock that would indicate its existence was to be found in any of the hills east of the Gabilan.

The district of country in the Coast Mountains in which the auriferous deposits are now known to occur is about eighty miles in length, and thus far is confined to the counties of Santa Clara, Monterey and the north part of Luis Obispo. This is a material addition to the already known area in which this metal is found, and its location in what has heretofore been considered the agricultural districts of the State, will in time exert a beneficial influence in the permanent settlement of those sections.

ANTIMONY.—The common sulphuret of this metal is very abundant in the Monte Diablo Range; at Mount Oso it is found in large masses, also at various other points throughout these mountains; it occurs in considerable quantities in some parts of the County of Santa Barbara. This mineral is deserving of attention as it often contains a notable quantity of silver, though as yet no specimens which have been found in this country contain a large per centage of this metal. That variety of the antimonial ores which is argentiferous, has a lively steel-gray color, cuts easily with the knife and is brittle, while the common gray antimony, which is the principal yet found, has a lead-gray color, its fractured surface, easily tarnishes and scales of the mineral are slightly flexible.

BITUMEN.—Bituminous springs abound through the Coast Mountains, and in some places is much used in the construction of buildings, and walks in front of buildings; for the latter purposes it is admirably adapted in situations where the sun will not have too powerful an effect upon it, as in such cases it is apt to become soft. In the counties of Santa Clara, Santa Cruz and Monterey, several of these springs occur, and further south are found more abundant. Information has been received of an extensive deposit of bitumen in Contra Costa, some six miles from the shores of the bay, but at what point I have as yet been unable to learn. This article has been used of late in the manufacture of gas, for illumination, and it possesses some advantages over the common oil or resin gas in general use; a sufficient quantity for the illumination of the country may be easily obtained and at low rates when required for this purpose.

CINNABAR.—This mineral is well known, and the principal mine now opened in this country is at New Almaden in the County of Santa Clara and situated twelve miles from San José. The town of Almaden is situated four hundred and eighty feet above the sea and the mine is eight hundred and sixty feet above the town, making the elevation of the mine thirteen hundred forty-five above tide level. The ore at this mine is found in bunches or deposits in a clay highly charged with peroxide iron. The cinnabar contains considerable arsenic generally disseminated through the ore, small veins of calcareous spar are found running through the mineral giving it at times a fanciful appearance. The magnesian rocks are largely developed in this section, both at the mine and in the mountains to the south-west. The rocks in the immediate vicinity of the mine are talcose in their character, much decomposed and broken up; at the base of the hill on which the mine is located there is to be found native magnesia on the surfaces of the rocks.

The deposit of ore at this locality is very large, and will require many years to exhaust it. As the mine consists of deposits simply, there is no certainty of its continuance beyond the surface that may be exposed: it has been supposed generally that the ores of this mine occurred in the form of veins, but such is not the fact, and so far as I could learn from the superintendents at the mine, no well defined vein had been found since its opening. The principal adit of the mine is one thousand feet in length, and at the end of this a body of ore fifteen feet square had been exposed in one place; other similar masses, and even larger ones, were laid bare in different parts of the mine. An inclined winze had been driven to the depth of about one hundred feet below the level of the adit, at the bottom of which immense bodies of ore had been found. From the quantity of ore on hand, and that exposed in the mine, the prospects of the company are highly flattering for a handsome return for the heavy outlays of capital which have heretofore been made. At the date of my visit, the company were erecting twelve new furnaces in addition to those already in operation, having a capacity for working of twelve thousand pounds per week each, with an abundance of ore in the hacienda for their supply. The construction of their adit and the interior of the mine, with their reduction works, are of a character for permanency, workmanship and scientific skill to be found only among large mining operations. The ease and regularity with which everything connected with the mine argues well for its administrator, and exhibits a thorough understanding of the requisites necessary to insure success in extensive operations.

A better regulated, or more systematic method of mining, is not to be found in this or any other country, and is well worthy a visit from any who may wish to obtain an idea of what practical mining is in a large way. At the distance of three miles, another mine of the same character has been opened, but is not in operation at present, this latter is called the Gaudulupe; it has not proved extensive up to the present time.

In the lists of minerals, appended to this report, will be found more specific detail respecting their distribution among the rocks of the coast mountains. A description of the fossils will also accompany the latter, as far as the nature of circumstances will permit. The scarcity of books of reference in this country, at the present time, will render it impossible to define all the species that have been secured the past season; the genera will be nearly complete, and in the course of the ensuing season, the species of those genera will be described, as ample works for that purpose will be at hand within that time: there appears to be many that are undescribed in any of the works on hand at present.

MINERAL DISTRICT.

After completing the examination of the coast mountains within the parallels alluded to, a visit was made to the mineral districts, embracing parts of the counties Nevada, Placer, El Dorado, and Calaveras, the object of which, was to connect a line of travel commenced in May and June last, in the counties of Butte, Yuba, and Sierra; and to obtain, if possible, some information respecting the general character of placer and quartz mining at the present time, compared with its earlier prospects.

Two years having elapsed since I had visited this section of the country, and having in my possession the original notes of travel and maps made at that time, with a general acquaintance of their former condition, it was deemed advisable to make this particular examination, in order to form some estimate on their future prospects.

With this view, the more central portions of the mining districts were selected, as these may be considered a fair example of the extremes, and from the lateness of the season and distance were more accessible.

PLACER MINING.

The extensive excavations, which have been made within the last two years, in this branch of mining has afforded an opportunity of examining the different mountain formations not heretofore obtained, and has been the means of eliciting much valuable and interesting information, relative to the early condition and mutations, which have taken place in the superficial coverings of our hills. The rapid progress of advancement in the methods of conducting mining operations in this branch particularly, has opened a door for scientific research, which it seems impossible to have accomplished in so short a period as that in which they have been occupied; they have the appearance of having been in operation for half a century rather than the short space of four years.

It is now ascertained to a certainty that the placer ranges extend to the east, within ten or fifteen miles of the "summit ridge", so called of the Sierra Nevada; and the condition in which it is found at these points are similar in all respects to that in the older or more western sections, with perhaps one exception, and that the relative age of both. There are evidences which clearly indicate a deposit of gold older than the diluvial drift of the lower or western diggings, (which latter is often confounded with the drift deposits of the tertiary periods in this country) the character of which differs in almost every respect from any other deposit yet observed in this country, except in this particular range.*

Its direction has been traced for about seventy miles, and is found to extend through the counties of Butte, the eastern part of Yuba, Sierra, Nevada, Placer, and El Dorado; it appears to have an average breadth of about four miles, with an elevation of four thousand feet above the sea for the greatest part of its length.

* This deposit appears to hold a position and age below the tertiaries, and may be considered intermediate between the latter and the primitive formations in this State, its fossils differ from any thus far found, in any formation within the State, and I am disposed to refer it to the Brandon group of Vermont, discovered by Prof. Hitchcock, vide Sillman's Journal of Science.

From the examinations that were made upon this range, there are abundant evidences that an ancient stream flowed through this section of the country, and in a direction parallel with its then existing mountain ridges, and the extensive mining operations conducted in the south-east part of Sierra county on this range, has been the means of demonstrating this fact, which had heretofore been strongly suspected only. The outliers of its banks are very definitely marked throughout the entire length of the formation under consideration, and its former bed filled in many places with a volcanic sand and ashes, which probably accompanied its displacement.

In the county Sierra these peculiarities are best observed; in the vicinity, and for ten miles west of Downieville, the hills are covered with a volcanic breccia and tufa, which may be conveniently studied between the Negro Tent and Galloway's Ranch, also on all the hills and ravines surrounding Yumanna on Oregon Creek. On the creek the tufaceous deposit is found to the depth of sixty feet.

The exact point from which these immense quantities of volcanic materials were ejected, is somewhat obscure; yet there are reasons for the supposition that they had their origin in the truncated cones which lie a few miles to the north-east, and of which the Pilot Peak forms one of the principal points or centres of this rugged and forbidding district. This presumption is based on the grounds that between Pilot Peak and Yumana there are ample evidences of a direct connection with these larger centres of disturbance; an extensive dike of black scoriaceous and vesicular lava is traceable throughout the entire distance between Yumana and the Pilot Peak, passing through the hill north-west of Downieville, and within two hundred yards of the town, it crosses the river at this point and appears at Durgan's Flat on the opposite side of the stream, from thence it is again met near Galloway's Ranch, and continues from there to the high bluff which overhangs the town of Yumana, on Oregon Creek. There are no other true volcanic cones in this section that would seem commensurate with so large a scale of operations, except those above noted, though the minor peaks undoubtedly added much to the general result.

The displacement of this ancient stream and the subsequent filling of its bed has opened a new and rich field for scientific research in this State, but its more direct and economical bearings are that it affords an equally new and extensive field for the operations of the placer miner, and that thus far has proved itself equal to that of any range yet discovered in this country. Besides being equally abundant in its produce of gold as far as opened, with the best placers of the State, it possesses the advantage of being the most extensive of any one system which has yet been found. The peculiarities which characterize this formation and which distinguishes it from all others in the State, are the following:—the boulders found throughout its entire extent are very uniform in their characters, and are composed of quartz exclusively, (or nearly so) this has a bluish-watery color in the mass, highly translucent and vitreous when fractured, constituting ninety-seven per cent. of all the stones found in the deeper diggings, they are invested by a dull but deep blue earthy material highly charged with pyrites, which in most cases is as firm as the rocks themselves, making it extremely laborious and difficult in driving shafts or adits. The gold is contained in this matrix for a distance of six or eight feet above the "bed-rock," and resting directly on the latter, it is coarse and generally rough, and its external appearance is that of a poor quality, though it assays high and brings the first prices; its pale and dirty appearance is due to a small quantity of arsenical pyrites which adheres to its surface and which is found in considerable quantities in the matrix containing the gold.

The underlying rocks are serpentine and talcose slates; on Oregon Creek they are found to contain small veins of mundic (arsenical pyrites) one or two inches in thickness, this has a clear and lively grayish-white color, when recently fractured, but soon tarnishes on exposure, becoming a dirty lead gray, and even quite dark; this mineral is rich in gold, it is difficult to find a small piece that does not present this metal to the naked eye on some part of its surface.

The mineral was first observed in the Johnson Shaft, half a mile north of the town of Yumanna, and occurs at a depth of fifty feet below the level of the creek, at the edge of which the shaft was driven, the strike of these veins was north-west by west, and is found on both sides of the stream on that line. There were four other shafts in this vicinity in which the mundic was found under the same circumstances; and there can be scarcely a question but that it exists in true veins among the serpentine rocks throughout this part of the country. These veins have been found to penetrate the rocks in which they occur to the depth of six feet from the surface, and should it ultimately be found that the area is in any way considerable through which they run, they offer sufficient inducement to erect works for the reduction of this ore.

The blue color of the drift in this range has been found to pervade all parts of this peculiar deposit wherever it occurs, its boulders maintain their character and per centage, its extent over so large a district, its dissimilarity in these respects with all other placers yet known, has suggested the propriety of adopting a name which shall at once separate it from other sections, in order to designate more particularly its course and extent in the future; by this means we shall in a short time be able to acquire additional information relative to its extent that we do not now possess, and as its developments at the present time are of so flattering a nature, that any information of its present undiscovered boundaries, would add but another link to the great chain of our mineral resources, equally as important and productive as the best now known.

I would, therefore, suggest, that the term "Eastern Blue Range," be applied to this district; this will separate it from those lower down having the same color, but not possessing any one of its other peculiarities.

To define more particularly the position of this formation, both geographically and geologically, we will follow more particularly the outline of the ancient stream, and some few of the localities now situated upon it. On the south fork of Feather River, opposite to Sailor Bar, and east of this locality for three miles it is found in the form of small flats on the sides of hills declining to the east; passing to the south, it is met with a short distance from Goodyear's Bar, again at Yumanna, on Oregon Creek, still farther south at Minesota, at Chipseg's, Smith's and Kanaka Flats ; crossing the Middle Yuba, it is found at Orleans Flat, Moore's Flat, New Flats, thence across the south Yuba, by the towns of Eureka, Washington, and Poor Man's Creek, and at Mule Springs. This vicinity has presented an area of nine miles in which this formation has been found. Crossing Bear River, it is again met at each side of the American Forks, and is particularly well developed in the vicinity of Sarahsville, extending from thence to Georgetown. South of this, but very little is known of its location.

Within the extremes of north and south named above, the banks of an ancient stream are distinctly marked out, and can be as easily traced as if the waters were still flowing in their original bed. It must have existed at a date when the adjacent country maintained a much less elevation than that now existing ; this is proven from the fact that, even at this time a terraced form is observable in many places, in each of which the same peculiarities abound. The organic matters deposited are perfect in their forms, the most delicate parts of leaves are truthfully preserved to nature ; the material in which they are imbedded is that usually found suspended in waters that were but slightly disturbed, and when disintegrated yields an almost impalpable powder—not a pebble, nor even coarse sand is to be found in any part of it. In fact every feature that would indicate a quiet state of waters is fulfilled in the section under consideration. Had it been otherwise, the leaves and other tender parts of plants would have exhibited a different appearance from that they now present.

The remains of plants found in these localities are extinct on this part of the coast at the present date, the fruit, leaf, and structure of the sapvessels, differ from those of every other section of the country, either fossil or living. I have been enabled to obtain six varieties of leaves, and two varieties of fruits, which will be described as soon as opportunity shall offer. The depth at which these specimens were obtained from the surface was one hundred seventy feet, and near the end of an adit whose length was five hundred eighty feet, the principal bed was found in the Arcana Tunnel, at the town of Minesota.

The position of this formation has been stated in the preceding pages, to be below the tertiary groups and diluvial drift of the other placers. It will be unnecessary to roam over the entire State to illustrate or prove this point, as we have an adjacent district where both may be studied with ease and facility in an hour's ride between them. This locality is found at Chipseg's and Smith's Flats, about midway between Minesota and Oregon Creek. The different formations will be given as they occur at Smith's Flat and Minesota, which will fully illustrate the existing differences.

At Minesota we find the following in the descending order : First, volcanic tufa ; second, diluvial drift, containing no gold and having a depth of seventy feet ; below this is found a bed of clay and imperfectly formed slates beneath which a boulder formation of thirty-eight feet composed almost exclusively of quartz ; succeeding this the formation in question, containing the silicified woods, and leaves and fruits, the latter in the form of lignites, and in abundance. Following a direct line from this locality to Smith's Flat and at the distance of half a mile from the latter we meet an outcrop of the slates, above these slates the drift and gold of this latter locality is found, and contains petrifications of present existing species of plants and trees, which still flourish in the adjoining neighborhood; among these the pine and oak are very prominent. The structure of these silicified woods are as perfectly delineated as in the trees of similar character growing above them. The drift deposit at this locality is composed of every variety of rock found in the adjoining countries, being composed of trap, granite, porphyries and quartz, forming no well defined order of position.

The drift deposit of Minnesota being almost exclusively of quartz, such as has been described as occurring at Yumanna, forms a wide contrast with the above, and beneath the boulder formation the lignites, consisting of six species none of which are identical with any living species, or with the deposits of the section north of this locality. It will be seen from the peculiarities thus briefly enumerated in relation to the main features of both deposits, the widely dissimilar character of the minerals composing both, their relative position, and the difference in the organic deposits found in both, there is sufficient reason for assigning to each a different age.

How correct this conclusion may be, it yet remains to be proved, if additional testimony is required; and this can only be known when this particular section shall have been more fully explored. Certain it is, however, that its present appearance favors this classification; and should it prove as productive in its auriferous deposits as the partial explorations upon it now indicate, the amount of gold which it is capable of producing would be unequalled in any district heretofore or at present known. There is not an instance known, where the lead in this range has been found, but that large sums of gold have been the result; this might be saying more, perhaps, than prudence would dictate, but such are the facts in the case, let opinion be what they may.

QUARTZ MINING.

For two years past this branch of industry has engrossed much of public attention, and speculation on the future success and prospects of these mines has been as diversified and fluctuating as upon any subject ever presented to public consideration; this has resulted from an incorrect appreciation of their intrinsic value, and want of information respecting their position, geologically considered, coupled with disappointments resulting in too high anticipations of abundant products from these sources in too short periods of time; the hasty and inconsiderate manner in which persons entered into these speculations in the country heretofore, and the natural results which must necessarily flow from such a course of action, has had the effect to cast a shadow of doubt for the time being, on the future prospects of these sources of wealth, while the pecuniary losses that followed in the train of these causes were construed by alarmists abroad as indexes of certain failure, and thus rendered the doubt that existed an apparent certainty.

All this however, has had a beneficial effect in its ultimate results, by checking that abnormal cause of action incident to the first outbreak of all speculative movements of this kind. Had that cool discretion and judgment which has marked the subsequent career of these undertakings—that firm determination to surmount all natural obstacles and test the truth or falsity of the claim advanced of the value of these veins. been practiced in the earlier stages of quartz mining, we should have been spared the disagreeable task of chronicling adversity and pseudo-failures in a legitimate and profitable branch of employment, thus saving this one of the grand levers of our commercial prosperity the odium that has heretofore attached to it and is still persistent in the minds of some abroad.

Aided by the discrepant and in many cases malicious reports from our own hills, the savans of the Atlantic States and Europe reiterated the howl, and the public of those distant shores were nightly harrangued in the lecture-room, and popular assemblies, on the utter impossibility of the auriferous veins of this country proving to be more than a mere ephemeral show, and unworthy the confidence of reflecting minds. Their gratuitous expressions and unfavorable opinions, are now proved from the subsequent explorations which have been conducted on these veins, to be equally unfounded as were the arguments made use of by these men to convince their listening audiences of the supposed facts they so learnedly put forth; and our citizens engaged in these pursuits of industry have labored on, temporarily affected only by the confusion of opinions and anathemas issued from the portals of science, against this great interest of the State, and have borne the testimony triumphantly to the world that science unattended by personal experience will render him who uses it far more notorious than popular or reliable.

Notwithstanding the disadvantages of a manufactured public opinion with which this branch of industry has been obliged to contend, and the serious obstacles which have thus been presented to its progress, it has now become one of the permanent employments of the State, and should it meet with no other impediments than those which are the resultants of nature, it will obtain a position second to none, within the next two years.

The permanency of their character would scarcely have been demonstrated in the short period of time in which it has occurred, in any other country or State except this, and is in true keeping with the firmness of purpose manifested in every great undertaking by the citizens of this State, and is but another mark of that indomitable perseverance in overcoming difficulties either natural or artificial, that stand in the path of their advancement, for which they have become peculiarly characterized and proverbial.

The popular belief that the gold mines of this State, and the operations conducted upon them heretofore has been suspended, with the exception perhaps of a few isolated cases scattered through the country, and that they hold but a forced existence for speculative puposes, designed ultimately to be the means of conducting swindling operations on a large scale abroad, is as base as it is unfounded; those feelings and ideas find a haven in the breasts of a few only, who from their position commercially have been the means of propagating this erroneous and unjust opinion in relation to this subject. The embittered feelings of such persons, which have had their origin in disappointed hopes arising from too hasty conclusions respecting the productiveness of those operations in which they were individually interested, and which in nearly every case was caused by inadequacy of means and mismanagement of their operations, is no criterion whereby to form an opinion that would be just or reasonable, with reference to these metallic veins, and those in this country who would still propagate those opinions, do so in the face of every evidence to the contrary which reason or sober judgment would demand or can be found in this or any other country.

With these preliminary remarks on the general impressions at home and abroad, respecting their theoretic value, founded as they are on presumption rather than evidence, we shall proceed to consider the geological position which the quartz veins of this State hold to the rocks with which they are found in connection, hoping thereby to elucidate more clearly their present as well as prospective value.

QUARTZ VEINS AND THEIR RELATIVE AGES IN CALIFORNIA.

The quartz veins of this State are found distributed in nearly parallel lines throughout the west flank of the Sierra Nevada, and consist of three distinct lines separated by intervals ranging from four to eleven miles; as these divisions are found in nature they constitute what may be denominated the principal or main ranges. Between these are to be found smaller lines of these rocks at times running parallel with the former, at others having strikes more or less oblique, and even at right angles in some instances with the principal veins.

From the peculiar distribution of these rocks, as relates to their connection and position with the formations in which they are found, it would be difficult to refer them all to the same age; this would be manifest only by observing the different sections in which they occur. They will therefore be designated in this report as the Older and Recent groups, in order to better describe the peculiarities that may be found in both, and with reference also to the age of the rocks which they have been the apparent cause of disturbing.

OLDER GROUP.

The eastern and also a part of what may be termed the central line of dikes are included under this head. This group is found to have intruded itself through the primitive formations only, or through the trapean rocks which immediately succeed the primitive. The principal rocks which appear to have suffered the greatest amount of local disturbance and dislocation from these quartz veins, have been the granite serpentine and the earlier trapean rocks, which appear to under-lie both the former. The veins or dikes that occur in the primitive series are usually much more massive than those of a later period, and are not distributed over so wide an area, or possess so great a number of lateral veins, or cross-courses incident to the more recent group of these rocks.

The mineral characteristics of the Older Group are more uniform and regular so far as known, and are found to possess a firmness of texture, where they enter the greenstone, much greater than those of recent date. It is seldom found that this suite of veins has cut through or in any way disturbed the slates which rest on the granite, even when the latter are in the immediate neighborhood; less rare is it to find them cut through by the older group; that in a line of travel over two hundred miles in length that I have seen but two instances in the eastern range of veins, and it is even questionable whether this dike belonged strictly to the older group.

The effect of these veins on the rocks which they pass through, has been to disorganize their structure to a considerable extent, which has rendered the decomposition of both more rapid and complete, hence it frequently happens that rich deposits of metal are found in such places, and usually occur near the point of contact of both series of rocks. The older group is found to extend from near the summit ridge of the mountains to a distance of about forty miles toward the west, and constitute nearly six-eighths (6-8) of all the veins found within this line of distance, and on these are located the greatest proportion of all the mines at present in operation.

In that portion of the country lying north of the Cosumnes River and ranging thirty miles east of the Valley Sacramento, the central line of dikes belonging to the older group, are found, their western edge passes through the counties of El Dorado, Placer, Nevada, Butte and Shasta, and as far north as the Mt. Shasta hills to the east of the peak. It is well developed in the counties of El Dorado, Placer and Nevada, and in one locality in the county of Yuba, a short distance above Scott's Ferry. In these latter counties the more recent group is also found, and in the county of Nevada it is seen to have disturbed the older groups in some localities, and in Placer county, where both have features in common which will be noticed more particularly when treating of the Recent group.

To localize the upper and older group of these veins, a few localities will be given for the purpose of familiarizing their geographical positions: in Nevada county it is met with at the National vein, also at German Bar, at the Ariel Mine in Sierra county, and the Jamison Creek mines in Butte county; on the American forks at the Volcano mine, El Dorado county; Leake Vein, Calaveras county; Big Oak Flat, and Marble Springs, Tuolumne county.

These localities are situated far into the mountains, and are situated on the eastern part of this line of dikes, and upon those parts of it where it is most largely developed, becoming an extended and well defined continuous range.

Returning to the middle or central range of dikes, at the distance of thirty miles from the valley, and travelling south we find that immediately after crossing the Consumnes, the granitic rocks that have heretofore been found associated with this range of veins further north begin to disappear in a gradual manner, and the prevailing rocks are talcose, to the exclusion of almost every other of the primitive series; for a distance of about fifty miles, the quartz is found associated with this or some of its subordinate members, the granitic rocks lying far to the east. The quartz vein found among the talcose series and which appear of the same age as those occurring in the granite, are equally uniform in the general characteristics they present, so far as relates to their mineral constituents, but there is one remarkable feature attending them here (as also to the north in a few instances,) which is not common to the granitic associations of these rocks, viz: the depth to which the vein is decomposed from the surface down, will not exceed more than one-fourth that which will be found where the inverting rock is of the granitic series. This peculiar feature is very striking in passing from a "sett" situated in the latter to one located in the former, and will be found to hold good even in the same neighborhood.

One other feature is equally apparent, and at the same time important in connection with this, which is, that while those veins present the contrast above noted, the "setts" occurring in the serpentine series which have been unaffected by the cause producing such extensive decomposition as is found among the granite rocks, do not possess a texture so firm and coherent as the veins found in the northern sections, such veins will be worked with a less amount of labor and capital producing an equal amount of ore.

There is nothing to distinguish the veins of this section from being of the same age with those at the north, and running through a similar range of country, like the veins of the granitic series they do not appear to have disturbed the more recent formation of the tertiaries, but are confined exclusively to the primitive rocks. Following a line west toward the valleys, the occurrence of a more recent group becomes manifest, and is unquestionably the equivalent of that alluded to as occurring throughout the northern counties.

RECENT GROUP.

This group of these rocks is found extending from the lowest foot-hills on the east border of the valley, where the first outcrop of the slates are met, to a distance of about eighteen miles to the east, and after is found running into the western edge of the older group; their intrusion appears to have formed one of the principal and later disturbing agents that has been in action in those periods of development of that part of this country, immediately preceding, and continuing into the middle Eocene and Miocene periods of the tertiary era.

Their altitude above the sea is variable, from one hundred to fifteen hundred feet, and some few localities reach the height of two thousand. One of the features, which this group presents, and which distinguishes it from those of the older group is, that they have cut through and disturbed not only the primitive formations, but every other formation found resting upon them, this occurs in almost every case in which these rocks are found. A dike of this age is often found protruding through the granite or some other member of the primitive series, and may be traced frequently for one or two miles before any member of the sedimentary rocks are met with; in this case, the latter rocks will be found more or less disturbed at the point of contact with the vein, and it will often be found that its passage from the granite beneath into the slates above is perfect, traversing the overlying rock through a great part of its length, and sending out cross courses in every direction. A diturbed position is not the only change observable in these cases ; structural change is as often the result of the intrusion among the slates as the appearance of the veins themselves. The above peculiarities in relation to these views are observable in every part of the lower mining districts, and an erroneous opinion in regard to the age of the dike under examination may easily occur as the part under our observation may be situated either in the primitive or sedimentary rocks.

A dike of this character occurs in the town of Centreville, Placer County, and extends in a northerly direction for one and a half miles through granite, when it enters the slates, passing entirely through their length and again appearing in granite at their northern extremity ; another instance of a similar character is met with on Deer Creek, two miles below Nevada ; here the dike passes through the trap, granite and slate, and also at Newtown in the same county. Still further north, in the County of Yuba, a vein cuts both the granite and slate, as in the vicinity of Brown's Valley, and again on Dry Creek ; in many other localities throughout this range of country, the same features are to be found, and our opinion on the comparative ages of these veins, can be correctly founded only by a careful examination of the entire length of the vein.

On the same range of hills, this group is continued south as far as the Tuolumne River, and includes the district on which some of the principal companies of the southern counties are located. It frequently happens that the veins of this group are composed of a perfect net-work of small threads and veins, varying in power from one inch to one foot. This peculiarity is admirably exemplified at Angel's Camp in Calaveras County, at this locality and for miles around these small "hilos," constitute a large part of the rich veins of this section, while at the distance of four miles to the south, it again appears as a mammoth dike, popularly known as the "Great Carson Hill Vein," which extends southerly to the Stanislaus River.

From this point a line of large dikes interrupted at intervals continue in a southeast direction for sixty miles, passing through Campo Seco, Coulterville, Bear Valley, and thence to Mt. Ophir ; throughout this entire distance they are found to cut through all other volcanic rocks, with perhaps one or two exceptions ; the basaltic rocks in some parts of the southern counties bear evidence of displacement by these intrusions, and I know of but two cases in which the latter intrusions have thrown these veins, and in these cases it is not yet fully determined whether this be the fact. It is on the west flanks of the hills in which the dikes of the recent group of quartz appears, that the features which mark their age are more particularly noticeable ; here the slates (and in the foothills, the sandstone) present all the varied changes of position and structure, noticed by different writers on the physical features incident to the mountain districts of California—at one time dipping east at another west, and again half inverted, in the multifarious disturbances to which they have been subjected.

The greatest amount of displacement in the sedimentary rocks is always found in the closest proximity to the veins in their immediate vicinity, and although a vertical position only may be given in many instances, yet this is found to become less as you recede from the vein on either hand transversely to its line of strike; it is not unfrequent that the high angle of dip in the first instance will assume a nearly horizontal position in the distance of a mile from the point of uplift, but the next ridge will present a re-enactment of the first case if the rocks composing it are of the same character.

The vertical position of the slates is one of those peculiar features which attracts the attention of almost every person passing to or from the interior, from their appearance resembling an old church-yard they have been termed the grave-stone slates, and this distinctive feature is found to prevail to the lower range of foot-hills toward the valley, as well as in the more elevated parts of the mountains; this verticality among the lower hills has been urged as an objection to the point that the intrusion of the quartz of either group, was not the immediate cause of that uplift, but that the present inclination has been given by causes of a similar character which have acted subsequent to the intrusion of the quartzose veins.

This proposition seems invalid for this reason: if any such agency as that proposed had been the immediate cause of producing the effects which are observable among the slates of this section and sufficiently powerful to have forced them into the position they now occupy; it seems but reasonable to suppose that some portions of the intrusive materials should make their appearance among them; but this is not the case, nor is it necessary to introduce such a complication in order to explain the physical features which are apparent in these rocks, as we find an agent distributed largely among them, which is fully adequate to induce all the changes of position or structure noticeable.

That we do not find massive outcrops of these dikes among the slates at the edge of the valley, is equally invalid as an objection against their agency in producing the disturbances which are clearly attributable to their intrusion a few miles farther to the east, for an examination will convince the unprejudiced mind that the causes which have been instrumental in tilting the slates from their former position in the interior has extended to the eastern edge of valleys and produced the ruptures we there witness.

In favorable situations for observing the intrusive character of the recent group, as in the canoñs through which flow many of our streams it is there found that the porphyries which lie superior to the primitive rocks, and have had their origin from contact with igneous rocks in an incandescent state, as well also as the trapean rocks adjoining, are broken through the sedimentary rocks above them which are still unchanged.

Another fact of interest, and having an important bearing on this part of our subject is found on the west borders of the great valleys and in the Coast Mountains. From all the testimony in our possession at the present time relative to the sedimentary rocks which dip under the valleys of the Sacramento and San Joaquin, we are induced to believe that those which occur on the east border are of an age contemporaneous with those on the west, and in addition thereto a group is found which evidently belong to a still later period. We have in these mountains then, a corroborative evidence that the disturbances produced by the intrusion of igneous rocks with which the quartz is found in connection has occurred during a comparatively recent period.

As these rocks have forced their way to the surface through all the species that lie above them, they can be considered in no other light than having an age posterior to most of the tertiary rocks within the State, or the northern and middle parts of it; and cotemporaneous at least with the lower portion of the miocene period. Under these circumstances it is not to be wondered at that gold may be found in San Francisco or Contra Costa, as the geological formations which have developed it east of the great rivers, are found also in the mountains to the west, though not to the same extent.

The disturbance of the recent sedimentary rocks of the Coast Mountains, and the character of some of the intruded masses that has produced the tilting and dislocations, their identity with the stratified rocks on the eastern border of the great valleys, leads us to the conclusion that the causes of uplift which have been found among the latter, were continued partially to the coast in the same period. With respect to the agents that played an important part in these turbulent periods, there can be but little trouble in their discrimination, and ample testimony is found to identify them with the recent group of igneous rocks under consideration, and if these conclusions are correct, the character for permanency of these veins is beyond all cavil or doubt.

Future investigation may disprove this position, but until it is made evident that the veins of the recent group have been disturbed by other and more recent volcanic agents on either side of the great rivers, we can regard them in no other view than being among the last of an extensive series of disturbances which have operated principally through a large portion of the west flank of the Sierra Nevada at a comparatively recent period in the geological history of this part of the continent.

The metalliferous character of this group is in no way inferior to that of the older ranges of these rocks; the proof of this rests in the fact, that some of the best placers yet found in this country are included within its boundaries among the alluvium and drift deposits of the tertiary epoch. The gold generally found in these placers is of that character known among the miners as "rough or recent gold," having suffered but little from attrition by water; but it is not unfrequent to find the recent metal associated with that which has been much worn by attrition, and the two qualities thus appearing in the same placer range, can be regarded only as having different origins and ages. It would scarcely appear reasonable to suppose that two pieces of metal driven from the same source and subjected to the same action, should present smooth and rounded surface in the one, while its fellow beside it shall retain all its angularities as though just detached from its original matrix.

With reference to the older group of these veins there are features manifest which are both interesting and important, when we consider the immediate position of the recent group, to those of the older where both are found in contact. It has been remarked in the preceding pages that the veins of the older series have disturbed the greenstone below and the granite above only; a casual examination of the district in which these veins occur, would convey to the observer an idea that a discrepancy in the statements must exist, from the fact that veins which pierce the granite are found to cut the stites also in the same section. As in the case of the Centreville veins, these will be found to belong to the more recent intrusions of these rocks, and wherever those features occur the recent group will be found playing the part of a disturbing agent on the primitive veins themselves and their investing rocks; so far as our experience goes in judging of the effects produced by these recent intrusions, their influence is not an injurious one, for the recent dike has thus far proved equally metalliferous with the primitive setts.

CHARACTER AND POSITIONS OF THE OLDER VEINS BELOW THE SURFACE.

Under this head will be concluded all that we have to say upon the subject of gold mining in this State at the present time, and as the largest proportion of the mines of the State are situated on the older group of the quartz, the remarks that follow will be confined principally to that series.

In the northern part of the State,* the granite rocks in which these veins are situated upon the surface, have been found to be underlied with another class of igneous rocks, which, from their nature and presumed age, it was feared might have so disturbed the "setts" as to render the successful prosecution of mining a doubtful project, and injurious speculation from this fact, have been indulged in to an extent that at one time threatened to destroy the well merited confidence which the discovery of these veins had induced from the outset; and for this reason no little degree of interest has been manifested both at home and abroad in relation to their future prospects.

Had those speculations which have been founded on presumptive evidence only, been confined to the sphere to which it legitimately belonged, and divested of the over-anxious fears expressed and manifested from abroad, the parties most directly interested would have suffered less inconvenience by loss of confidence and credit, which the voluntary conservators of our good in distant lands have been the means of inducing, and the public mind would have been unbiassed but for the opinions of men who should have had more discretion than to have hazarded their reputation on such premature evidences as they must have been possessed of at that time.

It is scarcely a supposable case, that men thousands of miles distant should be found adequate to judge correctly of the value of metalliferous districts, having never seen the sections alluded to, or even before the veins were known by the parties engaged in opening them. Elaborate discussions based upon presumptive analogy, may subserve the purpose of pleasing popular assemblies, but they will be found untenable and useless often, when applied to practical and systematic operations.

Mining exploration within the past eighteen months, has added much to our information relative to the position of metallic veins of the State, and the rocks with which they are associated. The granite series has been closely investigated, and in several of the mines the workings have been carried entirely through this rock, and contrary to the anticipations of the incredulous, the setts have not been thrown at the point of contact with the inferior rocks. Thus far the depth of the granite series has not been found to exceed a depth of but little more than one hundred feet, and in almost every case where shafts have been driven, either on the vein or beside it, the rock has been found in a highly decomposed state, thus presenting but little difficulty in passing through it. There are, in some localities, many small veins running out at different angles from the principal "setts," into the surrounding granite, and when thus appearing in the inverting rocks, marks of dislocation are observable. These interesting features define most clearly the energy and extent of the supporting and injecting forces from below, at the date of the intrusion of the veins, and the angles which the small cross-courses make with the main "setts" from which they emanate, shows most conclusively that the fracture of the superincumbent rocks must have been extensive. Another and a striking feature is also to be observed in this particular, which is, that the small threads found in the granite have a greater power when they enter the greenstone below; thus indicating that the intrusive dikes spent themselves principally in the superior granite above.

The entire mass of the granitic rocks in the vicinity of the quartz, is of a loose and incoherent texture, from the surface to the lowest point yet reached, and when brought from the greatest depths the same general characteristics are found to prevail throughout. It presents a crumbling, reddish and purple hue, at times faintly spotted with white, its felspathic constituent thus imparting a porphyritic appearance to considerable quantities. When damp it is somewhat clayey, in the dry state, after exposure to the air, it is easily crushed in the hand, giving the greasy feeling of some of the talcose minerals. These peculiar features may be best examined in and about the towns of Nevada and Grass Valley; for here they extend over several miles, and the extent to which mining operations have been carried in these sections, renders an examination of all the different phases that are presented in this class of veins, both easy and convenient.

Immediately below the granite, the greenstone is found underlying this entire section of country, in every instance in which the granite has been perforated, this rock has been found beneath, and when first met with in descending is much broken up, and the fissures filled with foreign infiltrations from above. The trap rock has a blueish-gray and greenish color, often highly charged with pyrites; the veins on entering this rock change their color from the deep reddish-brown, which they maintain in the granite above, and the cavities filled with the peroxide of iron which has resulted from the decomposition of the pyrites it originally contained, to a clear, white or semi-translucent mineral, holding considerable quantities of cubic and rhombic crystals of pyrites, which are more or less auriferous. In some of the trapean rocks arsenical pyrites is met with, but this latter is much more common in the southern districts, and on the forks of the American River.

In every mine throughout the northern districts, in which the greenstone has been reached, the veins have penetrated this rock, and in no one instance thus far is it found that the vein has either been pinched or faulted, but the reverse is true, that every sett has increased in power the deeper they descend. Of six companies now in successful operation in Grass Valley, all of them are obtaining their ores from the greenstone, in larger quantity and better quality than was found to be the average in the granite above: on Deer Creek it is the same, and but two mines in this district still continue in the granite, viz:—the Illinois and Gold Tunnel mines, the lower gallery of the latter is within nine feet of the greenstone, with an increasing power in the “sett” at the point of working. In the counties of Butte and Shasta, the same fact prevails, and in each of those mines, which have entered the trap there has been no diminution in the power of the vein or qualities of the ore.

The depth to which some of these veins are found to enter the greenstone has been fifty-five feet, at the present time, and at this depth into this rock they bear all the reasonable evidence of continuing to an unlimited depth, and being of more recent date than their investing series. The greenstone in close proximity to the dikes is found much shattered and disturbed, exhibiting evidences of displacement subsequent to fracture, the inclination of the disturbed masses corresponding to the dip of the vein, the line of fracture form angles of fifty to seventy degrees to the dip of the “sett,” and as high as forty in some cases with the horizon; this gives a stratified appearance to these rocks; this peculiar feature is observable at the Osborn Hill Mine, and is indicated by the heavy lines in the sketch of its transverse section. At this mine may also be observed the other peculiarities before noticed, the highly decomposed and broken character of the upper part of the greenstone of seventeen feet below; at the Lafayette and Helvetia Mine, similar features are to be observed of the semi-stratified appearance of the greenstone, caused by the intrusion of the quartz dike through it; the entire length of the adit level of this mine is driven entirely through this rock a distance of about eleven hundred feet.

On Deer Creek, five miles north of Green Valley, we find a material change in the relative position of the metallic veins to the investing rocks, at the Gold Tunnel, as before remarked, the “sett” is exclusively in granite, while at the Wyoming Mine, one and a half miles below, the “sett” is situated in the greenstone inferiorly and the slate above, while in the adjacent mine above the Wyoming, slate and granite in the middle and greenstone below is the order of arrangement. At this mine may be observed one of those interesting features noticed in the concluding paragraphs of the Recent Group, and when we compare the accompanying sketches of the Osborn Hill and Wyoming, a sufficient illustration of the relative ages of the group will appear. The present working “sett” of the latter mine is protruded through the primitive rocks, and also through the slate above them, and from its dip it must pass through older veins at a depth probably not exceeding four hundred feet below their present level. The slate which lies superior in this mine is evidently of the same age as that occurring among the foot-hills toward the valley, and as the sketch of this mine illustrates, the vein passes entirely through them; the dip of this vein is forty-three degrees east, while those of the adjacent mine above varies from thirty-two to thirty-eight degrees. It is not surprising that a recent “sett” in passing through the cross-course of an older vein, or through a part of a primitive vein, should produce valuable deposits of metal which has taken place in this mine in several instances, and it serves for an illustration of the principle advanced in the preceding pages, that the recent veins were equally metalliferous with those of the primitive series, wherever and whenever found in this State.

From the facts thus far presented to your consideration respecting the known position of these rocks in the northern part of the State, some evidence at least exists, that those veins thus far opened are now proved to have cut through that suite of igneous rocks which heretofore have been supposed would destroy their continuity to any considerable depth below the surface. Already has the establishment of this point exerted an influence which is beginning to be strongly felt, and is restoring that confidence in gold mining which it long since lost. More capital has been invested within the preceding four months in this branch of employment, than in the entire time which has elapsed since the general suspension of these operations. From the developments which have been made relating to the permanency of their character within the past year, individuals are fast becoming satisfied that the metallic veins of this State merit that confidence which is fast returning. If other testimony is required than that already cited of the almost certainty of their continuation to unlimited depths, it will become necessary to search out some other formations than those acknowledged to be the foundation on which rest the superstructure of this teraqueous sphere, for it is evident if facts have any weight, that they have disturbed the lowest of all known rocks.

It may be argued that the shallow depth, fifty feet into the greenstone, is not positive, but that these veins may be faulted by more recent volcanic intrusions below this point. This is possibly true, but at the same time, is there any good reason for such a supposition when no evidence of such disturbances are observable above the surface in their vicinity, and when those intrusive rocks are not to be found to depths of two or three thousand feet below the summits of those ridges on which these mines are located in many instances. There are many deep gorges among our mountains which exhibit the character of the rocks composing them to the depths above named, and on examination of their structure will convince an unbiassed observer of their primitive character. Among these gorges it is not unfrequent to find the quartz veins extending from their bottom to various heights, ranging as high as six hundred feet in every instance in which these veins are met among the rocks in situ. They possess their greatest power at their lowest point. In one instance I well remember having traced a dike of this rock from the river to the height of thirteen hundred feet; a drawing of which is still in my possession; the "sitt" thinned out to small threads at this height, with a diminishing power from the base of the hill to the summit; this vein passes through greenstone and porphyry, granite and slate, successively, until it finally spent itself among the latter. If intrusive dikes are found to increase in power as their distance below the surface increases, we may reasonably conclude that they may continue to a depth below, equal to that which may be found above, in a case like the last one cited, provided the rocks beneath the lowest point at which it is observable continue of the same character.

Abundant examples of this character are to be met with throughout our mountains, and with such evidence before us, the character of these metallic veins for permanency must be placed beyond suspicion or doubt, and our testimony on this point extends much beyond any that has, as yet, been adduced. In the County of Calaveras, an extensive dike, two miles in length, has been laid open in such a manner that a vertical depth of eight hundred feet of the vein is now exposed to view.

The dike cuts through two ridges, which separate two streams of water, and the companies located on these streams have sunk their shafts to the depth of over one hundred feet, directly under the beds of the creeks, and have driven their galleries each way untill within a few feet of each other: the vein in one shaft has a power of thirty-seven feet, but in no point on the "sett" is it less than five, in each of the five mines located on this vein, the power of the "sett" has uniformly increased the deeper they have descended. In this case we have a thorough examination of one, at least, of our metallic veins, which will compare with some of the operations in other countries, and we may deduce some safe conclusions respecting their probable stability, if depth below the surface becomes an essential requisite to establish that point.

The rocks through which these veins pass are principally of the talcose series, with greenstone, hornblende schists, and syenite, in the immediate vicinity; the dikes have cut through all of them in succession without having suffered any deflection from that parallelism which must have ensued, if any of the rocks with which they are found in contact, had an age posterior to the dikes themselves. This district is particularly noticed in connection with this part of our subject, for the purpose of exhibiting the stronger probability of permanency in the quartz veins of this country, for the reason that if disturbance in their position is likely to ensue in any part of this State, it would be likely to occur in these sections, as the effects of recent volcanic action is more prominent throughout the southern portions of the mining districts than any other part of the west flank of the Sierra Nevada.

From what testimony we have in our possession relative to these veins, it seems but reasonable to conclude that their integrity is perfect, or as nearly so as can be reasonably expected considering the short period which has been employed in developing their true character, and that the confidence which they formerly possessed was well grounded; all subsequent examinations have only tended to confirm this belief in the minds of those who have carefully and diligently studied this subject. The present condition of our gold mines, their flourishing state and prospective value, based on facts as now developed, most clearly indicate their importance, as an industrial pursuit and one destined ere long to form one of the leading interests in the economy of the State; and as such it would seem that all prudent measures to develop farther their extent and value, and place them upon that footing before the world which that value and importance demands should be used, either through the State or General Government, and through them promote such measures as will prove an inducement to more extensive and permanent operations than has yet been done.

In concluding this part of the report, and in connection with the magnitude and importance of perhaps a somewhat exciting principle in relation to it, I would beg leave to call your attention to a point on which there has heretofore existed much diversity of opinion, which not unfrequently has engendered angry discussion and beligerent feeling in a large proportion of our mining population. The experience of the last three years has elucidated the fact most clearly that the two mining interests of this State cannot be governed by the same rule of law in all cases, and prove alike advantageous to both; it is therefore suggested whether some method more congenial to this interest may not be adopted, that will favor the occupancy and improvement of the metallic veins of this State, giving at the same time widest scope and protection to all at present engaged, and those who may wish hereafter to enter upon those pursuits.

PRESENT GOVERNMENT OF METALLIC VEINS.

Before entering upon this part of our subject I will state, that throughout every part of the mining counties, which it has been my fortune to visit, in my examinations of previous years, and up to the present time, the subject of needful protection to capital investment and labor in this branch of mining, has been fully and unequivocally expressed by those engaged and interested in it, and by a large portion of those engaged in placer mining, having no direct connection with the former. And it is at the solicitation of nearly every individual engaged in the pursuit of mining on veins, that the subject is presented to your consideration at the present time. A wish has long since been expressed, and urged through all the various channels of communication, that the present tenure by which this species of property is holden and conveyed may be changed in such manner as may render available capital investments, which must be largely employed in order to develop those sources of wealth and insure their occupancy.

It is perhaps a questionable point whether the State government is vested with the power to cede and convey title in fee to lands containing the precious metals, even were that title absolutely required from the nature of existing circumstances; but whether her jurisdiction in the case be sovereign or not, she legitimately possesses a conservative jurisdiction over such lands, and through that power, as a member of the great confederacy, may exert an influence to obtain such modifications of existing laws of the general government, as would conflict with the common interests of her citizens, or of those rules and regulations temporarily instituted by the State, which by their present action, have a tendency to cripple and reduce her otherwise available means of revenue.

Under this form of the question it becomes a matter of some importance to consider, whether the entire interests of the State would not be materially and beneficially affected, by placing such lands as are under its conservative influence in a position that would be likely to yield a revenue from their occupancy, and which at the same time would yield an adequate security for the investment of capital to be employed in their development. A system of law that would induce a more extensive occupancy than that now existing must insure, as a resultant, a corresponding increase of revenue, thereby reducing taxation on the great mass, render less burdensome the support of the State government.

A course of action that would accomplish this end, and at the same time prevent that result which it has been the careful study of the representatives of the people to guard against, and whose every effort has been directed to preserve to the people the most liberal policy in the acquirement of wealth from the varied and prolific sources presented in no other country than this, must be unobjectionable either to the miner or merchant.

A strong objection has been urged against the sale of mineral lands, and justly too, as in this case the title must pass into the hands of private parties, which in most countries has proved objectionable in many particulars, and a course of this kind could never meet the approbation of a large majority of our population, in the present state of our information. In all other countries as in our own, the title to mineral lands is vested in the crown, or general government, (with the exception of Great Britain,) and the title or permission to use or occupy can emanate only from that source, where it properly belongs. In all countries where mines of the precious metals have been found, different policies for their government have been pursued, but as yet that policy which has been the most liberal, and at the same time protective of private rights, is found to have exerted the widest and most beneficial influence in their developement and occupancy; under such a system it is impossible for it to do otherwise than prosper, and the experience of nearly three centuries have gone to substantiate that fact.

There can be no possible objection to the general principles on which our present system is founded, it is the same that made Spain and Mexico what they were and are, and one that with these countries has stood the tests of time, the best proof of its utility and univereal applications. Throughout all the political changes that have convulsed and shattered the civil codes of these governments, no change or alteration of a restrictive tendency has been made in the Ordinances des Mineria. For the last fifty years no change that in the least has affected its vital features, except to render them more liberal and congenial; its dictates with them are as sacred as their holy creed, and to molest or change its principles would be regarded as equally sacrilegious.

Under that system individual rights in mines are scrupulously respected, and strict non compliance with its requisitions are followed by a reversion of party rights to the crown, from which only can a similar title be obtained by others wishing to occupy and improve.

The history of mining proper throughout the world, has taught us that it is impossible to pursue that business to advantage without heavy outlays of capital; this applies equally to mining for silver or gold; the great amount of labor and expense attendant in opening a mine is the cause of this, that branch alone often being the work of years, before the reduction of any of its metals take place whereby any return of profits can be realized. We are not wanting in illustrations of this kind, they are as wide-spread as the mining operations of the world; and if more definite examples of this fact is required than the general history of this branch of industry, we need but to refer to the superficial operations of our own State heretofore, to show that limited means cannot succeed in gold mining, though the veins producing the metal may be (as they frequently are in this country,) exceedingly productive.

Our citizens embarked in this delusive speculation in a most inconsiderate manner. The results that followed from their earlier operations are too well known : the capital at their command, being small, was expended even before their veins were opened, and this great lever of success in these operations being thus early suspended, prevented the prosecution of the enterprise to a successful termination, which would have ended in profit in place of loss.

The fault, "if fault there be," lay at the door of misguided apprehensions, induced by flattering reports of results which had flowed from hasty examinations, but not in the veins themselves ; as these were dumb, and unable to speak for themselves, until men of larger means developed their capabilities, the cause of failure was attributed to a want of metal in the lodes ; hence the distrust which has up to the present time attached itself to this branch of mining, and has resulted in serious loss to the country at large, as well as to the private citizen.

A few have grappled through against all obstacles, who were fortunate enough to command the necessary means, and now have their mines opened and in successful operation. But it has been at the expense of heavy outlays of capital, and nearly two years of industrious application and hard labor ; the results which they have produced has been the means of fixing on a permanent basis, the character of these mines, which it will be difficult to affect injuriously hereafter ; and their integrity as lucrative employments, and safety for capital investments in themselves, is questioned by none who are conversant with their present condition.

Notwithstanding their acknowledged intrinsic value, there is an incubus resting upon them, which prevents, and must still prevent, their more extensive occupancy, and until removed in some manner, will stand as an insuperable obstacle to their future progress. This rests in the doubtful and uncertain tenure, by which these mines are held, being subject, as they are, to the government of the majority of the people in the district in which they are located, and whose interests directly considered, are both unconnected and foreign, though following a profession similar in some respects to that under consideration.

The position of the Placer miner, and those engaged on veins, is different in many respects. In the case of the former, there is but a comparatively small amount of capital requisite to pursue his business advantageously and successfully : in the other, experience has fully demonstrated that he cannot pursue his business successfully without large expenditures. In the case of the former, the extraction of gold is conducted by the simple process of washing ; in the other, it can be extracted from the gauge often only by complex metallurgical processes, and subjected even then to much uncertainty, and, at times, loss—requiring what the Placer does not, the employment of men who have made it the study of their lives, and the use of means mechanical and scientific, which do not come within the requisition of the former, to conduct his operations to a successful issue.

The operations of the placer miner are generally limited as to time, seldom exceeding a year in the same locality, on his removal his interests in his former residence ceases ; in the case of the miner engaged on veins, he finds that his operations must be continued through a series of years in order to secure a fair remuneration for his labors, and if he removes to other parts of the State, his interests in the locality he left does not cease, as his capital investments still remain and continue a permanent source of revenue to the State and county in which they are located. The implements of the placer miner are few, and easily obtained or disposed of if he wishes to remove but, it is widely different with the other. He is obliged to obtain expensive machinery to obtain profitable results from his labors, and heavy sacrifice is often the attendant, if it is his misfortune to fail in his operations from any causes either natural or artificial.

The effect of placer mining in all parts of the world has been, to produce a wandering and unstable community, no better example is to be found than in our own State; it is a true illustration of what has occurred in other countries whose features simulate our own; and to remedy this has been the aim of our State government almost from its earliest foundation; how far its efforts have been attended with success its present history will clearly elucidate. The attempt to induce a permanent settlement in the mountains can be said to have partially succeeded only, and this has occurred in those instances where the parties thus locating have been enabled to avail themselves of interests that would partake of a degree of permanency for a series of years; their titles to improvements on the lands such persons occupy, being retained only by the law of sufferance, subject to the decrees of the majority residing in their vicinity if found to be auriferous.

On the broad platform of "equal right and equal privilege," which has been the governing principle of this State in its most extended sense from its earliest occupancy, the dim outline of a desire to establish permanency in the settlement of the mountain districts has been manifested, and at the present time it has become a distinguishing feature in a large portion of the mining population, in mining employments it is equally apparent as in agriculture; among the most stringent advocates of a "masterly inactivity" in regard to the government of the mines, two years ago, are now to be found men equally earnest in their advocacy of vesting rights that shall partake of the character of permanency, and protective where his operations require investments, to secure competency and reward for his labours. Experience has taught us that necessity, if we would foster those employments which it has been our pride to boast, and where no subversion of those fundamental principles on which our laws are founded can take place.

In every county of the State where quartz mining has been conducted this will be found a striking feature in each and all of their operations, and has been particularly manifested in some of the northern counties, where more stringency in the enforcement of mining laws of former years existed, than probably any other part of the State; the effects of this course of action was equally manifest abroad, in the Atlantic States and Europe, when the construction of the present mining code was published in those countries. In one of our northern counties a system has been founded on this code which under certain conditions, (consisting of a given amount of improvements only) conveys a title in fee to all intents and purposes; and another by which parties have the right of holding all that they may be able to purchase. This course of action among miners themselves must be viewed as a plain and clearly defined wish, on their part, to extend over the country a system of government that shall prove alike conducive to the enhancement of these interests and the public welfare, and offer by these means inducements for the investments of capital from abroad ; its effects would prove beneficial inasmuch as every dollar of capital thus invested would become so much available means of revenue and serve to retain a much greater amount of the gold extracted from our hills, within the State.

From the nature of gold-mining proper, it results as a consequence almost, that those who engage in it, must become permanent settlers, as their operations if successful become the work of years instead of a few months, and their investments, when made, are done with that view. Under these circumstances does it not become a matter of correct policy to separate the interests of the placer miner and those engaged on veins, in such a manner that those engaged in each branch may enjoy that liberty which the placer miner now possesses, and which is enjoyed by the other only by the sufferance of the former in the largest majority of cases ; giving to each the right to enact those laws, which they in their good judgment will find most conducive to their separate interests, and which from their nature and attendant circumstances are very dissimilar and foreign.

The jealousies and feeling arising from the suspicion entertained by each other, which has heretofore and at the present time exists to a considerable extent, in these two branches of industry would, by the above course be done away, and a much greater degree of stability in mining proper would be the result, (which under the present arrangement of affairs can hardly exist) in which its prosperity to a great extent is involved : its influence would not only be made manifest here, but it would give a confidence abroad in these operations which they do not now possess, and to which we must look for those means by which we shall be able to conduct gold-mining successfully and with profit.

The entire separation of these interests would be regarded abroad as the opening of a new era in the mining history of this State, fraught with beneficial results, and involving a vital interest in her future economy, advantageous alike to the revenues of the State and to the people ; it would remove that serious obstacle at present in the path of its progress, viz : "the insecurity that now exists for invested capital, from the motative policy heretofore pursued," and restore that confidence which such a policy has in a great measure been the means of destroying.

The mines of this State are of a character and value, which if placed in a proper position, will invite investment from abroad, to an amount little less than twenty millions of dollars within the next eight years ; this presumption is founded on the fact that more than one sixth of that amount is at the present time in active operation in this country, and its largest proportion has been derived from American sources, during a portion of that period when public confidence had been shaken in regard to their value. Negotiations are now pending which involve nearly one million more of capital investment in this branch of mining, nearly one half of which is in the cities of Boston and New York.

Considering the disadvantages that now surround them, as shown from the facts relating thereto, they can but be regarded as the prolific sources of wealth in this country ; and every inducement consistent with the liberal policy adopted in the government of the placers, is equally applicable and should be extended to them.

The following pages will contain a brief notice of some of the principal mines of the State with a list of those in successful operation and their locations. Also a table of Barometric Altitudes; and Catalogue of Minerals obtained during the tour, to be placed in the State Cabinet.

LA FAYETTE AND HELVETIA MINE.

This company is located at Grass Valley, Nevada County, and the sketch of the workings of their mine is taken from the La Fayette Hill vein only about two miles south-west of the town. The length of the vein at the above hill is eleven hundred feet; it has a curvilinear course, varying from north-east to south-west; its mean, however, when marked on a right line is north, ten degrees east. The dip of the vein is forty-one degrees east, having a power of three feet at the depth of thirty-four feet; at this point the ore was of a poorer quality than at any other point. The depth of the present working is about 55 feet, and here the vein increases in power and value, being equal to three feet eight inches, and yielding in a large amount of ore, forty dollars per ton. The vein, when discovered, was covered with yellow brown alluvium for five feet, and passed through this and decomposed granite of a purple color fifteen feet, when it entered a mass of decomposed and fragmentary greenstone of five feet depth, thence into compact rock of the same character and continued to the depth of fifty-five feet.

Adit level is 1100 feet in length, exclusive of tram road for conveying ore and attle from the mine; it extends through the whole length of their claim. At their present depth all the ore is obtained by blasting, which adds much to the expense of the mine. The cost of obtaining ore from this mine is from seven to eight dollars per ton at present rates of labor. The company have about 900 feet of vein in Gold Hill, which requires no blasting and is obtained at the mill for five dollars per ton.

The La Fayette Hill vein was much decomposed for the depth of thirty feet, and contained a large quantity of peroxide iron and free gold; after passing into the compact greenstone the vein becomes quite firm, and highly charged with pyrites investing gold; the crystals were white and well-terminated, generally perfect in form. In some parts of the mine, galena is met with and gold imbedded in it; an examination of this latter mineral has not been made for silver, but from its appearance it is quite probable that it contains this metal. The matrix of the ore is a bluish white and translucent, in pieces of one inch in thickness; the blue tint of the vein in the vicinity of the shafts is due in a great measure to finely divided particles of lead.

The capital of this company is about three hundred thousand dollars, and their receipts in four months has been as high as $98,000, but their average is near $10,000 per month; the mine has yielded with great uniformity since the commencement of operations, and bids fair for future success.

This mine has two Batteries and when in full operation is capable of reducing forty tons of ore per day, but one battery is run at a time as the amalgamating apparatus is not of sufficient capacity at present to dispose of that amount of ore judiciously, the amalgamating instruments consist of Cram's Cylinder and Berdan's Amalgamator, in the latter about fifteen per cent of the gross amount is saved after it has passed through the other instruments; this arises from the fact that Berdan's instrument possesses a levigating power from revolving balls in the instrument which gives a new surface to the material passing under them.

GOLD HILL MINE.

This mine is located in the town of Grass Valley on the first hill to the west of the village. The mine was first opened in 1851 and worked to a considerable extent and profit, subsequently it passed to the hands of the Agua Frio Company under the superintendence of their agent Mr. Atwood in whose possession it now remains; after an examination of the mine the old method of working was given up, and a new system of operations entered upon in order to tap the vein at the lowest possible point and at the same time afford easy transit to the reduction works and drainage to the mine. With this view an adit was commenced about fifteen feet above the level of the creek which flows in front of the town, and carried west through the base of the hill for a distance of seven-hundred feet, cutting through alluvium and decomposed granite most of the way, at the west end of the adit which cuts the vein nearly at right angles, the shaft marked A in the longitudinal section was intersected at a depth of ninety feet below the surface; from near the ninety feet shaft a level has been driven to the north on the strike of the vein about seventy feet marked, D, also two other levels east of it, E, F, which intersect the north crosscut D of the ground plan; a winze has been sunk below the water level sixteen feet marked H, of the longitudinal section; this disposition in the working of the mine affords many advantages in the extraction of the ore and attle and easy communication with all parts of the mine and surface, and the intersection of the shaft A produces ample ventilation. The vein intersects the greenstone at the bottom of the air shaft, and as in the case of the Lafayette has cut completely through it; increasing in power as it enters this rock, about one thousand tons of ore was in the yard at the time I visited the mine ready to pass through the reduction works. From the end of the long adit a tram road four-hundred feet in length passes to the mill on which by mule power, the ore is conveyed from the farthest part of the mine. The ground plan exhibits the crosscuts and levels and their connection with the mill.

The strike of the vein is north and south dipping east at an angle of 24 degrees, with a vein whose power at ninety feet was nearly three feet; the transverse section is shown the air shaft entering the greenstone and intersecting the vein, with the increase in power of the vein from the surface to the lowest point worked. The ores in the greenstone differ in no particular from those of the Lafayette, with the exception that none of the plumbic sulphuret was observed at this mine though the vein has much the same blue tint. The reduction works of this company were not completed in November and no opportunity was afforded to witness their process at that time: it was expected that their machinery would be capable of reducing over one hundred tons of ore per day, which from its appearance would not be a large estimate, it is probably the most powerful machinery in this country and will compare with any in Europe.

The operations of this mine are looked for with considerable interest at home and abroad, as their capacities for reduction are much more extensive than any hitherto put up in this country.

OSBORN HILL MINE.

This mine is located two miles east of Grass Valley, it has been opened on the course of the vein four-hundred and fifty feet and from sixty-five to seventy feet in depth. Vein strikes north and south dipping east at an angle of forty degrees; the transverse section shows a depth of sixty-five feet; the shaft was carried through twelve feet of alluvium, seven of clay slate, seventeen of a much broken and decomposed greenstone, and fifteen feet of compact rock of the same character; total depth including winze I is nearly seventy feet. The vein at this mine has dislocated all the rocks above it and possesses that half stratified appearance as in the Lafayette, arising from fracture by the intrusive vein. The power of the vein is about three feet at the depth of sixty-five feet. In the longitudinal section, the levels which have been driven are given to scale and their different lengths are found by reference to the sketch. This mine has been one of the most flourishing and profitable of the State and has been conducted with much prudence and economy.

WYOMING MINE.

This mine is situated on the north bank of Deer Creek, about two miles below the town of Nevada; its altitude above the Creek is two hundred and forty feet, and the higher parts of the outcrop on the line of the vein will reach nearly or quite three hundred feet above the same point. An adit was driven about two hundred feet through clay slate, which intersected the vein at this point, at an angle of about twenty-seven degrees. From this, two levels have been driven on the vein, of one hundred and twenty and fifty feet each, and a winze of twenty-five. The vein dips east with an angle of forty five degrees, having a strike north and south, with a power of three feet. Fifty feet below the upper adit, another was commenced and carried to a hundred and twenty-five feet, intending to intersect the vein at one hundred feet below the surface of the shaft F; at seventy-six feet the greenstone was met, and the adit carried fifty feet into it. At the junction of the slates and trap, the former are much changed, evidently from the effects of heat, while at the junction of the slates and vein, above this, they have again suffered from the intrusion of the latter.

On the south side of the hill the vein crops cut through the trap two hundred feet below the summit, with an increased power, leaving no room for doubt of the permanency of its character. In this mine one of the recent veins has cut through from the Bunker Hill Mine, east of this, which produced a valuable nest of ore; the dip of the principal Wyoming Vein, if it holds its present inclination, must cut the older lodes at the depth of four or five hundred feet, and its situation is such that ample drainage and ventilation can be obtained.

GOLD TUNNEL MINE.

The mine bearing this name is located half a mile west of the town of Nevada, on Deer Creek, and has been worked successfully since its discovery in 1850 or '51. It was originally a placer claim and was found while working the banks of the creek for placer gold. Soon after its discovery an engine was erected upon the ground and the vein opened; it was commenced by driving an adit level on the vein, which was subsequently abandoned and a new level commenced at the point at which the present reduction works are situated.

The length of the present level is three hundred and seventy-five feet, and has an inclination of ten degrees from the horizontal line; three winzes have been drove on the lower side of the adit [L. F. H.] which are respectively thirty, twenty and twelve feet, with a level of twenty-five feet between the winzes F. and H. On the opposite side two cements of fifty feet each, and a gallery connecting both, of one hundred and twenty-five feet, with a corresponding one connecting the winzos on the lower side. All the ore included within the dash lines has been stopped out. The vein is situated in granite, and thus far has been loose and incoherent; this is attributable to the large amount of pyrites contained in the vein, as is shown at any point where the quartz retains any solidity; the gold is in a free state in the gossan, of which there are large quantities throughout the mine; the operators on this vein have been eminently successful, and their mine bids fair to continue valuable. The strike of their vein, north ten degrees east, dipping east ten degrees south, at an angle of thirty-eight degrees. ●

ILLINOIS MINE.

The Illinois Mine is situated directly opposite the Gold Tunnel on the south bank of Deer Creek, and is a continuation of the same vein, it has all the characteristics of the former throughout. The length of their upper gallery is four hundred and fifty feet and that of the lower, two hundred and fifty; two cross-cuts have been driven which connect the galleries at C. D. each fifty feet in length.

JONES AND DAVIS MINE, HERBERTVILLE, CALAVERAS COUNTY.

The mine of this company is located on the east side of a small tributary running into Amador Creek, the latter passes through the town of Amador one mile north of this mine; the top of the whim-shaft, C, is one hundred and forty-five feet above the level of the creek, and ninety feet below the outcrop of the vein on which the shaft, C, has been sunk; at shaft 4 the vein is three hundred and fifty feet above the Amidor, and increases in altitude for half a mile, until it arrives at the height of four hundred feet above the town. The company have sunk two shafts of ninety feet on the vein, and drove two galleries, the upper one A being two hundred and eighty feet, the lower, B, one hundred and fifty feet, and are driving in the course of the dotted lines to run a third gallery at the depth of fifty feet below the point B. Figures 1, 2, 3, are stopes from which they are now obtaining their ore, being conveyed along the lower level to the whim-shaft and thence elevated to the surface; from thence it is conveyed on a tram road 600 feet to the reduction works at its terminus.

The design for future operations is to cut an adit a short distance north of the mill, and intersect the vein at a point which will give a depth of three hundred feet from its highest point to a level with the end of their present tram road, and then stope down from this point, which will not only furnish an abundance of ore, if the vein retains its present power, but materially lessen the expense of its extraction. This will be accomplished in a distance of three hundred yards, and probably less. This mine is very systematically arranged for the comfort of the miner, and obtaining all the ores easily, and reflects much credit on its projectors; the sketch of the mine, drawn to scale on the spot, will fully elucidate itself; its convenience of arrangement, considering its local position, will be found equal to all its necessary requirements.

The vein is invested in chlorite and talcose rocks, throughout its whole extent, being nearly three miles in length. On the eastern side of the vein a graphic slate occurs, having a thickness of one or two feet; outside of this a bed of chlorite, from five to ten feet, much discolored by graphite, at times perfectly black and staining the hand easily. On the west side, a greenish chlorite occurs, next the vein, highly pyritiferous and often containing considerable gold; the power of the vein at ninety feet depth is six feet, and has steadily increased from the surface down; its strike is north-west by west, with a corresponding dip east and south, of fifty-five degrees. The color of the vein is bluish white, with black seams of graphite, giving a ribband-like appearance in the mass; it is highly pyritiferous, and when properly roasted, crumbles easily; some parts of the vein contain an arsenical pyrites, which has an injurious effect in the reducing process, by preventing perfect amalgamation; this is caused by roasting the ores in contact with charcoal which should not be practised in these varieties of ores.

SPRING HILL MINE.

This mine is located on Amadore Creek, at the east end of the town and one mile north of the preceding mine. The company commenced operations on this sett in 1851, and have continued uninterrupted since that time; it is located on the same vein as the former, and crops out to the height of 530 feet on the highest point of the hill between Jones, Davis & Co.

Two inclined shafts have been sunk on the vein to about 75 feet below the bed of the creek, at which point the sett has a power of six feet; in its general character it differs in no wise from the mine one mile south, except in the disposition of investing rocks. At Spring Hill the graphic slates which form the gangue are found on the west side of the vein, in place of the east as at Davis' mine. This was evidently caused by an unequal displacement at the period of intrusion of the dike, resulting from the transverse fracture forming the cross course on which Johnson's mine is situated: the resistance being less in that direction at the time of fracture in the incumbent rocks. This cross-fracture had the effect also to throw the intrusive mass from a right line at the time it broke through, for the entire length of the dike, giving it at first view the appearance rather of two sets in place of one which they in reality are. There are many similar features attending the veins of this country, which has created no little confusion in regard to their true position; and of themselves though they may appear insignificant, yet with the miner they involve questions of high importance, and exert an influence either prejudicial or favorable upon his operations, as their position may be clearly or distinctly known.

The study of our system of metallic veins and its correct development, involves some of the most important interests of the State; a correct knowledge of their position is much desired, but as the limits of this report will not admit that examination which they require, further allusion to the subject will be omitted.

All the vein between shafts and to the point E, has been stopped out with the exception of a small body of vein to support the walls of the mine and attle F F. The mine from its proximity to the creek has considerable water but is kept free by one of Farnham's double-action pumps placed at the shaft B, while the shaft A is used for bringing the ore to the surface.

AMADORE COMPANY MINE.

This is situated on the opposite side of the Creek from the Spring Hill mine, and on the same sett. Their operations have been conducted below the bed of the creek, to the depth of nearly one hundred feet. Shaft D is the whim shaft, 97 feet, and is to the depth of 100 feet, at the bottom of which a 37 foot horse has been struck, all the ore from the lower level A C has been stoped out, the points I supporting the otile. Reference to the sketch will present its position at the date of visiting it.

The strike of the vein in both the latter, is north by west, dipping east 65 degrees.

RANCHOREE MINE.

Is located one mile north of the preceding, and on the ridge dividing the Amadore and Ranchoree Creeks; their reduction works are about half a mile west of the town of Ranchoree.

The upper portion of their vein is situated 420 feet above the creek; on the vein are three shafts of about 70 feet, and two levels of 110 and 75 feet respectively; they are now driving on the level I, to obtain drainage and easy transit for their ores to the mill; the plan of operations will be seen on the sketch marked by the dash lines. The vein at this lower level gives a good ore, and has the same investing rocks as at the upper levels. The vein strikes north 25 degrees west, dipping east, with a power of four feet. The investing rocks are talcose slates.

KEYSTONE MINE.

This mine is situated on the arroya leading into the Amadore, one mile below Jones & Davis' mine; it appears to be a parallel vein, half a mile west of the line uniting the latter and the Spring Hill mine; the ores partake of all the general characters of the other two mines, and it is situated 25 feet above the level of the creek. The sett of Jones, Davis & Co. and the Spring Hill are in the high hill east of the workings figured in the sketch for the Keystone Mine.

This vein strikes north 10 degrees west, dipping 40 degrees east, with a power of five feet; the investing rocks are the graphic slate and chlorites, as found in all the others in this neighborhood.

EUREKA MINE, SUTTER, CALAVERAS COUNTY.

This mine is located a short distance south of the town of Sutter. The company have one shaft, A, which is used for the whim by which the ore is at present taken from the mine: a cross cut, seen at D, in the ground plan, was carried east 140 feet, intersecting the level, D, and main shaft, from this the gallery, B, was carried south 135 feet, and subsequently the lower level, C, was driven each way a distance of 230 feet.

The mine is in active operation, and they are now driving an adit on the east side of the hill, which will intersect their vein at an angle of 65 degrees to its line of strike, this will be 400 feet in length, and will afford easy and rapid communication with the reduction works. At the end of the adit a tram-road is constructed 2800 feet, which connects with the mill; the gallery, B, 2, will be connected with the adit in the dotted line, F, of the ground plan.

The vein of this company is in chlorite, and has a strike north and south, dipping east 55 degrees, with a power of five feet; the vein has a ribband like appearance in masses, from small seams of graphic slate running through it. The vein contains some arsenical ores, which are highly auriferous.

From this it will be seen that there are thirty-nine mines in successful operation in this State at the present date, twenty-eight of which I have personally visited this season, and my excuse for not visiting the balance, was the lateness of the season and distances, with the time necessarily required to compile this report, being now delayed much beyond the time when it should have appeared.

* A difference of fifty feet by observations of Mr. Atwood with mercurial Barometer, taken three quarters of a mile south; difference probably in elevation of both places.

Altitudes were taken in the Counties of Butte, Sierra and upper part of Yuba with another instrument, but as it was found not to correspond with the points of departure on my return, the observations were presumed to be incorrect and therefore are not given in this table. Some of the localities in this table have been levelled and their height accurately known, and as the barometric measurements have been found to correspond, they are probably close approximations.
